FELLOW DRIVER'S
STORY HE VISITED

Day $303,720 of Greenlease Ransom
Money Disappeared.

One of the major discrepancies uncovered in the Greenlease ransom inquiry concerns the reported appearance of John Hager, Ace taxicab driver, at Joseph Costello's headquarters the day the $303,720 ransom money disappeared, the Post-Dispatch was told yesterday.

Hager and Joe Travis, another taxicab driver, have given contradictory accounts, in sworn statements, as to whether Travis picked up Hager at the Ace Cab Co., 1835 Washington avenue, headed by Costello, on Oct. 1, 1953. Travis swore he did; Hager testified he did not.

Both men have appeared before the Federal grand jury and the St. Louis Police Board and have been interviewed by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and police. Each sticks to his story.

Central Figures in Hunt.
Costello and Hager, both former convicts, have become central figures in the search for the missing ransom. The investigators consider the question of whether Hager was at Costello's office the day the money disappeared a matter of considerable importance.

Travis, who lives at 3762 Westminster place, told the Post-Dispatch yesterday: "I picked up Hager at the Ace Cab garage on Washington avenue. I didn't know him personally. 'As I started to get out of my cab, I saw Hager standing in the doorway of the garage. He said: 'Are you busy?' I said, 'No,' and he got in. I did not see Costello."

Hager, now living in Los Angeles, has said under oath that he hailed Travis's cab on Seventh street, near Walnut street. He made it clear he is sure on this point.

Another contradiction also appeared in the testimony of Hager and Travis when they appeared before the Police Board.

Travis said he finally discharged Hager as his fare about half mile east of Coral Court, St. Louis county motel where Carl Austin Hall, kidnapper of Bobby Greenlease, was staying.

On the other hand, Hager testified: "He drove me out to the Courts. We went straight out to the Courts."

"Kind of a Store."
Travis could not identify the place where he let Hager out, except that "it was kind of a store in front." However, he was positive it was not a motel.

The Police Board questioned Travis at length concerning the places he took Hager on Oct. 6, 1953.

Hall, in Hager's absence, remained at Coral Court and was not arrested until that night when he was picked up at the Town House, 5316 Pershing avenue, by Police Lt. Louis Shouder and Patrolman Elmer Dolan.

Questioning of Travis was as follows:
Q. Where did you pick up John Hager?
A. At the lot—1835 Washington.

Q. Do you know what time it was?
A. No. It was early in the afternoon?
Q. Where did you drive him to?
A. He asked me to take him to the Branscome Hotel. And I drove him out to 5300 Pershing. I drove above the Branscome Hotel to the first place I found to park.

Q. What did Hager say at the time?
A. I'll be back in 10 or 15 minutes.

Gambling Wide Open in Clubs

CAIRO, Ill., Aug. 27—Never-say-die gamblers in Alexander county are using every trick of the nightclub trade to entice customers to their plush dice tables, which they are operating in open defiance of state laws, the Post-Dispatch learned today.

Strip teasers strip to the bare essentials, floor shows go full blast until 4 and 5 o'clock in the morning, good food and strong drink are provided in abundance to attract dice shooters.

The hunt for the fast buck is being carried on from the northern outskirts of Cairo to East Cape Girardeau and McClure, 30 miles to the north. Crowds are not as plentiful as in the near, dead days of the Joppa-Paducah construction boom, but nightclub operators apparently are doing their best to latch on to whatever cash is left hereabouts.

Only in formerly wide open Cairo itself are the gambling rooms dark. Here, a new city administration which took office in May not only put the quietus on gambling, but went so far as to close the segregated vice district on Thirteenth street. Even sellers of policy tickets are arrested as they make their daily rounds.

While the Cairo gamblers have been stopped by action of law enforcement authorities, at least for the moment, those who ply their illegal trade in the smaller towns and unincorporated areas have become bolder as the months have passed without Illinois state police raiders putting in an appearance.

However, Superintendent Phil M. Brown of the state police department is aware of the resurgence of Alexander county gambling. He told a Post-Dispatch reporter today he had

U.S. TO PROPOSE THREE-WAY PLAN FOR EUROPE AND GERMAN UNITY

Bar of East Zone to West's Forces, 5-Power Mutual Security Pact, Arms Cut Included.

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (AP)—The United States has worked up a proposed package deal on German unity and European security. It covers major action proposals to be placed before Russia in the next round of East-West negotiations. If Britain, France and Germany agree, the plan is expected to be discussed privately by Assistant Secretary of State Livingston Merchant in Paris, Bonn and London next week. Merchant will fly to Paris Monday night on a consultation mission for Secretary of State Dulles.

His trip opens a period of intensive consultation among the Western allies prior to the October foreign ministers meeting at Dulles and his British and French colleagues together with Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov. They have been assigned to work on the big problems left unsolved by last month's summit conference of Big Four government heads at Geneva.

The Western powers and Germany are already agreed that their primary aim in the next Geneva meeting must be to obtain Soviet agreement to the unification of Germany under terms which will permit Germany's close association with the West according to the pattern already fixed by West Germany's membership in the Atlantic alliance.

Dulles Proposals. At the same time the Western powers have agreed that Russia may have some legitimate fears for its own security in connection with German reunification and rearmament. It is the problem of how to meet these fears which has recently received considerable study from Dulles and other American policymakers.

According to the decisions which have now been worked out, if Russia will agree to the unification of Germany on Western terms, Dulles is prepared to join in the following projects to reassure Moscow:

1. A guarantee that East German territory—given up by the Soviet Union—will not be used for military activities of the Atlantic Alliance.

2. American participation in a five-power treaty of mutual security, signed also by Russia, Britain, France and Germany. An attack by Germany on Russia, under this treaty, would bring the other powers into instant action on the side of Russia.

3. An arrangement for progressive reduction of Soviet and Western forces within the forward areas of Europe on both sides of the Iron Curtain. This would be designed to cut the arms burden, pending a global disarmament program, and also to create international confidence and reduce the possibilities of war.

Bulgaria Plan Ignored. These points represent a selection on the part of American officials from among the possible lines of action in the field of European security which were laid out at the Geneva summit conference. Not included are: Soviet Premier Bulganin's proposal for a Europe-wide security pact, which all the Western powers rejected; Bulganin's call for a provisional non-aggression treaty between the Atlantic alliance and the Communist bloc in eastern Europe; British Prime Minister Eden's suggestion for a demilitarized zone between the Communist and Western blocs in Europe.

On the other hand the points on which United States will be prepared to act in concert with Britain and France are not regarded here as American ideas in origin. On the contrary, Eden and British Foreign Minister Macmillan talked in some detail at the Geneva meeting about the possibilities of arms limitation in the European area, provided inspection and control systems could be agreed on. The idea of a big power treaty to prevent any renewal of German aggression has been a subject of official discussion for years.

Big Three to Confer. The Western powers will hold a series of policy talks following Merchant's week-long trip. These will be concluded by an Atlantic council meeting and brief discussions among Dulles, Macmillan and French Foreign Minister Pinay immediately before the Big Four foreign ministers get together at Geneva Oct. 27.

Meanwhile, the Westerners are expected to do some planning when they are all in New York in late September for a meeting of the United Nations General Assembly.

One of the tasks assigned to Merchant by Dulles next week is to work out arrangements for these consultations and also discuss with the British, French and Germans the degree of consultations among the other NATO allies with the extent to which they may be brought into the detailed planning. Countries like Canada and Belgium have expressed a determined interest in being consulted on such matters when they were still in the planning stage.

narrow the gap" of East-West differences over Germany when they meet in Geneva in October. Eden said there has been a wide range of praise and criticism of the Geneva summit talks but that he saw no reason for an extreme view either way.

In a speech to Conservative political workers, the Prime Minister said: "Of course there are difficulties enough and to spare. Geneva has not solved them and was not intended to solve them, but it has made their discussion possible."

On Germany, our policies are, we know, widely opposed, and Her Majesty's government is unshaken in its opinion that there cannot be security in Europe while Germany is divided. We think it dangerous to ignore this powerful political reality 10 years after the end of the war.

"The Soviet government take a different view. All this can be argued out."

At the Geneva conference, Russia called for a European security pact before taking action on German unification. The Western powers saw the Soviet move as an effort to continue the division of Germany and stood firm on their demand for immediate free elections to unify the country.

Eden said, "If both sides go to Geneva determined to try for a settlement—and that is certainly our intention—then I am sure they can narrow the gap. This is more than seemed in any way possible a year ago."

"In this and every other way you know that we will continue our steady work for peace."

Eden declared Britain was enjoying the highest standard of living it had ever known. But he warned that in international trade "we are not in fact paying our way."

He said Britain, with its booming home market, was buying more abroad than it was selling.

FLORENCE, Ore., Aug. 27 (AP)—Sid Nicholson searched off and on for three years for cash believed to have belonged to a man whose estate he was handling, but finally gave up and yesterday started to burn odds and ends that were left.

Just as he was about to toss a battered suitcase on the bonfire in his backyard, he noticed it had a false bottom. There he found $10,500 in $100 bills. Two members of the family of Frank L. Kingston, whose estate it was, will get the cash, Nicholson said. One is a daughter, Mrs. Helen Johns of Kokomo, Ind., and the other is a son, Charles Kingston of Halset, Mich.

STASSEN CONFERS WITH SOBOLEV ON U.N. ARMS TALKS

'Complete Harmony' Reported—Optimism About Conference Opening Tomorrow.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Aug. 27 (UP)—Harold E. Stassen, President Eisenhower's special adviser on disarmament, conferred today with Soviet Ambassador Arkady A. Sobolev in preparation for Monday's United Nations disarmament conference.

Delegates of the United States, Britain, France and Canada also met at the headquarters of the American U.N. delegation for nearly two hours. A United States delegation spokesman said "There was a completely harmonious discussion" of all facets of the disarmament problem.

Sobolev called on Stassen at noon in his Waldorf-Astoria hotel suite for a private conference. Sobolev will be chairman of the first session of the U.N. Disarmament subcommittee which is meeting on the call of the Big Four chiefs of state.

Stassen's talks with Sobolev were believed to have dealt with procedural arrangements for the Monday conference.

Air of Optimism. There is an air of optimism about the conference. United States experts feel something may be accomplished because Russia has given indications that it wants to give up the race to rearm.

In addition, the Western powers are fundamentally in agreement on the approach they should take with Russia. The United States has prepared a detailed arms plan based on President Eisenhower's Geneva conference proposal that aerial survey be used to inspect military installations.

Mr. Eisenhower has since announced that Stassen will present at the U.N. meeting "new ideas of a more specific type" than those expressed at Geneva. Stassen has said that the United States will not enter the subcommittee meetings with an inflexible, fixed policy.

Eleven thousand Scouts gathered in front of the flag plaza to hear a speech by Maj. Gen. D. C. Spry, director of the Scouts International Bureau, and watch aerial salutes.

The South linked arms and sang "Auld Lang Syne" after repeating the Scout Oath in their own languages. The Scouts will gather early tomorrow for their last outdoor religious services and then break camp and start home.

WIDESPREAD SUBVERSION, ECONOMIC DISASTERS REPORTED IN RED CHINA

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch
NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Widespread uprisings by people on the China mainland and continuing economic disasters besetting the Communist regime were reported today by Nationalist Chinese sources in this country.

Flood and famine conditions, it was said, are almost unprecedented. The 1954 floods, worst on the mainland in 100 years, hit 11 provinces, displaced 10,000,000 persons and inundated more than 40,000 square miles of crop land, it was said.

This year the flood situation has been almost as bad with the spring-through-fall season of typhoons and rampaging rivers not yet over. Flood and famine conditions in the Yangtze valley were reported just as bad this year as last.

The Reds have openly admitted that there are 200,000,000 persons receiving food relief. Despite a serious food shortage caused by the floods and an abnormally cold 1954-55 winter, it was reported, food exports from the mainland to Russia, eastern Europe satellite nations, India and Ceylon go on.

Wholesale requisitions of grain from farmers has discouraged production, it was said, with the result that the Communists have been urging the people to cut down on food consumption and, in some cases, practice birth control to cut down on the number of mouths to feed.

As for subversion by the people against their Red leaders, it was reported that the Peiping Minister of Justice has told the National People's Congress that in the 16 months prior to last May there were 364,000 cases of "counter-revolutionary" activity and economic sabotage tried in the "people's courts." "Secret agents" from Formosa and Western nations, including the United States, have been accused of fomenting unrest on the mainland, the sources here said.

Information received here was that among charges placed by the Reds against those involved in uprisings are that they are "monarchists" and "members of old secret societies" and thus enemies of the people. Actually, it was said, they are mostly farmers, soldiers and even disillusioned Communists.

WIDESPREAD SUBVERSION, ECONOMIC DISASTERS REPORTED IN RED CHINA

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch
NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Widespread uprisings by people on the China mainland and continuing economic disasters besetting the Communist regime were reported today by Nationalist Chinese sources in this country.

Flood and famine conditions, it was said, are almost unprecedented. The 1954 floods, worst on the mainland in 100 years, hit 11 provinces, displaced 10,000,000 persons and inundated more than 40,000 square miles of crop land, it was said.

This year the flood situation has been almost as bad with the spring-through-fall season of typhoons and rampaging rivers not yet over. Flood and famine conditions in the Yangtze valley were reported just as bad this year as last.

The Reds have openly admitted that there are 200,000,000 persons receiving food relief. Despite a serious food shortage caused by the floods and an abnormally cold 1954-55 winter, it was reported, food exports from the mainland to Russia, eastern Europe satellite nations, India and Ceylon go on.

Wholesale requisitions of grain from farmers has discouraged production, it was said, with the result that the Communists have been urging the people to cut down on food consumption and, in some cases, practice birth control to cut down on the number of mouths to feed.

As for subversion by the people against their Red leaders, it was reported that the Peiping Minister of Justice has told the National People's Congress that in the 16 months prior to last May there were 364,000 cases of "counter-revolutionary" activity and economic sabotage tried in the "people's courts." "Secret agents" from Formosa and Western nations, including the United States, have been accused of fomenting unrest on the mainland, the sources here said.

REBELLING SUDAN SOLDIERS, FACING DEFEAT, GIVE UP

Respond to Ultimatum of Governor-General—Ask 24 Hours to Notify Outposts.

KHARTOUM, Sudan, Aug. 27 (AP)—In the face of government forces advancing to wipe them out, army mutineers in the far Upper Nile village of Torit agreed late today to surrender. The south Sudan soldiers had been in rebellion for more than a week against being placed under command of officers from the north Sudan.

The rebels let a noon-time ultimatum deadline pass but seven hours later, when the government forces were on the move, they announced readiness to give up.

The rebels in Torit radioed their decision in response to an ultimatum last night from Gov.-Gen. Sir Alexander Knox Helm. Helm notified the London and Cairo governments of the surrender by radio. He reported the Torit rebels, in giving up, asked for 24 hours more to enable them to gather up other mutineers from outlying posts.

Their message said additional time would "avoid further bloodshed" since scattered outposts in the area of the Nile headwaters were unaware of Helm's Friday night ultimatum. Torit is 84 miles southeast of Juba, capital of Equatoria province.

The Sudan government of Prime Minister Ismail al Azhari was expected to announce shortly a suspension of military action against the mutineers.

The Governor-General told the rebels yesterday that unless they surrendered by noon today they would have to take the full consequences of their refusal.

The mutineers had demanded withdrawal of northern troops rushed to Juba to put down the rebellion. Failing this, they said, they would be prepared to surrender only to British troops.

The Governor-General rejected both demands.

New officers recently had been sent to the south from the northern Sudan—the part bordering on Egypt—to replace withdrawing British officers.

Britain and Egypt are scheduled to withdraw within the next three months after 56 years of rule over the million-square-mile Sudan and let the 9,000,000 people vote on whether they want independence or union with Egypt.

BEY OF TUNIS SIGNS AGREEMENT FOR MORE HOME RULE

TUNIS, Aug. 27 (AP)—The Bey of Tunis today signed an agreement granting his homeland greater autonomy under French control. The quiet ceremony was in marked contrast to the tense atmosphere elsewhere in French North Africa.

The Bey's signature was the last step in putting into effect changes proposed by former French Premier Mendes-France when Tunisia was racked by disorders similar to recent outbreaks in Algeria and Morocco.

The French government already has ratified the agreement which brought the violence almost to a halt. They generally provide Tunisians with the power to control most internal functions within the protectorate.

The Bey signed in the presence of French resident General Boyer de Latour and Tunisian Premier Tahar Ben Ammar, a Nationalist moderate who was one of the prime movers of the new agreements. The ceremony took place in the Bey's palace.

RACING CAR HITS CROWD, ONE KILLED, AT LEAST 9 HURT

CARP, Ont., Aug. 27 (UP)—One person was killed and at least nine injured today when the steering wheel of a stock racing car locked and the car plunged into a group of spectators at the Carp airport.

Officials of the Almonte (Ont.) hospital said seven persons were admitted for treatment. An eighth person brought to the hospital was dead on arrival.

Two others were admitted to the Ottawa Civic hospital for treatment.

The races at the rural track continued after the accident.

TAX RATES TOO HIGH IN 14 COUNTY TOWNS, COUNCIL COMMITTEE SAYS

Figures Said to Be 3 to 12 Cents Beyond Needs — Other Municipalities Are in Line.

Fourteen St. Louis county municipalities apparently have set their tax rates to yield more revenue than they are entitled to in the revisions accompanying higher real estate assessments, the Post-Dispatch learned yesterday.

State law requires that a taxing agency which increases assessments by 10 per cent or more, in compliance with a recent order from the Missouri Tax Commission, should make a commensurate reduction in the tax rate so that no revenue windfall results.

Figures prepared for a "watchdog" committee set up by the County Council indicate that a number of municipalities have set rates that are from 3 to 12 cents higher than needed to produce the same amount of revenue derived before the assessed valuation of city lots was increased by 60 per cent.

The community with the most excessive rate is Vinita Terrace, according to the figures presented to the committee. It set its rate at 40 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, when a 28-cent rate apparently would suffice to bring in the revenue obtained heretofore.

Others Too High.

Other municipalities with indicated tax excesses were: Crystal Lake Park, with a rate of 45 cents, instead of 35; Overland, 60 cents instead of 53; Berkeley, $1.13 instead of $1.07; Glendale, 65 cents instead of 59; Kinloch, 60 cents instead of 54; Meadowbrook Downs, 40 cents instead of 35; Cool Valley, 26 cents instead of 22; St. Ann, 45 cents instead of 42; Sycamore, 55 cents instead of 52; Town and County, 20 cents instead of 17; Valley Park, $1.30 instead of $1.27, and Wilbur Park, 20 cents instead of 17.

The figures indicated that 16 municipalities have set their rates 1 or 2 cents too high, but County Clerk Leo E. Sievers has expressed the opinion that such a margin is acceptable in view of the fact that delinquencies in tax collections might curtail the amount of revenue actually obtained.

Eighteen county municipalities have certified new tax rates that apparently will produce less revenue than obtained in the past, and 16 have set rates that will produce slightly more revenue than heretofore, but not enough to permit a rate reduction of as much as 1 cent.

New Rate Applied.

The tax rate for 1955 was applied to the 1954 assessed valuation in each community to determine the revenue that would result; then the new rate was applied to a valuation for 1955 estimated at the 1954 valuation plus a 60 per cent increase in the valuation of real estate in the municipality.

The figures obtained do not reflect the growth that most municipalities in the county experience from year to year, and that will produce a larger total assessed valuation than the 1955 estimate employed in this formula. On the other hand, the figures make no allowance for delinquencies or reductions in assessments that may result from correction of arbitrary values placed on personal property.

The council's "watchdog" committee has called the indicated rate excesses to the attention of municipalities to give them an opportunity to review and revise the rates. The council, however, has no authority to change tax rates set by municipalities or any other districts except sewer districts.

Family Rides in Covered Wagon From Connecticut to Godfrey, Ill.

Lame Mule Prevents Completion of Journey Into Missouri — 'Pioneers' Now Await Auto.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest T. Elfgren and their six children relaxed at a Godfrey (Ill.) farm yesterday after a 68-day trip in covered wagon from their home in East Killingly, Conn. The trip caused considerable head scratching among toll bridge collectors.

The Elfgrens had intended to continue into Missouri pioneer style, but Tuesday—1400 miles from East Killingly—they encountered the covered wagon equivalent of engine trouble. One of their three mules became lame.

So they set up camp at the Raymond Joel farm to await arrival of an automobile to complete their trip.

Elfgren said he succumbed to a yearning to "go West" this year and built the covered wagon, modeling it after the old Conestoga wagons used by the pioneers.

"I decided I would like to relocate on a farm either in Missouri or Nebraska," said Elfgren, who has lived in Connecticut since his birth. He raises chickens, manufactures airplane parts, and builds animal cages for laboratories. "I will be closer to the animal cage market in the Midwest and then I'd like to try my hand at beef cattle," he explained.

Elfgren said he decided to make the trip by wagon, partly as a lark, partly because it would give his family a chance to see the country, and mostly because it would provide him with an opportunity to make a close study of Midwestern farms. "Nothing much happened along the way," he recalled. "Oh, Donna, our 2-year-old, fell off the wagon somewhere in Indiana, but she wasn't hurt seriously. We had some trouble finding ponds and streams with good water and sometimes had a lot of curious visitors."

"One evening when we stopped in Pennsylvania someplace we had more than 2000 visitors. It was in Indiana that people began autographing the canvas top of our wagon. The wagon is covered with names now."

Some of the family slept in the wagon at night; a tent was pitched for the others. It cost them $50 to $60 a week for living expenses. Hay and grain were bought along the way for the animals. Mrs. Elfgren cooked on a two-burner kerosene stove.

Elfgren hopes to find a place to store the wagon and pasture the mules after a relative arrives from Connecticut with the family automobile.

One thing still bothers him. "I think they overcharged us by 15 cents at the Rip Van Winkle Bridge across the Hudson river," he said.

TUCKER FLYING TO REICH TO STUDY REBUILT CITIES

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker left by plane at 6:05 o'clock last night from Lambert-St. Louis Field for a four-week tour of West Germany, during which he will study rebuilding done in 10 war-damaged cities as it applies to slum clearance and redevelopment programs here.

Mayor Tucker is one of seven municipal officials from the United States who have been invited to visit West Germany as guests of the German government. On the trip, he will visit the planetarium manufacturing plant of the Carl Zeiss Co. at Oberkochen. Funds were authorized in last May's bond issue for municipal improvements for construction of a planetarium here.

The Mayor said he will spend an additional three or four days in Rome, as a delegate from the American Municipal Association to the International Congress of Local Authorities.

BURGLAR REVERSES USUAL ROUTINE, SURPRISES MAN

In contrast to the way these things usually go, a man who returned yesterday to his home where a burglar was in progress didn't surprise the burglar. Instead, the burglar surprised him, and left him tied up in a closet.

William H. Fryer walked into his house at 1343 Kingsland avenue, Pagedale, the burglar, who had been busy ransacking the place, stepped out of the kitchen when he heard footsteps and confronted Fryer with a butcher knife.

The man, a Negro, bound Fryer's hands with a scarf belonging to Mrs. Fryer, who was out at the time. Then he shoved Fryer into a closet, but at his victim's anxious request, did not lock it. The burglar then walked out with $13, a wristwatch and a radio. Fryer managed to walk to a neighbor's house where his hands were freed.

ST. LOUIS PILOTS TELL OF 'P.O.W.' WAR GAME ROLES

Kirkwood Major Walks Five Miles Without Shoes in 100-Degree Heat.

Three St. Louis Marine pilots and a ground officer returned home yesterday from California with tales of their experiences in a rigorous eight-hour exercise in which they volunteered for roles as prisoners of war.

They were among the 140 members or attached personnel of VMF-221, a reserve jet fighter squadron stationed at Lambert-St. Louis Field, who completed two weeks summer training at the El Toro, Calif., Marine Air Base.

Thirty-two volunteers, including the four from this area, took part in the unusual exercise, which followed closely the signing by President Eisenhower of the new code of conduct for prisoners of war. The program was designed to acquaint reservists with the tactics of interrogation and abuse to which prisoners of the Communist Chinese and North Koreans were subjected.

Rough Treatment.

Maj. Herbert Groff, 207 Avery drive, Kirkwood, received the roughest treatment of the four from this area.

He and the 31 other volunteers disembarked from a bus on a coastal highway within the Camp Pendleton reservation at noon Aug. 19. Each man had a canteen of water and a compass. Some wore dungarees, others flying suits. Each was presumed to have been shot down on a fighter mission.

With a companion he had met that day, Groff set out for "friendly lines" on the opposite side of a mountainous ridge.

The safety area was seven miles from the road "as the crow flies," Groff explained, but was actually twice that distance, due to the terrain, for a man on foot.

Between the men trying to reach safety and their sanctuary was a battalion of regular Marines whose job was to capture as many of the 32 volunteers as possible.

Run Down and Caught.

Groff crossed the ridge successfully, becoming separated from his companion, then was spotted through binoculars by the "aggressors." He was run down and captured and his hands were tied by a husky Marine enlisted man, who knelt on Groff's back with both knees. His shoes were removed.

"That boy seemed to get a bit of satisfaction kneeling on an officer's back," Maj. Groff remarked to a Post-Dispatch reporter.

The four captors emptied the contents of Groff's canteen over his head and tied him to a barbed wire fence before setting out to capture another of the volunteers they had spotted.

In their absence, Groff used his teeth to untie the rope holding him to the fence, then slipped his bound arms beneath his body until he could untie the ropes binding his hands by chewing at the knots with his teeth.

Maj. Groff was free, but his captors had his shoes. He walked five miles on rocks and sand in near 100-degree heat in his stocking feet.

When he reached the safety area his feet were blistered and he was unable to stand comfortably for two days. In civilian life Maj. Groff is a member of Troop C, Missouri State Highway Patrol.

Maj. A. W. Lemmons, Sappington road and Oleander drive, Sappington, had as his companion an "enemy agent," who was planted in the volunteer group.

The "agent" soon left O'Brien and was picked up by an aggressor patrol by prearrangement. Later he was marched blindfolded into a prisoner stockade, where he tried, without success, to persuade the men held there without food or water to "tell 'em what they want and get it over with."

Lemmons hid for three hours from members of an aggressor patrol, who scanned the terrain with binoculars within 150 yards of his hiding place.

"After drinking all my water, I took a chance, slid about 30 yards on my stomach and got away," Lemmons reported. He reached the safety area after the eight-hour time limit.

Marine Capt. Earl Traut, 9067 Pallardy lane, Elmdale, attached to the Naval Air Station here, was captured and questioned in the field, but escaped before his captors reached the stockade. He said he resisted attempts to obtain information from him, but was not subjected to any violent treatment.

Capt. William O'Brien, of Carbondale, former football coach at Southern Illinois University, escaped capture. O'Brien, a ground officer, described the experience as "a trying ordeal, very realistic."

He said one volunteer suffered heat prostration and was picked up by helicopter. O'Brien has taken leave of his coaching post to complete work on a doctor's degree at Indiana University.

Back From War Exercises

Construction of a 90-foot-high water tank was started by McDonnell Aircraft Corp. at its Lambert-St. Louis Field plant and then abandoned when objections were raised that it would be a flying hazard, the Post-Dispatch learned yesterday.

McDonnell had obtained permission of the Civil Aeronautics Administration to erect the tank on a steel framework on Ban-shee road in the rear of its plant.

While the tank would not have been in line with any of the runways or approach zones at the airport, it would have extended above the roofline of the plant. City officials and Naval officers objected that it would be a threat to the safety of low flying planes.

Because of McDonnell's extensive military contracts, the controversy was referred to the Department of Defense at Washington where, after a lengthy series of conferences, McDonnell representatives agreed to abandon the project despite the CAA approval. The supports for the tank came down several months ago.

KARSTEN BLAMES RED TAPE IN DEATH OF 7 PEACH TREES

Special to the Post-Dispatch. WASHINGTON, Aug. 27—Confronted with the case of seven dying peach trees, the Department of Agriculture said today it was moving fast. But, in the opinion of Representative Frank M. Karsten (Dem.), St. Louis, not fast enough.

The trees belonged to one of Karsten's constituents in St. Louis, a disabled veteran and "city farmer." The trees were sick and dying. Haste was indicated.

Karsten asked the Agriculture Department for a farmers' bulletin, but it took more than a month for the bulletin to reach the veteran. Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz told Karsten the department recognized "the need for faster service."

The bulletin arrived too late. In a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson, Karsten said: "The trees are so far gone now that about all we can hope for is that you will start praying for them, for they are going to require a much stronger medicine than a remedy prescribed in the farmers' bulletin."

MRS. LUCE HAS 'BLACKBOARD JUNGLE' DROPPED IN VENICE

VENICE, Italy, Aug. 27 (AP)—The official publication of the Venice film festival said today that "The Blackboard Jungle" had been withdrawn as a United States entry at the request of Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce.

Mrs. Luce, here as official representative of the United States, could not be reached immediately for comment.

A member of the United States delegation last night told a reporter the change was made because the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film gave "an unflattering and unrealistic view of American school life."

Dore Schary, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production chief, said in Hollywood last night he was "very upset" by the withdrawal.

"I feel the Johnston office (the Motion Picture Producers Association) should file a protest," Schary said. He said "Blackboard Jungle" was nominated by the Johnston office as one of the United States entries in the festival.

CHARTER GIVEN TO CITY-COUNTY MERGER GROUP

Citizens' Committee Authorized to Furnish Leadership in Consolidation Move.

The Citizens Committee for City-County Co-Ordination has received a certificate of incorporation from the State of Missouri, it was announced yesterday.

Purpose of the organization, as set forth in its charter, is "to furnish leadership, guidance and continuity to the orderly development of the various steps required for formulation and presentation to the voters of an acceptable plan of co-ordination or consolidation of the county and the city of St. Louis."

The new corporation will continue gathering petitions for appointment of a board of freeholders to devise a plan for presentation to the voters.

As a corollary to that step, it also plans to conduct and solicit funds for an "intensive educational program to inform the people of the metropolitan St. Louis area of the nature and extent of their common problems and the constitutional provisions for the solution of them."

A research program will be undertaken with a view to providing the board of freeholders with information needed in its job, but the committee will not attempt to foster or support any particular solution, it was announced.

The provision of the Missouri Constitution under which a board of freeholders would be appointed permits four solutions: The city to take over the county, the county to reabsorb the city, the city to annex certain portions of the county, or creation of a metropolitan district for the functional administration of certain services common to both areas.

St. Louis and Washington universities have applied for grants from a foundation to finance a joint study of the city-county problem and its solution. The help of the universities, if and when available, has been welcomed by the committee.

Incorporators were announced as A. J. Cervantes, St. Louis alderman; H. Jackson Daniel, St. Louis county lawyer, and James E. Darr, executive secretary of the committee. Cervantes and Daniel have been serving as co-chairmen. The 77 members of the committee are listed as directors of the corporation.

SENATOR JACKSON TELLS OF GAP IN U.S. RADAR LINE

LAKE STEVENS, Wash., Aug. 27 (AP)—A critical hole has been found in the nation's outer radar warning line between Greenland and Alaska and the Defense Department is taking rapid steps to plug it, Senator Henry M. Jackson (Dem.) Washington, said today.

Jackson, speaking at a big rally of western Washington Democrats, said the gap in the Distant Early Warning line is serious enough to place mid-continental United States in jeopardy should an enemy attack us.

The Senator, member of a three-man Senate committee which authorizes military construction, has just returned from a flight over the warning network in the far north. He did not specify where the gap had been found or how soon it would be closed.

GAMBLING WIDE

received complaints about gambling law violations and had forwarded the information to Sheriff Leslie V. Chrestman.

"I offered him the services of local state police commanders in making raids," Brown said. "We are ready to send investigators into the county to obtain information about violations."

Admits Possibility of Leaks.

Informed of "talk" in Alexander county that information about previous appearances of state police officers had been "leaked" in advance, Brown acknowledged this might have been so.

"I don't know whether there were 'leaks' or lucky guesses on the part of the dice game operators," he said, "but in some cases our investigators were unable to find dice games when we had information they had been operating. The investigators themselves may have been detected."

When a Post-Dispatch reporter visited El Patio nightclub this week he found that the crowd was not large but the activity was somewhat frenzied.

The El Patio, a garish club at the junction of State Route 3 and U.S. Route 51 just north of Cairo, had all the trimmings—comedians telling off color jokes, wriggling strip teasers, gambling on the bar, and a dice game in the back room.

Dice Table Visible.

There was no sign "Casino" hung over the gaming room, as was the case in the wide-open days of the notorious Green Administration, but the dice table was visible to anyone walking from the nightclub section to the men's room. Stickmen glanced up hopefully as customers passed back and forth. There were not many players.

Every means was being used to separate customers from bankrolls. Strippers doubled as "B" girls between floor shows, urging customers to buy them highballs at 85 cents a drink. Whenever the bartender had a free moment he supervised a game at the bar in which customers could bet on the turn of an electrically-operated wheel.

Other nightclubs were going full blast, too. While all did not have dice games this particular night, several did. None were operated quite so openly as the game at El Patio.

Down Route 51 from El Patio the operators of Beck's Club Charming were attracting customers with a floor show which included a stripper. A dice game operated from time to time at this club has been raided in the past.

'Quality Row.'

There was some activity on Alexander county's "Quality Row," a group of three better class nightclubs between the Cape Girardeau bridge and Route 3. Dice games were in evidence at two of them—the Purple Crackle and the ultramodern Thunderbird. The crowd was extremely small at the Colony Club, largest and best known of the clubs, and no game was in progress.

Farther north on Route 3, at McClure, the cheaper clubs were quiet this night, although games are reported to be operating there whenever the customers show up. The most pretentious of the clubs in this district—Club Villa—burned to the ground recently.

A nightclub employee told the Post-Dispatch business had been so bad in the August "dog days" that the operators were looking forward to reopening of school at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau. Gamblers are not adverse to increasing the high cost of getting a college education.

One gambler expressed hope that the Illinois state administration at Springfield would "ignore" the Alexander county clubs in the more promising fall months to come.

A club, which has a mailing list of almost 1000 regular customers in the area bounded roughly by Sikeston, Cape Girardeau, St. Louis, Carbondale and Paducah, was preparing to send out circulars advertising the booking of big-name bands in the coming season.

Madison County Checking Those With Gambling Stamps.

Sheriff Kenneth T. Ogle of Madison county yesterday announced his office was investigating names and addresses of Madison county residents to whom wagering tax stamps were issued by the Internal Revenue Service at Springfield, Ill.

"I think the situation can and will be handled locally," he said, referring to a statement by Superintendent Phil M. Brown of the Illinois State Police that state authorities might move into Madison county if local officials permitted gamblers to operate.

"It's in the process of investigation," he added, "Other than that I have nothing to say."

Forty-eight Madison county clubs and fraternal and patriotic organizations have purchased gambling device tax stamps in the fiscal year beginning July 1. Thirteen Madison county residents have bought wagering stamps.

HAGER DISPUTES
STORY HE VISITED
COSTELLO OFFICE

minutes. So I waited for him. Q. Do you know where he went?

A. No.

Tells of Shopping Tour.

Hager returned after about 15 minutes and asked to be taken to Boyd's store downtown. Travis testified. He said they stopped en route at a store at Grand boulevard and Olive street, where Hager bought a pair of shoes.

Travis said he waited for about half an hour while Hager bought a hat and a suit in Boyd's. Q. Where did you drive him then?

A. I looked at my watch and I drove him to the Lincoln Hotel, 2226 Olive street.

Q. About what time was that?

A. About 10 minutes after 4. The witness then told of taking Hager out to a spot east of Chippewa, where he discharged his passenger. He said Hager gave him a $20 bill, telling him "to keep the change." The total fare was about $15.

Hager's Version.

Hager, in his sworn version, said he hailed a Laclede Cab near Hampton avenue and Chippewa street the afternoon of Oct. 6 and asked to be taken downtown.

"I told the cab driver to let me off at a tavern south of Market on Seventh," he said. "I got the cab at 1 or 1:30, and this was about 20 minutes later. I went into the tavern and paid the driver off."

Q. Where is the tavern located?

A. On the east side of Seventh, a couple of blocks south of Market — on the southeast corner.

Q. How long did you stay?

A. Two or three minutes.

(Hager said he bought two cigars in the tavern.)

"I came outside and I didn't know what to do and I was walking north on Seventh street, so I hailed another cab—an Ace cab driven by Joe Travis," Hager testified.

He then told of having Travis take him to the Branscome Apartment Hotel, where he was informed that the accommodations he sought were not available but he was advised to try at nearby Town House.

Rented Apartment for Hall.

After renting an apartment for Hall, Hager said, he went outside and hailed a cab, which again turned out to be the one driven by Travis.

His account of going downtown to Boyd's, stopping on the way to buy shoes, and then dropping by the Lincoln Hotel to change clothes corresponded generally with statements given by Travis.

Costello gave a somewhat different version yesterday than Stanley Kaye, New York musician, concerning a dinner engagement at Costello's home, 2626 Gurney court, the night the ransom money disappeared.

The account by Costello included the first public description of his activity that night. He said he was detained at the taxicab firm's garage, at Nineteenth street and Washington, and could not get home in time to keep the dinner engagement with Kaye.

Due Out on 7 p.m. Plane.

"Kaye was due out of St. Louis by plane at 7 p.m.," Costello told the Post-Dispatch. "If he were going out at 9 p.m., I could have made it."

Kaye recalled he took a 9 or 10 o'clock plane. As disclosed by the Post-Dispatch, the musician had dinner with Mrs. Costello and she then took him to the airport after Costello telephoned, saying he was unavoidably detained.

"I got busy and just couldn't be there," Costello said, telling of his failure to appear for the dinner engagement. "I called from the garage and told Kaye I was busy. The FBI knows I was at the garage."

Any knowledge the FBI has of Costello's presence at the taxicab garage comes from independent sources, since he has refused point-blank to discuss with agents his activities the night the ransom was taken.

Two Ace taxicab drivers and their wives appeared at the FBI office here during the investigation and volunteered the information that Costello was with them the evening of Oct. 6.

However, the federal agents, looking into these statements, quickly established they were false. The four persons who gave this information then backed down on their story.

OBSTACLES ARISE TO U.S. PLAN FOR PALESTINE PACT

Mufti announced in Jerusalem the Arab nations will hold a high level conference in Cairo Sept. 3 to discuss the Dulles peace plan.

An official statement said the Premier reported consultations already had started among Arab diplomats in Amman, capital of Jordan.

The Premier met young King Hussein to talk over the Dulles program during the day. He declared the Dulles text is being "very carefully" studied in Amman.

George, who was consulted by Dulles in advance, said today the situation in the Middle-East has become "considerably more acute" recently. He said the State Department was "disturbed" by reports that Russia is furnishing heavy artillery to Arab nations as well as bartering steel to Egypt for cotton.

"Those are troublesome developments," he said. "If it is true that Russia is furnishing heavy arms to the Arabs, that may start real trouble. I want to do everything I can in this situation, but before I commit myself I want to see more clearly the extent of our participation and others' participation."

Arab nations delayed official comment, in order to study the plan Dulles outlined with the approval of President Eisenhower.

But at Damascus, Syria, a Foreign Ministry source said Syria and other Arab states would reject the Dulles offer. He said the offer conflicts with resolutions adopted by the Arab League for solving the Arab problem. These call not only for compensating Arab refugees, but for sending them back to their homes in what is now Israeli territory.

The Arab League resolutions also call for the internationalization of Jerusalem and protection of Arab interests in a settlement of the Palestine problem.

At Beirut, Lebanon, Information Minister Mohiddin Nussli urged Arab governments to meet immediately to study the "concrete proposals" made by Dulles. He said the meeting should decide whether to reject the proposals or start negotiations with the United States.

Also at Beirut, Dr. Izzat Tannous, a leader of Arab refugees driven from Palestine in 1948, accused Dulles of "offering us 30 pieces of silver to sell Palestine to the Jews" to "curry favor with the Zionist vote in America for the 1956 presidential election."

Tannous, who heads the organization representing 900,000 Palestine Arabs who fled Israel during the 1948 war, expressed "extreme disappointment" over what he called the United States abandonment of U.N. resolutions calling for repatriation of refugees, internationalization of Jerusalem and partitioning Palestine.

Israeli leaders, who received the news on the Jewish sabbath, thus far have been silent on the proposal.

The British Government swung quickly behind Dulles' plan. An official statement termed it "an important contribution toward the solution of a most critical, outstanding problem in the Middle East."

The statement noted that on April 4 Parliament had been told Britain is willing to guarantee by treaty any territorial settlement reached by the Arabs and the Jews.

Britain's Big Oil Stake.

Britain has deep concern for conditions in the Middle East, an oil-rich area where the British have a big strategic and economic stake.

Dulles said that United States participation in a border guarantee would be by treaty requiring Senate confirmation. In any such move the Secretary of State would need the support of Senator George and other Democrats to win the required approval of two-thirds of those voting.

George said British support of the proposal was expected. He said thus far he had received no indication France, Italy or any other western European country would participate.

"I am afraid we won't get much help when it comes down to actual participation," he said. "There may be a great deal of money needed to take care of the Arab refugees and to provide economic aid."

George said that as he understands it, the proposed international loan for compensation to Arab refugees would be handled through the International Bank. He said he does not know whether Congress would be asked to provide additional money for the bank.

Dulles gave no cost estimates in his speech but State Department officials said the American share might run as high as $300,000,000.

George said it was his understanding that if the Dulles plan were accepted the United Nations would be asked to take the lead in establishing new Israeli-Arab borders and U.N.

meetings would be invited to join in guaranteeing the new boundaries.

He said Russia's actions in the area were raising economic as well as military questions. He said he was told the Egyptian-Soviet agreement involved exchange of cotton for 60,000,000 tons of Russian steel.

Egypt last week signed a three-year trade agreement with Communist China providing for an exchange of $50,000,000 worth of goods between the two countries in the first year.

Egypt Charges Israeli Patrol Fired on Arab Workers.

GAZA, Egypt, Aug. 27 (AP)—An Egyptian military spokesman charged today an Israeli patrol crossed the demarcation line near Gaza last night and opened fire on Arab workers unloading fertilizers. No casualties were reported.

The spokesman said Egypt had complained to the United Nations Mixed Armistice Commission. This is the fourth incident in two days reported by the Egyptians along the troubled Gaza frontier.

AEC TO DROP USE CHARGES TO ENCOURAGE RESEARCH

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (UP)—Chairman Lewis L. Strauss announced today that hereafter the Atomic Energy Commission will waive use charges for special nuclear materials and heavy water to encourage expanded research among non-profit educational and medical institutions.

In return, the recipients must reserve to the Government the right to decide patent rights on new discoveries as well as reactor improvements. This will allow the commission to make the findings available to other institutions. The program will not apply to commercial or industrial organizations.

Strauss also said the commission will provide funds for the fabrication of fuel elements, preparation of fuel after use, and provide neutron sources when required in the operation of a reactor.

MUSEUM AUDITORIUM PLAN CHANGED FOR TV

New Hall Will Have Areas for Equipment, Ramp to Move Art Works.

The auditorium proposed for the City Art Museum has been redesigned for presentation of television programs, it was announced yesterday.

Museum Director Charles Nagel said the new design provides work areas off the auditorium stage to house mobile television equipment, and a ramp for transporting art works from the main floor of the museum to the auditorium.

The museum hopes not only to televise programs in the auditorium but to present telecasts from the museum proper.

"Television, particularly in the realm of color, could profoundly affect our accomplishment," Nagel stated. "It would bring what we have and what we do at the museum to a vastly larger audience, including shut-ins. We believe television programs would stimulate larger attendance."

The $110,639,000 bond issue program approved by the voters in May allocated $1,000,000 to the art museum—$950,000 for an air-conditioned auditorium and $50,000 for a freight elevator.

The auditorium, with a seating capacity of approximately 500, will be erected on a tract south of the museum's west wing. The architectural firm of Murphy & Murphy revised its plans for the building to make provision for television facilities.

The new design is to be presented to the museum board of control for approval in October. Construction, however, will be deferred until the citizens' bond issue supervisory committee gives the go-ahead signal. The committee works with city officials to determine the rate of issuing bonds and the priority of public improvement projects.

Discussing the decision to redesign the auditorium, Nagel said: "I feel we would be very delinquent if the auditorium were not equipped with the most up-to-date facilities possible. Many museums in the east already have television facilities."

VETERANS STARTING SCHOOL ARE URGED TO APPLY NOW

Veterans planning to start school under the Korean Bill were urged yesterday to send in their applications now to prevent delay in processing their papers.

J. F. Kelly, manager of the St. Louis Veterans Administration regional office, outlined a check-list of steps that must be taken before enrollment time. He said the veteran must choose a goal and a training program that will lead to that goal. The veteran should make certain the course has been approved for training by the state in which the school is located, Kelley said.

The third point, he said, is for veterans to complete arrangements for admittance to the school before filing applications. Application forms can be obtained at any Veterans Administration office, and should be returned with a photostat or certified copy of separation papers to the nearest Veterans Administration regional office.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (UP) — The National Labor Relations Board ruled today a Boston trucking company was within the law when it fired 20 employees who struck in a dispute

RACE BIAS CAUSES CROSS-BURNING IN CHARLESTON, MO.

Incident in Yard of School Board President Follows Integration Decision.

CHARLESTON, Mo., Aug. 27 (AP)—A fiery cross was burned in the front yard of the school board president's home here late last night. An end to segregation in the top two grades of the Charleston high school was recently authorized, effective Sept. 5.

A large crowd was attracted to the scene by flames from the six-foot tall wooden cross. The posts were wrapped in burlap sacks that had been soaked in gasoline. Steel spikes on the bottom of the cross kept it erect. T. J. Brown, attorney and president of the board, said he had no idea who was responsible for the incident. Police are investigating. Earlier the windshield of one board member's car had been broken by vandals who tossed watermelons at it. A citizen's group, recently formed, has held two mass meetings in opposition to the school board's action on desegregation. The board, at a meeting last week, voted down a proposal to rescind its action.

There are about 475 white students in the high school. When registration was held last Monday and Tuesday 27 Negro students, 11 of them seniors and 16 juniors, enrolled.

Brown earlier had said the Negro students would have a choice of attending the Charleston school or the Lincoln school, a combination Negro grade and high school in this Mississippi County town of about 5500 persons.

TRUMAN ACCUSES EISENHOWER OF 'DEMAGOGUERY'

House, I used to keep on my desk a sign which said, "The Buck Stops Here." That is a precept every President ought to have on his desk. And, what is more, he ought to honor it. "The Congress will not get the kind of help it needs from a Republican administration. This is clear from the record. This Administration has contributed little to the art of government except perhaps in its use of publicity and advertising techniques. It has offered a timid program in some important areas, but it was mostly copied from the Democrats. The only new program it has put forward was for the construction of highways, and it botched that one by proposing to finance it with a bonanza to the Wall Street financiers—a bond issue.

"In other areas, this Republican administration has actually moved backward. It is dominated and controlled by big business—which it allows to plunder our national resources. It has let farm prices fall lower and lower. It has done little or nothing for labor. It has spoken prettily of a deep feeling for human needs, and then turned right around and fought against aid to education—and against increased social security benefits.

"It is in these vital areas that the battle for the future welfare and prosperity of our country will be fought and will be won or lost. These are the areas in which the New Deal and the Fair Deal laid foundations for our great progress today. But let me tell you that the measures we put into effect for the benefit of the American people are not now in good hands."

EISENHOWER DEMOCRATIC TARGET EVEN IF NOT IN RACE

FRENCH LICK, Ind., Aug. 27 (AP)—Democrats will make President Eisenhower their prime campaign target in 1956 whether he runs for a second term or not, Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler said today.

Butler called the present national prosperity a prosperity "for a few" and said it would not prevent a Democratic victory next year because of lower farm prices, tough sledding for small business and rising living costs.

Butler expressed the hope that Vice President Nixon would be Mr. Eisenhower's running mate again, calling Nixon "the least popular" of any Vice President in recent years, and criticizing what he called "smear" tactics by Nixon in 1952.

RACING CAR HITS CROWD IN CANADA; TWO DEAD, 8 HURT

CARP, Ont., Aug. 27 (AP)—A speeding sports car hurtled off a race track at the Carp airport today and plowed into a group of spectators, killing two and injuring eight others.

Officials reported that the death car's steering wheel appeared to lock shortly before it left the track roadbed and ran into persons standing near the track at a point where there was no guard rail. The driver of the car, Victor S. Stiles, of Pembroke, Ont., was not injured.

The dead were a man and woman. The hospital did not release their names. The accident occurred on the fifth lap of the first race of a day of contests sponsored by the Ottawa Light Car Club. The races continued after the accident.

PLANES HIT, PILOT KILLED

SALEM, Ore., Aug. 27 (AP)—Two private planes collided and crashed just North of the Salem airport today, and one pilot perished in the flaming wreckage of his craft.

The dead pilot is Gordon King of Salem. The injured are Nancy M. Nordstrom, a University of Washington student, and the second pilot, Shelby S. Sullivan, Bellevue, Wash.

5 CONVICTS PLAYING FOOTBALL RUN OUT OF JAIL, 2 CAUGHT

MELBOURNE, Australia, Aug. 27 (UP)—Five long-term convicts who were playing football dashed off the field today to escape Melbourne's central jail. Two of the prisoners were quickly captured by guards who fired several rifle shots, but the others were still at large, armed with rifles stolen from guards. The latter three fled in two stolen cars.

The escapees included William John O'Malley who was serving a life term for the murder of a policeman.

'MURDER FOR PAY' SUSPECT MISSING

Bloodstained Auto of Ex-Convict Accused in Killing of Oilman Found.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Aug. 27 (AP)—The bizarre "murder for pay" case of wealthy oilman William P. Clark took a new turn today. Leroy (Tincy) Eggleston, former convict charged in the killing, is missing, but police yesterday found his blood-stained automobile after an anonymous telephone call.

"I think Tincy got his," said district attorney investigator Dusty Rhodes.

Eggleston, Cecil Green, Harry Huggins and Mrs. Clark were charged in the killing of the oilman two years ago.

The state accuses Mrs. Clark of promising a $10,000 reward for Clark's death and says the three hoodlums shot Clark May 19, 1933, in a fake robbery at his plush home.

Clark had on file at the time an annulment suit, charging Mrs. Clark lured him into marriage for his money.

Green was killed in an ambush last May. Eggleston escaped from the trap.

"There were too many people who wanted Tincy," a gangland figure here said after Tincy was reported missing. "Figuring out 'who got Tincy' is just like trying to guess which tooth of the buzzsaw cut a man."

An empty shotgun shell, a panama hat, a coat and a pistol were in the car found on a supermarket parking lot. So was a shovel, pick and spading fork.

Mrs. Eggleston said Tincy always kept the pistol in the car—ever since he found a home-made bomb wired to the motor several years ago. The tools were his.

Mrs. Eggleston said the last time she saw her husband was Thursday about 5 p.m., when he left home to visit a "girl friend."

The girl said Tincy showed up, but that she didn't know where he went when he left.

JOSEPH PAUBEL, Grover, Mo., with wolf he shot in neighbor's yard for which he was paid $15 bounty.

COUNTRY WOLF PLAYS WITH TOWN DOG, LOSES LIFE

Joseph Paubel, of Grover, 25 miles west of St. Louis, collected a $15 state bounty yesterday for a reward for killing a wolf next door to his home under unusual circumstances.

Paubel, who brought his trophy to St. Louis county courthouse at Clayton as proof he was entitled to the bounty, related he was having breakfast Friday when he glanced through the window and spied the wolf playing with a neighbor's boxer.

Grabbing his .22-caliber rifle, Paubel ran from the house as the yellowish-gray wolf fled toward a wood. He dropped the animal at a range of about 100 yards with one shot. It weighed 40 pounds and was about the same size as Lucy Jane, the boxer belonging to neighbor Neil C. Detjen.

Paubel, a 31-year-old carpenter foreman, shot the animal about five miles east of an area in which wolves have been reported preying on sheep.

974 KILLED ON MISSOURI STREETS, ROADS LAST YEAR

A total of 974 persons were killed on streets and highways in Missouri last year, the Missouri Highway Patrol announced yesterday in its annual report.

This figure was 46 less than the 1020 killed the previous year, a reduction of 4.5 per cent.

The patrol investigated 16,135 traffic accidents last year. In these mishaps 796 persons were killed and 11,268 injured, the report stated. Accidents involving one automobile took the greatest toll of lives, the patrol reported.

During the year members of the patrol worked a total of 792,981 hours, including 67,674 hours overtime for which they received no additional pay or time off. Properly recovered by the patrol last year was valued at $788,255 and fines and court costs assessed on arrests made by troopers totaled $1,036,064, the report said.

BRITON SWIMS CHANNEL, SETS UNOFFICIAL RECORD

CALAIS, France, Aug. 27 (UP)—A 306-pound British bathhouse superintendent determined to show hometown backers he was no coward, set a new unofficial record today for swimming the channel between England and France. Bill Pickering made the difficult swim from Dover to Calais through choppy waters in 14 hours 6 minutes. If the time is recognized officially, it will beat the mark of 14 hours 42 minutes set by American swimmer Florence Chadwick in 1933.

Miss Chadwick, who failed in a round-trip channel attempt a week ago, was on hand to cheer Pickering when he entered the water at Dover last night despite unfavorable weather forecasts. Residents of Bloxwich had staked the swimmer to $1120 for the swim, but became impatient when Pickering delayed the swim for a month.

NOEL FIELD ESTATE TIED UP IN COURT; HE IS IN HUNGARY

BOSTON, Aug. 27 (UP)—The $70,000 estate of Noel Field, prewar State Department employee, was tied up in Probate Court red tape here today.

Field in 1934 was freed from a Red prison but elected to remain in Hungary. His sister, Elsie Field Doob, had been administrator of the estate since he disappeared behind the Iron Curtain in 1949. When he turned up alive, she handed it over to the Rockland-Atlas National Bank, presumably for return to Field's control.

However, she acted before a Suffolk County Probate Court decree was issued making such a transfer legal. Court officials now have been asked to issue a decree in effect validating Mrs. Doob's action in surrendering the cash.

TOO MANY IRON CURTAINS, KEFAUVER TELLS RUSSIANS

HELMSINKI, Aug. 27 (UP)—Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.) Tennessee, told a group of Soviet members of Parliament today that there are too many iron curtains in Europe.

Kefauver spoke during a "co-existence" debate of the Inter-Parliamentary Union conference here. The Soviet delegates sat stern-faced while the United States Senator made his remarks.

Kefauver said there were hundreds of persons in the United States who wished to communicate with relatives in Russia and Red satellite areas but were unable to do so.

WOMAN STABBED TO DEATH IN FIGHT WITH HUSBAND

Mrs. Velma Lee Gaines, 1030 Liberty avenue, East St. Louis, was stabbed to death yesterday in an altercation with her husband, William, police reported. She was found lying in the yard of her home, and pronounced dead at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis.

Gaines, a laborer, told police he was sitting in his automobile back of the house when his wife called to him. He said she met him at the door and started brandishing a knife. Gaines told police he tried to wrest the knife from her and she was wounded during the struggle.

Mrs. Gaines, a Negro, 25 years old, was stabbed in the neck and chest. Gaines, who was held for the coroner, suffered cuts on the left arm, right cheek, lips and lower part of the back.

PENTAGON CONSTRUCTING PAD FOR 'COPTERS TO SAVE GRASS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (AP)—The Pentagon is building its own helicopter landing strip so aerial taxicabs will not spoil the grass.

The concrete pad measuring 100 by 100 feet is now under construction by a Washington contractor and will be ready for use early in September. The cost will run to about $14,000.

Military helicopters have been landing on the spacious lawns surrounding the five-sided office building of the Defense department for several years. But most of these landings were demonstrations or to pick up some notable for publicity purposes.

Now the Defense department has decided to set up a helicopter cab service for high officials and messengers with army craft from Ft. Belvoir, Va., and Ft. Meade, Md.

RIDER IS KILLED AS AUTO UPSETS IN POLICE CHASE

Speeding Driver Unhurt
in Fee Fee Road Crash
—Another Injured in Similar Race.

Howard E. Warren, a father, was killed early yesterday when the automobile in which he was riding overturned on Fee Fee road in St. Louis county in the course of a high-speed pursuit by St. Ann police.

The automobile, driven by James R. Johnson, 17 years old, of 8987 Midland boulevard, Overland, was spotted going west in St. Charles road at high speed by Sgt. Paul LeClaire and Patrolman Harry Klunk.

Because of the speed and the fact the automobile resembled one reported stolen earlier, the two police officers gave chase, reaching speeds up to 90 miles an hour before Johnson turned north on Fee Fee road, LeClaire reported.

At a point about three-quarters of a mile north of St. Charles road, Johnson was unable to make a sharp curve and the automobile overturned in an open field, coming to rest on its top.

Warren, 21 years old, was thrown 35 feet from the machine. He was pronounced dead of a broken neck on arrival at St. Louis County Hospital. Johnson was uninjured.

Sgt. LeClaire said the machine was not the one reported stolen. He said he was told the occupants were on their way to St. Charles to see a friend.

Warren lived on Missouri Bottom road in Robertson.

In a similar chase early yesterday, Billie Douglas of Pattonville suffered a severe head injury when he was thrown from a stolen automobile in Creve Coeur Memorial Park.

Park Patrolman James J. McNally observed the machine being driven south in Marine drive near the lake front and gave chase. The automobile, after a five-block pursuit, made a U-turn and stopped with its lights turned off.

As McNally approached from the north, the driver suddenly started up at high speed. McNally turned around and pursued him along the winding road at speeds in excess of 60 miles an hour, he reported.

Between Fifteenth and Sixteenth streets, the machine went off on the left side, careened off a tree stump in a nearby field and bounced back onto the road. Douglas was thrown out to the pavement. He was taken to St. Louis County Hospital.

A warrant charging Douglas with larceny of a motor vehicle was issued by Magistrate Leslie T. Lewis at Clayton. Bond was set at $2500, with a preliminary hearing scheduled for Sept. 8. On regaining consciousness, Douglas refused to make any statement.

Killed in Chase

HOWARD E. WARREN

The engine number of the automobile corresponded to that of a machine stolen earlier yesterday from the parking lot of Joe Simpkins, Inc., 6421 Easton avenue, Wellston, police said.

Gerald S. Fisher, a 23-year-old construction worker of 110 East Big Bend road, Kirkwood, was taken to St. Louis County Hospital yesterday after his west-bound automobile hit a tree and overturned on Olive Street road in Bellefontaine. He suffered a broken back and is in serious condition.

The State Highway Patrol reported that his car struck the tree after failing to make a curve in the road when traveling about 80 miles an hour.

CALIFORNIA OFFICIAL KILLED, PARENTS OF 4 ARE CHARGED

PALM SPRINGS, Calif., Aug. 27 (AP)—Murder warrants were issued today against a young California couple, parents of four children, in the killing of a city official known to have carried large sums of money.

Donald E. Graham, 60 years old, Palm Springs building inspector, was found dead in his home yesterday. Police began a search for a man and wife who were with him Thursday night in a round of night clubs.

Officers said Graham had been beaten on the head and a sheet was twisted around his neck and used to tie his hands behind him. Graham was to have been married next week. His fiancée, Mrs. Marie Everett, 47, formerly of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Tucson, Ariz., was flying West to meet him when the body was discovered.

Sought are Mrs. Betty Miers, 28, and her husband, Robert Kenneth Miers, 29, both of Baldwin Park, near Los Angeles. Officers said effects found at the home indicated they had returned yesterday and picked up their four children, the youngest just 5 months old, who had been in the care of a babysitter. Both Miers and his wife have police records.

TALE OF PLENTY LURES FOUR SPANISH STOWAWAYS TO U.S.

JERSEY CITY, N.J., Aug. 27 (AP)—Immigration authorities today held four stowaways for shipment back to Spain.

The four Spaniards told police after their arrest last night that while working at Casablanca, Morocco, many Americans described the United States to them as "an ideal place to live where there is plenty of work for all."

They said they went without food or water for 10 days in the hold of the American Export lines vessel Excliona during the ship's passage from Malaga, Spain, their home town. They were arrested when they tried to step ashore here.

Blast Wrecks Refinery Cracking Tower, Homes

additional storage tanks caught fire, there were flashing blasts of flames and floods of burning oil fanned out.

Top priority in the fire-fighting went to hundreds of small dump trucks which raced into the flaming area carrying sand which was formed into dikes to contain the oil.

Many Homes Damaged. The damage to Whiting proper was caused by the blast. Al Ciesar, chairman of the Whiting chapter of the American Red Cross, said that two houses were destroyed; 80 received major damage, and some 100 were damaged to a lesser extent.

The explosion also blew out most of the windows in a three-mile radius, including most of Whiting and parts of East Chicago and Indiana Harbor.

Ciesar said that families evacuated from their homes were being cared for at a shelter set up in the Whiting community center. Several mobile canteens were on the scene serving coffee and doughnuts to firemen and refugees.

The initial blast hurled hunks of two-inch-thick steel up to 80 feet long out of the refinery. One chunk nearly 50 feet long flew two city blocks, smashed through a food store and flattened an automobile to a height of scarcely one foot. The store and automobile were unoccupied.

A ragged piece of steel some 80 feet long landed on Indianapolis boulevard. The highway was blocked by the fire which at times threatened Sinclair Refining Co. gasoline storage tanks a few hundred feet west and south of the fire.

Boy, 3, Killed in Home. One of the two dead was 3-year-old Richard Plewniak, killed when a piece of steel pipe shot through the walls of a house. His brother, Ronald, 8, was seriously injured, and their father, Frank, suffered a laceration on his leg.

Walter Rhea, 63, assistant foreman of the Standard plant's light oils department, died of a heart attack shortly after he was summoned to emergency duty.

A spokesman for Standard Oil said that all of the men working at the blast scene were accounted for.

The blast blew a large hunk of steel through the walls of the Frank Plewniak home, seven blocks from the scene of the explosion.

"My wife and I were sleeping when there was a terrific roar that shook our home and knocked the plaster off the walls," Plewniak told reporters.

"I rushed into the other bedroom where the two boys were sleeping," he continued. "The boys were on the bed and they were covered with blood. A heavy chunk of steel had crashed through the wall and hit them."

Thought Sun Had Exploded. A Whiting housewife who was shaken by the blast said she thought the world had come to an end.

"I thought the sun had exploded and that this was the end of the world," said Mrs. Margaret Sally, whose home is near the plant. "There was a terrible noise and a big red flash."

Many residents in the area said they thought the city was under an enemy air attack.

The hydroformer cracking tower which exploded was recently overhauled after a six-month period of test operation. Its operation was regarded by technicians as a success.

The hydroformer employs advanced gasoline cracking techniques capable of producing 100-octane aviation gasoline more efficiently than the catalyst method in general use.

A company spokesman said the hydroformer had just been restarted, following the overhaul, when the explosion occurred. An engineer who had worked with the big tower said that in restarting the unit there is a hazard in the preheating of a gasoline and oil mixture which is fed as a vapor into the hydroformer.

The hydroformer had a capacity of 50,000 barrels of high octane gasoline a day — more than twice that of most cracking units now in operation.

Progress Ruins Fishing. WEST SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (UP)—Richard Clarke, 13 years old, is feeling pretty low these days, and no one blames him. Richard has been fortunate to have a backyard, complete with a trout-filled stream. And he's caught more than 10 of the fish thus far. But the property is to be taken over by the Turnpike Authority, fish and all.

REQUESTS LAYMAN AT HERESY HEARING

Lutheran Pastor Wants Member of Congregation to Accompany Him.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 27 (AP)—The pastor of a small town Lutheran church has asked a heresy investigation committee of the Northwest Synod of the United Lutheran Church to permit a layman from his congregation to appear with him at any further meetings.

The request was made by the Rev. Victory K. Wrigley of Brookfield in Waukesha County yesterday. He said, "Laymen in my congregation should have first hand knowledge about doctrinal investigations."

Pastor Wrigley is the third Waukesha County pastor to appear before the committee. He attended a three-hour, closed door hearing Thursday and synod officials indicated another will be held.

The committee brought heresy charges against the Rev. George P. Crist of Durham who was suspended from his ministry following a church trial, and the Rev. John Gerberding of Menomonee Falls who faces the trial committee on eight counts of doctrinal deviation next Tuesday.

Pastor Wrigley said, "I think my congregation ought to have some awareness of the nature of these investigations other than what I am able to tell them."

He said he would have no ob-

GAMBLING ISSUE IN LOUISIANA'S GOVERNOR'S RACE

Kenyon Who Has Put Down Rackets and Vice, Cannot Succeed Himself.

By JAMES R. CARBERRY
BATON ROUGE, La., Aug. 27
(UP) — The lid that has been holding down the gambling and vice in Louisiana for three years is acting like it might blow right off.

A campaign for Governor is producing the steam.

The name of underworld big shot Frank Costello has become an issue. And a name synonymous with Louisiana politics—
Long—is among the candidates.
Louisiana had been a wide-open state for years when Gov.
Robert Kenyon took office in 1952. Slot machines abounded.
The Riviera could boast no more lavish casinos. Numbers and policy rackets thrived. There was widespread prostitution, narcotics traffic and bootlegging.

Kenyon Clamped Down.

Kenyon put his state police chief, Col. Francis X. Grevenberg, on a crime-busting assignment. State troopers mowed down the one-armed bandits, padlocked the casinos and forced the numbers and policy rackets underground.

They broke up one of the biggest narcotic rings in south Louisiana. They arrested the mayor of Kenyon's home town in a bootlegging raid.

They even closed up Margaret's place in Opelousas, a house of prostitution that had been running night and day for 47 years without a break. If any doubt remained, this convinced Louisianians that Kenyon and Grevenberg meant business.

Kenyon's term expires at the end of this year. He cannot seek re-election. Grevenberg, whose name is known in every corner of the state, is a candidate, but Kenyon has not announced whom he will support.

Long Leading Contender.

Probably the leading contender right now is former Gov. Earl K. Long, older brother of the famed Huey and a veteran of 20 years in Louisiana politics. On the question of whether Ken-yon's law enforcement policies would be continued Long has said almost nothing.

But during his 1948-52 term as Governor, Long stuck to a "home rule" policy. He let parish (county) officials enforce or ignore the state's gambling and vice laws as they chose. Most officials chose to ignore them.

Two other candidates for Governor—Lt. Gov. C. E. (Cap) Bar-ham and cattleman James Mc-LeMore—have said they favor the shutdown, with some qualifications.

Grevenberg has charged that big-time gamblers, including the notorious Costello, have pledged $750,000 in campaign support to a candidate who will promise to put the casinos back in business and let the slot machines whirl again.

Vices Outgrown?
While many Louisiana citizens long for the old days, some political observers believe the state has outgrown its vices.
Plaquemine, a community that once ran "wide-open," is an example.

Johnny Rials, editor of the Plaquemine weekly newspaper, noted in an editorial that most of the money taken in by gamblers never wound up in the local banks. But "with the big-time games out of town, wages earned by working men
... go to pay bills, or to buy with business men who in turn deposit in the bank," he wrote.
Bank deposits in the parish increased by almost $2,000,000 last year alone, Rials pointed out.

PISTOL STOLEN FROM OFFICER USED IN FATAL SHOOTING

Examination of the revolver used by Richard Egan in the fatal shooting of William Mc-Harden Thursday disclosed the weapon was taken from Patrolman Robert Owen, Hampton Avenue District, four years ago, police said yesterday.
block of Hickory street, shot McHarden, of 2926 rear Chauveau avenue, in a dispute over Egan pushing his automobile onto a vacant lot near McHar-den's home. Both are Negroes.

The revolver was taken from Patrolman Owen Aug. 26, 1951, by four white men, who assaulted the officer. Egan told police he purchased the revolver from a white man about four years ago.

TWO SISTERS HAVE BLOOD TYPE PREVIOUSLY UNKNOWN

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 27
(UP)—Two sisters were discovered to have a type of blood previously unknown in medical history, the Milwaukee blood center announced last night.

The blood type is U-negative,
RH-negative. A number of people have RH-negative blood and a smaller number U-negative blood. Mrs. John Quarles and her sister, Mrs. Katherine Brown, both of Milwaukee, are the only persons known to medicine to have both negative factors.

The blood type was discovered after Mrs. Quarles' fifth child died within eight hours of birth

BURGlar STEALS PANTS, $58

Raymond Pulley, 4061 McPherson avenue, awakened early yesterday and saw a burglar leaving with Pulley's trousers.

Pulley tried to grab the man
but he jumped out a window, taking the trousers and $58 with him. The intruder was a Negro.
Francis Adams reported to police that $95 was stolen from a dresser drawer in his apartment, 4471 Olive street, during his absence between 6 and 9 o'clock last night.

BILLION DOLLARS TO BE SPENT ON SLUM CLEARANCE

Private Interests and Cities to Provide $846,000,000, and U.S. $168,000,000.

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—The Urban Renewal Administration said today private interests and communities plan to spend $846,000,000 on 91 current slum clearance and urban redevelopment projects, with the Federal Government putting up an additional $168,000,000.

In a report on URA operations for the fiscal year 1955, Commissioner James W. Follin said a total of 297 projects in 196 cities had been planned or developed since the slum clearance and urban redevelopment programs were launched under the Housing Act of 1949.

Follin said the URA, a division of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, has used up almost all the $500,000,000 authorized by the 1949 act. Capital grants approved or reserved to date for the 297 projects total about $445,000,000, he reported.

$500,000,000 Authorized.
However, Congress authorized another $500,000,000 in capital grant funds for the agency at the last session, after a bitter fight over other sections of the legislation relating to public housing.

Included in the list of 91 current projects, those described as "well advanced," was the plaza area development in St. Louis, for which the Federal Government has authorized a loan of $4,155,775 and a capital grant of $1,334,675.

Rehabilitation of the eight and one-half block blighted area is the first urban redevelopment project in St. Louis. Plans are to erect about 1100 apartments for middle-income tenants, using private capital, while the city develops a three-block park alongside the project.

In other housing developments, the Community Facilities Administration announced an increase in funds available for planning public works, and the National Association of Home Builders reported a sharp seasonal decline in new non-farm housing starts in July.

Effect of Credit Curb.
The Housing Association said tighter credit restrictions imposed recently by Federal Housing agencies could, if they are continued, mean a further reduction in the volume of new housing in 1956. The credit curb on housing was among a series of mild "brakes" on the economy applied by the Eisenhower Administration.

There were 115,000 non-farm housing starts in July, a reduction of 11 per cent from the previous month, the association said. This made July the first month this year in which volume of new urban housing construction was below the level of a year ago, the housing group added.

The Administration's credit controllers will soon have to decide whether fewer homes for the lower income families is a desirable objective for 1956—an election year," the association continued. It predicted about 1,300,000 new non-farm housing starts this year but said the rate going into next year will be down.

Announcing the increased funds for public works planning, Commissioner John C. Hazeltine of the community facilities administration said the "broadened" program was made possible by a "substantially increased" appropriation voted in the last session of Congress.

Previously, Government advances for public works planning were limited generally to sewer and water facilities, but applications will now be considered for schools, streets, hospitals and health facilities, public buildings, police and fire stations, auditoriums, port and harbor development, flood relief facilities, airports, garbage disposal plants and others, Hazeltine said.

Planning Ceiling Lifted.
The former $10,000 limit on interest-free planning advances also has been lifted and "reasonable amounts" above that figure will be considered, he added. The loans are available to public agencies including states, counties, communities, school districts and regional agencies.

The $846,000,000 to be invested by non-federal groups in the 91 current projects "means that private enterprise and local governments are spending five dollars on construction for every dollar of federal grant assistance to communities," Follin said.

Under Title I of the 1949 act, the Federal Government assists in slum clearance and urban redevelopment by defraying two-thirds of the cost of clearing a blighted area, which is then sold at reduced cost for private development.

Follin gave the following breakdown of expected spending by non-federal groups: $473,000,000 for housing—with $24,000,000 of this for public housing; $99,000,000 for commercial construction; $67,000,000 for industrial construction; $180,000,000 for public and semi-public works, and $27,000,000 for site improvements.

The 91 current projects, and eight others for which construction figures are not yet available, are in 17 states, the District of Columbia, Hawaii and Puerto Rico. New York leads the cities, with 10 current projects; Chicago is second with seven, and Kansas City, Mo., has two.

Robbed of $40 on Street.
John Harris, 614 Geyer avenue, reported to police he was robbed of $40 Friday midnight by two men who grabbed him in the 2700 block of Washington boulevard and fled with his wallet. Harris said the robbers were Negroes.

Rayburn Says 'Little Fellow' Must Share in Any Tax Cut

G.O.P. Leader Martin Asserts Goal Should Be Balanced Budget and Reduced Levies.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (UP)—Speaker Sam Rayburn, who lost one tax cut fight this year, vowed today that "the little fellow" will not be left out of any cut which Congress may pass in the 1956 election year.

The Texas Democrat's promise was made as a tax reduction fight, which is certain to cross party lines, began shaping up months in advance of the next congressional session.

The issue was touched off by the Administration's forecast Thursday that the budget can and should be balanced in this fiscal year.

There is widespread belief that President Eisenhower will submit a balanced budget and a proposal for a tax cut to Congress when it returns in January.

G.O.P. Leader's View. House Republican leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. of Massachusetts said the goal definitely should be a balanced budget and a tax cut, "but I think it's a little premature to talk about it until we see where we stand next year."

From his vacation home on Cape Cod, Martin said, "We hope we can have a tax cut if we can balance the budget next year. We hope we can cut expenditures considerably, but we won't know until the budgets are submitted."

Rayburn, from his home at Bonham, Tex., was wary in commenting on the nation's financial outlook. The Administration denounced at the last session of Congress the $20-for-everybody tax cut which he strongly supported.

He said he did not know what President Eisenhower intended to submit in his next budget, but that the Democrats would await the President's message and then write a tax bill that is fair to everybody.

Byrd's Position. In Rayburn's own party, however, there are last-ditch budget-balancers. For example, Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, said it would be foolhardy to balance the budget and then unbalance it with a tax cut.

Byrd heads the Senate Finance Committee, which handles tax legislation after the House passes it. He said he is not certain both a balanced budget and a tax cut can be achieved.

Representative Wright Patman of Texas, jumped into the fight today by denouncing as "shocking" Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey's hopes for a possible tax cut next year. He said Humphrey did not even mention "our high national debt and the importance of reducing it."

Patman, one of the leading Democratic fiscal experts in the House, added that "all citizens, regardless of party affiliation, have a right to expect fiscal responsibility from the party in power."

President Eisenhower called the Democratic $20-cut-for-everybody "fiscal irresponsibility."

Both Possible, George Believes. Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, senior Democrat on Byrd's committee, expressed belief there will be both a balanced budget and a tax cut next year.

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas said he had not been informed of any plans the Administration might have for balancing the budget other than "the promises made in 1952 which they have never carried out."

The Texas said "serious and sympathetic consideration will be given early in next session to reducing taxes." He said he thought taxes would have been cut in the last session except "for the fact that politically, the Republican Administration and Republican congressional leaders felt it would be better to hold off until an election year."

Senator Olin D. Johnston (Dem.), South Carolina, said he was for tax reductions in the lower brackets. He recalled that he introduced amendments last session to increase the amount of exemptions for each child and dependent.

There is a predominantly Republican group which favors a flat across-the-board percentage cut. That would mean a greater dollar saving for those in higher income brackets.

AIR NATIONAL GUARD BOMBER TEAMS TO COMPETE SEPT. 5

Teams representing Missouri and New York Air National Guard wings will compete in a gunnery exercise Sept. 5 to 11 in Mississippi and Florida, Col. Charles H. DuBois, commander of the 131st Bombardment Group, said yesterday.

Each wing will enter four B-26 bomber crews in the competition, which will include rocket and machine gun firing and bombing at Camp Shelby, Miss., and aerial gunnery, at towed targets, over the Gulf of Mexico south of Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. The base of operations will be the Air National Guard Training Center, Gulfport, Miss.

Lt. Col. James P. McDonough, 13 Heatherhill lane, Olivette, will command the Missouri team. Ground support crews will be sent to the Gulfport base from Lambert-St. Louis Field Saturday, to prepare for the exercise.

'From Here to Maternity.' SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 27 (AP)—W. W. McCune, assistant school superintendent, welcomed new teachers in the Savannah public school system yesterday. He said he hoped they would be here a long time, at least "from here to maternity."

SUMMIT WEDDING TO TOP MOUNTAIN LOVERS' ROMANCE

CLEVELAND, Aug. 27 (AP)—Because their romance blossomed on a mountain top, a local couple will climb the same peak tomorrow for a re-enactment of their wedding ceremony.

Their vows are being said today in the Methodist Church in suburban Bay Village, with the Rev. Alfred C. Kreke officiating.

Tomorrow Roland Leavens, 24-year-old industrial engineer, and his bride, the former Doris McCartney, 23-year-old high school teacher, will climb Seneca Rocks, near Franklin, W.Va., for another ceremony. The Rev. R. C. Bunning of the Circleville (W.Va.), Methodist Church will officiate in the second ceremony.

Leavens says, "You are closest to God and religion when you are up on a mountain. I think it is very fitting that we get married there."

His interest in mountain climbing began at Dartmouth College, and he has followed his hobby in the Swiss Alps and the Rocky Mountains. Last year he gave a talk at Bay Village High School, where Miss McCartney taught. She became interested and made some trips with a climbing club. Seneca Rocks was where Leavens proposed marriage and was accepted.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL., GETS WATER FROM NEW SOURCE

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Aug. 27 (UP)—Water flowed into Jacksonville today, and the city hoped its water supply troubles were over.

This city of 20,000 Friday dedicated the new pipeline bringing the water and started a three-day celebration. The water comes 23 miles from 100-foot-deep wells near Naples. The new supply system cost $2,750,000.

Gov. William G. Stratton, United States Senator Everett M. Dirksen and a delegation of other officials were on hand for a 50-foot-high geyser into the opening of a valve that sent air over Jacksonville.

3 CHINESE HERE FEAR REDS WILL HARM FAMILIES

Students Refuse to Reveal Identities as Suggested at Geneva Parley.

Chinese students in the St. Louis area who have relatives in Communist-controlled China are afraid the Red government may take reprisals against their families if the students' identities are revealed.

Three of these students told the Post-Dispatch that their identification might mean death or imprisonment for their relatives in China. It would certainly subject the relatives to harassment and financial penalties, they said.

Their concern stemmed from reports from the conference at Geneva, Switzerland, between the United States and Communist China, that the Reds want the names of the approximately 2000 Chinese students in the United States turned over to a neutral nation, such as India, to determine whether the students want to go back to China.

Somehow in such a process, the students fear, their identities would be learned by the Chinese Reds, who would then be in a position to punish their families—and even, by threats against the families, force the students to return.

The students do not want to return to a China that is Communist. Yet they unhappily agree that any other kind of China is too far in the future even to be hoped for at present.

Treatment Chances

Others have returned. They were well-treated at first, especially those with engineering or other technical skills, the students here have heard. But later, their "capitalist" taint as American-trained specialists kept them from responsible jobs. It was said, and they were forced to denounce the United States.

The Chinese students in St. Louis have been cut off from direct contact with their families for some time. One of them, who came here by way of Formosa a few years ago, does not dare try to write home, for fear of bringing reprisals against his parents. They do not know where he is, or even if he is alive.

Another student exchanges information with her relatives by means of a third party in British-held Hong Kong. She is careful never to indicate her present whereabouts. One of her cousins was killed by the Reds. She is afraid her identification would cause her family to suffer further injury.

Avoiding a Reminder.

The third student is in a slightly different position. He has been in direct contact by letter with his relatives, although not for more than a year. Still, he is afraid that his identification—as a sort of reminder to the Reds—might have serious results for his family.

There are several Chinese students here whose families live in Hong Kong or on Formosa. They share the apprehension of the others, although they are not so directly affected. Most of them originally came from the mainland and many have relatives outside their immediate families there.

For the students from the mainland, life is simply a year to year renewal of temporary study visas and a long, agonizing wait for things to get better. In the meantime, they must live under protection of anonymity in an alien land.

Jump in Army Recruitment.

HEIDELBERG, Germany, Aug. 27 (AP)—The United States Army in Europe reported today that recruiting in the first seven months of this year nearly tripled that of the same period last year. It attributed the increase to a recent pay rise and re-enlistment benefits.

Air Force Chief Clears Airman Of 'Guilt-by-Kinship' Charge

Quarles Halts Dishonorable Discharge of Man Whose Father Is Alleged to Be Former Communist.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (UP)—Air Force Secretary Donald A. Quarles today personally cleared Airman 3-C Stephen Branzovich of "guilt-by-kinship" security charges.

Quarles' action came in the case of the 22-year-old reserve enlisted man whose father was alleged to be a former Communist, left the Navy and the Coast Guard with two similar cases to dispose of.

The air secretary's decision ended Air Force proceedings to give the young airman a dishonorable discharge from the reserve. Branzovich was fighting the action. Quarles said the airman's continuation in the reserve is consistent with the interests of national security.

Other Cases.

His case is similar to that of Merchant Seaman Eugene D. Landy and Norman Pierre Gaston, Coast Guard apprentice seamen. They have been refused Navy and Coast Guard commissions because of security charges involving their mothers.

The House Committee on Un-American Activities has scheduled a closed meeting Monday to hear Mrs. Deborah Landy, mother of Eugene. She has said she once was a Communist but quit at her son's insistence.

Quarles' action was announced in a memorandum from his office.

"Secretary of the Air Force Donald A. Quarles has personally considered the case of Airman 3-C Stephen Branzovich and has determined that the continuation of Airman Branzovich in his present status in the Air Force Reserve is consistent with the interests of the national security."

"This has the effect of disposing of the question that would have come before the hearing board for determination."

Branzovich had been scheduled to appear before a special Air Force board at Mitchell Air Force Base in New York next Tuesday to answer the charges.

Association With Father.

The Air Force had alleged that he "maintained a close continuing association" with his father, Charles, who was reported to have been a Communist in 1943, "and for an unspecified time thereafter, a member or close affiliate of the Communist party."

Branzovich protested that he was "only accused of being the son of his father."

In the Landy case, Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas has promised speedy action. He has set up a special board to review the case.

Landy, an honor graduate of the Merchant Marine academy at Kings Point, N.Y., was denied a commission on the day he was graduated. He is now working on a merchant vessel.

V. Adm. Alfred C. Richmond, Coast Guard commandant, has expressed hope the Gaston case will be settled quickly in the young man's favor.

Gaston is 23. He was graduated from the academy at New London, Conn., on April 1. But the Coast Guard has held up his commission until reviews charges his mother once was active in groups on the Attorney General's subversive list.

His mother, Mrs. Jean Grisez of San Francisco, has said she had been active in a number of organizations because she

2 DUPLICATES OF LINDBERGH PLANE ARRIVE IN PARIS

PARIS, Aug. 27 (AP)—Two duplicates of the famed Spirit of St. Louis in which Charles Lindbergh made his solo trans-Atlantic flight arrived in Paris today.

Both were flown from the United States in the cargo hold of an Air Force C124 Globemaster. They will be used in the movie now being made on Lindbergh's flight.

ANNETTE KOLB, ONCE EXILE, AWARDED GOETHE PRIZE

FRANKFURT, Germany, Aug. 27 (AP)—Annette Kolb, 80-year-old West German novelist and former exile, was announced today as winner of the Goethe prize.

The 10,000 mark ($2380) award is sponsored every three years by the City of Frankfurt. Dramatist Carl Zuckmayer won it in 1952, and before that it was Thomas Mann.

Miss Kolb left Germany in 1933 to escape the Hitler regime. She lived in France and Switzerland, and later New York City. She returned to Germany in October, 1945. Among her best-known works was the novel "Das Exemplar" (The Model). While living in New York, she wrote "Salzburger Festspiele" (Salzburg Festival) and "Glueckliche Reise" (Good Journey).

CONFLICT OF INTEREST ISSUE IN INTERIOR DEPT. SWITCH

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (AP)—The Interior Department yesterday announced the appointment of Frederick S. Lott, a career employee, to succeed

FRANZ VON SCHILLING JR., AS DIRECTOR OF THE VOLUNTARY AGREEMENT CONCERNING FOREIGN PETROLEUM SUPPLY.

It was brought out in a congressional hearing that Von Schilling left the post after the question of possible conflict of interest had been raised. Von Schilling had been on leave from Caltex, Ltd.

The department also announced that effective Sept. 7, C. John Bauer, who has been serving as assistant director of the office of oil and gas while on a year's leave from Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey, will return to the oil company.

BABY ACCIDENTALLY SHOT TWICE IN 6 WEEKS BY BROTHER

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 27 (AP)—For the second time in six weeks a 20-month-old Arkansas baby is in Baptist Hospital today being treated for a .22-rifle wound.

Harold, the baby son of Henry Carter, was hit in the thigh today on the front porch of the family's farmhouse near Earle, Ark.

Carter said his oldest son, John 6, found a 22 shell under the steps and put it in the rifle. He was coming out the door when the rifle discharged, hitting the baby, Carter said.

The father said six weeks ago the baby "was shot by the same boy with the same gun." He said the baby was not seriously wounded in that incident. At that time, Carter said, he threw all the .22 shells in the house away.

Short, Tapered Slacks for Men.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (AP)—The world of fashion is not stopping at putting men in Bermuda shorts. Next, are gondoliers, described as "calf-length tapered slacks."

RAT SURVEY TO START IN 2 SHOPPING AREAS

Every Building to Be Inspected in East Grand, Florissant-Warner Districts.

A building-by-building survey of rat control needs in the East Grand and the Florissant-Warner shopping districts will be started tomorrow by the Health Division's sanitation and rat control section.

The work will begin the area around the Water Tower near East Grand and West Florissant avenues and proceed westward along West Florissant avenue to O'Fallon Park.

Health Commissioner J. Earl Smith said each building in the area will be inspected. Where rat infestation is found, elimination measures will be required. Control measures will be required for the prevention of rat entry.

City rodent control men will gas rat burrows in alleys and back yards and will distribute rat baits where needed.

Inspectors will notify property-owners and building occupants to correct all conditions conducive to rat infestation. This will include repair of fences and sheds, elimination of ash pits and replacement of inadequate rubbish and garbage containers.

A similar rat control project was started last month in the Delmar-De Baliviere area. Three control projects were completed last year in business areas on Cherokee street and on Thirty-ninth street and near St. Louis avenue and North Fourteenth street. Extension of the work to other shopping neighborhoods will begin soon, Dr. Smith said.

LUTHERAN HOSPITAL NURSING SCHOOL ALUMNAE BANQUET

The fiftieth anniversary of the Alumnae Association of the Lutheran Hospital School of Nursing will be celebrated at the association's annual banquet for the graduating class at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Congress Hotel.

The graduating class of 46 persons is the largest in the history of the school.

Mrs. Ruth Cremer, president of the alumnae, said. She said many of the school's graduates who live in other cities are expected to attend the celebration.

Toastmaster at the banquet will be Dr. Bernard W. Klippel, president of the staff at Lutheran Hospital and member of the American College of Surgeons.

$30,000 FOR ANATOMY STUDY

The department of anatomy at Washington University School of Medicine has been awarded a

The grant is for a three-year period, beginning Oct. 1.

A native of Yorkshire, England, Dr. Davies received in 1941 a Rockefeller scholarship to the University of Iowa and the William Hey prize in surgery and gold medal as the most distinguished graduate at the University of Leeds, England. He came to St. Louis last month.

RUSSIA MAKING FARM PROGRESS, SAYS AMERICAN

Dean Lambert Asserts, However, Tillers, Scientists Know Little of Foreign Farming.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—Russian farmers and farm leaders right up to the level of important agricultural scientists are isolated and "don't know what's going on outside the Iron Curtain" but nevertheless are "on the march" and "making a lot of progress."

Those are the views of Dean W. V. Lambert of the University of Nebraska College of Agriculture as expressed yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the National Press Club at which, to his expressed delight, no toasts were drunk in vodka and caviar was absent from the menu.

Dean Lambert, one of a group of twelve American farm representatives just returned from a six-week tour of Russia, said that he saw no immediate farm crisis in Russia but that he knew the Soviet government is "frightened" by the low production last year in the Ukraine, its greatest producing area, and realizes that with 3,000,000 Russian babies being born every year they are going to have to do something about a prospective food problem soon.

Humorous Warning.

Humorously warning future visitors to the Soviet Union to seek an agreement with the Russians excusing them from one or two of the usual five meals a day, the enormous consumption of vodka and champagne and caviar for breakfast, Dean Lambert in a serious vein said that he saw in Russia a potential market for some of this nation's food surpluses, especially fats.

He urged that the United States Department of Agriculture "go in and try for those markets."

He sympathized with the good-humored complaints expressed at the press club Tuesday by members of the Russian delegation that they didn't see as much of American agriculture methods as they would have liked because they were continually surrounded by the press throughout the trip. Lambert said the Americans had the same experience.

50 Years Behind U.S.

Discussing Russian farm systems, Lambert said they are "at least 50 years" behind United States farmers in terms of efficiency but will at the rate they are going catch up before we realize it.

There exists in the Soviet Union a "tremendous emphasis on education and research in agriculture, with 1000 major experimental stations placed strategically around the country engaged in various projects and augmented by hundreds of 'satellite' agriculture undertakings."

Agriculture is not the only field in which education is emphasized, Lambert said. Great stress is placed on primary and secondary education on the collective farms with the government footing the bill. The University of Moscow has 21,000 students in the sciences, arts and many other fields, Lambert continued.

"Whether you like it or not," Lambert said, "they're on the move upward. As a nation we ought to be aware of it. I think we should begin sending our scientists there to work with theirs for a year at a time, at least. A delegation simply can't do the job properly. They are making great strides as a people and we cannot afford not to keep up with what's going on."

"New ideas come out of the minds of men whether they be Russians or of some other nationality."

Cooking Methods.

Ralph A. Olsen, an Ellsworth (Id.) farmer, described living conditions in the city apartments as modern, complete with private baths, kitchens and electric plates for cooking. In the collective farm villages, however, the workers, about half of whom are women, live under primitive conditions.

A Russian-born member of the delegation, J. M. Kleiner of Nampa, Idaho, said the tour was laid out by Moscow and that the tour conductor could permit no deviation from it.

Olsen said it was his impression that many Soviet citizens feel they are worse off now than they would have been 40 years ago under the Czar.

U.S. NAMES TRIAL ATTORNEY FOR SUIT AGAINST OIL FIRMS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (AP)—Attorney General Brownell yesterday appointed Milo V. Olson, Los Angeles trial attorney, to handle the Government's $100,000,000 recovery suit against eight large oil companies.

The suit, started by former Attorney General McGranery in August 1932, arose from an aid program in Europe in which this government assisted in financing purchases of Arabian oil by European countries. The complaint alleged that the eight companies overcharged the United States government on crude oil sales between 1948 and 1952.

The defendants in the action, who have denied any overcharges, are Standard Oil of New Jersey, Esso Export Corp., Standard Oil of California, the Texas Co., CalTex Petroleum Co., Mid-East Crude Sales Co., Ltd., Socony-Vacuum Oil Co. and Socony-Vacuum Overseas Supply Co.

Space Travel Laboratory Plans Announced by Glenn L. Martin Co.

Scientists Gathered by Aviation Firm Will Also Attack Problem of Overcoming Gravity—Many Europeans Enlisted.

NEW BOSTON, N. H., Aug. 27 (AP)—The Glenn L. Martin Co. announced plans tonight for a laboratory to "explore, both theoretically and experimentally, the possibility of travel through outer space and of circumventing gravity."

Welcome Mr. Bender, manager of Martin's advanced science laboratory at Baltimore, disclosed the plans in an address to the Gravity Research Foundation, a privately-supported study organization established here in 1948 by economist Roger W. Babson. He said the plans are "already under implementation." The aim, he said, is to "gather the most highly skilled scientists and create an energetic environment" in which they could explore new frontiers of knowledge.

Bender did not say where the laboratory would be, but presumably it would be at Baltimore, headquarters of the Martin Aircraft Company.

Scientists Sign Up. Martin's European office has signed contracts in the past year with "a dozen or more" prominent European scientists, Bender said, for a series of studies in various fields.

"It can not be many years before man becomes serious about traveling through outer space," he said.

A few of the unknowns challenging science here, he said, are new problems of propulsion, materials and navigation, environmental effects on man, and relative distance and relative speed.

Of gravity, Bender observed that it would affect every step of laboratory progress. He added: "While we make no pretensions toward a frontal attack on negating gravity, many other scientific barriers—flight beyond the speed of sound, for example—have been breached not by annihilation but by a better understanding of them."

Bender said many scientists find themselves so hobbled by precedent they are unable to see new ideas in front of them, and many well trained technical minds find it difficult to grasp the beautifully simple concepts of general relativity.

"Many fine minds capable of contributing have for many diverting reasons never been addressed to the problem," Bender said. He added:

Einstein Theory Experiments. It is significant that Einstein's monumental discoveries in the field of gravitation have, I am told, been verified by only three substantial experiments, two of which are of doubtful accuracy.

"There must be many more. They may be difficult to conceive and almost impossible to perform, but we shall be energetically in search of them."

Bender said the laboratory's many other studies will include atomic and sub-atomic physics, materials in solid state, fluids, dynamics, electronics, and "many areas branching on the biological sciences."

He said the new laboratory will be a separate subsidiary of the Martin Co., and will be called Rias, Inc. He did not explain the origin of the name, nor did he indicate the cost of the project.

Bender said George L. Trimble, Martin's vice president for advanced design, is largely responsible for the proposed new program.

MISSOURI AGRICULTURE DEAN TO LEAVE TODAY FOR INDIA

COLUMBIA, Mo., Aug. 27 (AP)—Dean J. H. Longwell and B. H. Harrison of the Missouri College of Agriculture will leave here tomorrow on the first leg of a trip to India where they will survey agriculture problems of six northeast Indian states.

Six staff members of the college will go to India about Jan. 1 on a two-year program to aid the states of Bihar, West Bengal, Assam, Tripura, Manipur and Orissa in developing and organizing research and extension programs and in training staffs to administer the programs.

The project was developed at the request of the International Co-operation Administration, a branch of the Department of Agriculture which is asking American colleges to provide technical assistance.

Heads Numismatic Group. OMAHA, Aug. 27 (AP)—Leonard C. Panosh of San Diego, Calif., was elevated to the presidency of the American Numismatic Association today, succeeding Dr. J. Hewitt Judd of Omaha. Col. James W. Curtis, Springfield, Ill., was elected second vice president.

SOURCE OF TEEN-AGE PARTY LIQUOR SOUGHT

East Side Police Start Inquiry After Arresting 19 Boys and Girls in Raid.

East St. Louis police were seeking to learn the source of liquor and beer found Friday evening when officers raided a noisy party at 714 North Sixty-fifth street and arrested 19 youths and girls ranging in age from 13 to 19 years.

Reports that some of the liquor was purchased at a fruit store in downtown East St. Louis were being checked. Officers confiscated quart bottles of beer and a pint of whiskey in the raid on the party, following complaints by neighbors.

Two policemen responding to the complaints were unable to halt several youths who ran out the back door. Inside the two-room frame house the officers found 13 youths and six girls, James Reister, 19 years old, who lives there, was not at home. The majority of the youths were attired in blue jeans and T-shirts.

Police said several of the youths are members of the "Dukes," a teen-age gang that has caused trouble in East St. Louis.

Reister, a railroad employee who lives alone, was arrested for questioning when he returned following the raid. He explained he had gone to the movies while permitting friends to use his home for the party.

Four of the girls and one boy were fined $25 each for disor-

ELSA MAXWELL'S CELEBRITY SHIP SAILS FOR GREECE

VENICE, Italy, Aug. 27 (UP)—Hostess Elsa Maxwell's party of celebrities sailed today for two weeks of fun and culture in the Greek islands of the Mediterranean.

The 5500-ton ocean-going yacht Achilleus set sail with Elsa herself on the bridge. Aboard the yacht were duchesses, industrialists, movie stars, opera singers and socialites.

"The captain of this vessel is Commander Dimitri Konas," said Elsa. "He's doing the actual sailing. I'm in charge of opening champagne bottles."

She had plenty to work on. Fifty cases of champagne were loaded last night. Also aboard were 300 gift packages, three tons of sweets and two tons of powdered milk to be given to poor Greek children.

The cruise will take in Adelfi, Athens, Rhodes and "all the Greek islands off the beaten track," Miss Maxwell announced. Among the cruise guests were the French Duke and Duchess de Brissac, movie star Olivia De Havilland and her husband, Paris magazine executive Pierre Galante. Aly Khan planned to join the cruise at Pirraeus, Greece.

Four others were released without charges, two were released on bond and the remainder are held for juvenile authorities. All received a lecture from Sgt. Thomas Sullivan, juvenile officer, on the perils of keeping "bad company."

U.S. C. OF C. IN KOREA ASSAILS HIGH BUSINESS TAXES

SEOUL, Sunday, Aug. 28 (AP)—The United States Chamber of Commerce in Korea today accused South Korea's government of imposing "exorbitant" business taxes and in one case making an American "a virtual prisoner" by denying him an exit permit until he pays up.

In another instance, a firm has been told to pay taxes, plus penalties, or their assets will be impounded, the Chamber said. A spokesman identified the man as Alvin I. Melnick, Beverly Hills, Calif., who was taxed $11,180 for the period from September 1954 to July 1955.

BUREAU PREDICTS 81,000,000 MOTOR VEHICLES BY 1965

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (UP)—The nation's already overcrowded highways will have to accommodate 81,000,000 vehicles 10 years hence, the Bureau of Public Roads said today.

It forecast that vehicle registrations will reach 61,301,000 this year, an increase of 4.6 per cent over 1954. The estimate includes 50,954,000 passenger cars and 10,347,000 trucks and buses.

The bureau said traffic congestion on the highways has followed closely the pattern of increased registrations.

In the current vehicle registration increases, Florida leads with 10 per cent, followed by Texas with 7.1 per cent. Increases from 6 to 7 per cent are expected in Alabama, California, Georgia, Louisiana, and North Carolina.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (AP)—The State Department announced tonight that John P. Weyerhaeuser Jr., president of the Weyerhaeuser Timber Co., Tacoma, Wash., has been appointed United States delegate to the thirteenth meeting of the timber committee of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe at Geneva Sept. 13-17. The committee brings together timber importers and exporters for regular reviews of the timber situation.

EISENHOWER OK'S TALKS AIMED AT DISCRIMINATION

Move to Curb Racial, Religious Bias in U.S. Contracts—President Relaxing.

DENVER, Aug. 27 (UP)—President Eisenhower in a brief but busy session at his summer White House desk at Lowry Air Force base today, endorsed plans for an Oct. 25 conference in Washington to map further steps toward eliminating racial and religious discrimination in government contracts.

The President, ruddy from an all-day trout fishing outing yesterday at Pine, Colo., spent two hours at his desk. He then headed for a round of golf at Cherry Hills Country club and planned a relaxing weekend.

After his golf match, the President and a small group of friends went to the presidential suite in the Brown Palace Hotel for a late lunch and a round of bridge.

Mr. Eisenhower's companions included Paul G. Hoffman, industrialist and former foreign aid chief, and Dan Thornton, Colorado's former Republican governor.

Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell announced the Oct. 25 Washington anti-discrimination meeting after he had spent almost an hour with Mr. Eisenhower.

He said the President was "very pleased" with plans for the meeting, which will bring together government contractors, labor officials and the President's committee on government contracts.

The committee, headed by Vice President Richard M. Nixon, was set up to study means of eliminating discrimination because of race, creed or color in factories holding government contracts. Mitchell is vice-chairman.

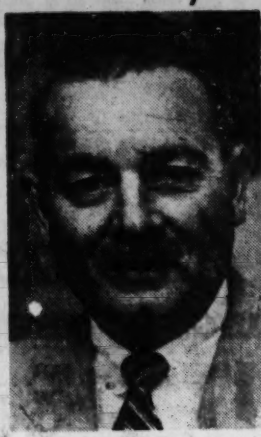

Mitchell also reported to the President on his department's role in flood disaster relief program. But he said he and Mr. Eisenhower did not discuss prospects for labor legislation when Congress reconvenes in January. Mitchell said the Washington meeting will include an afternoon session with Nixon presiding and an evening dinner at the White House with Mr. Eisenhower as host.

Mitchell told reporters that "great progress" has been made

FBI AGENTS ARREST E. F. (TRIGGER) BURKE

Self-Professed New York Killer Seized on South Carolina Street.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (UP)—The Justice Department tonight announced the arrest of Elmer Francis (Trigger) Burke, self-professed New York killer, by FBI agents at Folly Beach, South Carolina.

FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover said Burke was being sought for "unlawful flight to avoid prosecution" for murder, as a result of the fatal shooting of Edward Walsh in New York City three years ago.

Burke escaped from jail in Boston one year ago tomorrow. Hoover said he was also being sought for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution for assaulting a prison guard during the escape.

Burke offered no resistance when arrested on the street tonight by FBI Special Agent in Charge Julius Loper and special agents of the Savannah FBI office. He admitted his identity, Hoover said. He was known by the name of "Dean" in Folly Beach, and as "Paul Renka," in nearby Charleston, S.C.

Two .38-caliber revolvers and two .22-caliber rifles were found in his Folly Beach residence. Hoover said Burke was arrested previously on June 27, 1954, by Boston police, for possessing a submachine gun.

In eliminating racial discrimination on government contracts but there is "room for more progress."

3-POWER TALKS OPEN TOMORROW ON CYPRUS ISSUE

But Britain, Turkey, Greece Seem Far From Accord on Future
Ownership of Island.

LONDON, Aug. 27 (AP)—The foreign ministers of Britain, Greece and Turkey meet here Monday hoping to end the dispute over the island of Cyprus.

But their old quarrel over who should own the troubled British colony in the east Mediterranean seemingly was as far from settlement as ever.

The three countries, allies in most other things, have made it plain they are standing pat regarding Cyprus.

Leading Britain's delegation at the conference at Lancaster House will be Foreign Secretary Harold Macmillan. Foreign Minister Stephanos Stephanopoulos will represent Greece and

New Face at Forest Park

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.
Zoo's gayal calf, named Gayalette, staring curiously at photographer as it made its debut on display yesterday at the Zoo. Behind Gayalette is mother Silky.

GAYAL CALF GOES ON DISPLAY, FIRST ONE AT THE ZOO

The Zoo put its first gayal calf on display yesterday. Born three weeks ago, it is named Gayalette. The parents, Silky and Moe, arrived at the Zoo two years ago.

Gayals are large cattle, but even animal experts are not sure whether they are a wholly wild or partly wild species, Zoo Director George P. Vierheller said. Tribes in northeastern India and northern Burma keep small gayal herds in domestication. And Gayalette, about the size of a Jersey calf and of reddish brown color, appears to be strictly the domestic type.

EAST GERMAN REDS' BOSS ILL, REPORTED GIVEN LEAVE

BERLIN, Aug. 27 (UP)—East German Communist party boss Walter Ulbricht has been given a four-month leave because of serious illness, the anti-Communist Information Bureau West reported today.

Ulbricht has been missing from public functions for almost two months. He was reported suffering from a serious stomach ailment and was reported to have visited a Soviet sanatorium for treatment.

He now is reported to be in the Buch hospital in East Berlin.

Background of Tension.
The talks were called against a background of high tension and bitterness between the British rulers of the island and the partisans of enosis who have been backing their demands with bombs and dynamite squalor in from the European mainland.

Even as the conference gets under way tens of thousands of British troops and specially trained police riot squads have been alerted to cope with an expected wave of demonstrations and disturbances.

The well-organized Cypriot Communists have identified themselves with what is called the national liberation movement. They have appealed to all Cypriots to attend protest meetings 24 hours before the London talks begin.

CREAMERY ASKS TO GET OUT OF SUIT TO BAR MILNOT CO.
COLUMBIA, Mo., Aug. 27 (AP)—The Missouri Farmers' Association Producers Creamery of Springfield asked the Boone county circuit court today to dismiss it from a pending suit to force Milnot Filled Milk Co. out of business in Missouri.

Three other firms, Pet Milk, Borden and Carnation companies, withdrew from the court procedure last Nov. 18 and action today apparently will end the proceedings if the court approves the withdrawal.

The suit originally was filed Aug. 27, 1951, in Newton county and was sent here on a change of venue two years ago. The four companies contended the Milnot firm was operating illegally and that it was against the public interest for the firm to manufacture and sell its filled milk products in the state.

COURT UPHOLDS INTEGRATION IN TEXAS SCHOOLS

Rules Districts May Still Collect State Aid if They End Segregation.

BIG SPRING, Tex., Aug. 27 (AP)—Texas public schools may desegregate immediately if they want and still collect state aid, a district court held yesterday.

Judge Charlie Sullivan denied an anti-desegregation Texas Citizens Council request to stop the Big Spring school district from integrating and block use of state money by districts that do desegregate.

The ruling came in the first test of the complicated school financing laws, which call for state aid on a separate white-Negro basis.

A prompt appeal to the Texas Supreme Court was promised by Ross Carlton, attorney for the Citizens Council.

Sixty-four districts that had already announced plans to desegregate can now go ahead if they choose and not lose the state funds on which the public schools are largely dependent.

The ruling was also the first legal opinion to guide the rest of the state's 2000 school districts. A handful of these districts had said flatly they would not desegregate, but the majority took no action pending some legal clarification.

Sullivan's ruling came in the test suit filed against the Big Spring independent school district.

It specifically denied injunctions that would have:

1. Prevented the integration of the first six grades here.

2. Prevented State Education Commissioner J. W. Edgar and Comptroller Robert Calvert from certifying and paying state funds to districts that desegregated.

Gilford Jones, attorney for the Big Spring district, argued that the United States Supreme Court decision ending segregation in public schools was the "law of the land." He said it was above the state financing law.

He said Big Spring's step toward ending segregation was a moderate one, and nothing more than was required by the Supreme Court decision.

"Instead of keeping it on our necks for some years, 64 school districts in Texas have shown a willingness if permitted to meet the problem as adults," Jones said.

Carlton argued the Supreme Court did not tell anybody they must desegregate, only that the situation be studied.

Integration Delayed in New Orleans Catholic Schools.
NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 27 (AP)—Archbishop Joseph E. Ruffini announced yesterday that racial integration in Catholic schools will not be started in the archdiocese of New Orleans before September 1956.

Catholic Action of the South, official newspaper of the archdiocese of New Orleans, quoted the Roman Catholic prelate as saying the decision to delay integration came "after mature deliberation and consultation."

The weekly newspaper said the United States Supreme Court's ruling on segregation in public schools "is thoroughly in accord with the principles and teachings of the Catholic Church."

But it said immediate integration "would not be prudent or practical chiefly because we are confronted with the tradition of segregation over a period of 150 years."

Four St. Louisans are among a large group of descendants of a Choctaw Indian tribe whose suit against the Federal Government asking $2,000,000 recompense for land alleged to have been taken from them after 1830 is pending before the United States Court of Claims.

One of the four, Mrs. Albert L. Mikes, 578 North Laclede Station road, Webster Groves, said the Government signed treaties with the Choctaws in 1830 granting them large tracts of land, mostly in Mississippi. Later, the treaties were broken by an influx of settlers, and proper repayment was never made, she said.

Last year, Mrs. Mikes said, the Indian Claims Commission awarded the Choctaw descendants more than $400,000. The Government appealed the decision and the plaintiffs then increased the amount of their claim.

The other three St. Louis plaintiffs are relatives of Mrs. Mikes. They are her father, Thomas Baxley, 7212 Lyndover place, Maplewood; her uncle, E. C. Baxley, 412 Couch avenue, Kirkwood, and her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Louis Meyer, 9961 Meadow avenue, Lemay.

WRECKED BRAZIL AIRLINER CARRYING 13 IS SIGHTED
RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 27 (UP)—The wreckage of a Brazilian airliner, missing since yesterday with 13 persons aboard, has been sighted in mountains in the coastal state of Espirito Santo, an airline spokesman said today.

The Cruzeiro do Sul airline said planes flying over the area saw no signs of life. Rescue teams were sent from Castelo to try to reach the crash scene in the Caparao mountains southwest of Victoria.

The plane, a DC-3, was carrying nine passengers and four crew members on a flight between Campos Rio state and Victoria.

REPAIRMAN DIES AT JOB ON MONSANTO PLANT ROOF

Henry W. Dreisewerd, 46 years old, died yesterday apparently of a heart attack when he and another man were repairing an elevator motor on the roof of a Monsanto Chemical Co. warehouse, 1700 South Second street, police reported.

His companion, Cletus Bauer, told police Dreisewerd slumped over while they were working. Both were employed by General Elevator Engineering Co. Firemen lowered Dreisewerd's body from the roof in a rescue bag. He was pronounced dead by a company doctor. He lived at 7815 Cler place, Normandy.

$6900 FIRE LOSS
LAID TO WOMAN ON PARTY LINE

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Aug. 27 (AP)—Because a woman refused to get off her party line yesterday, Fire Chief John W. Gallagher reported, a fire caused $6900 damage before it was brought under control.

Chief Gallagher said a neighbor tried for five minutes to get the woman off the telephone line, but the woman refused. Finally the neighbor sent a youngster to the corner to pull the fire alarm box. One house was destroyed and two others were heavily damaged. The chief reported that the blaze left 19 persons homeless.

"If the department had been called five minutes earlier," he said, "much more could have been saved."

MAKING ATOMIC FUEL USELESS IN ARMS DISCUSSED

30 Scientists, Including Reds, Confer on Safeguards for Nuclear Pool Material.

GENEVA, Aug. 27 (AP)—Communist and Western scientists have compiled a list of technical measures which might be taken jointly to guard against clandestine production of atomic weapons.

Nuclear physicists and chemists of six top atomic nations completed today a week-long secret conference on how to prevent fissionable materials intended for research or industrial purposes from being diverted to military use.

The six countries were the United States, Britain, Canada, France, Russia and Czechoslovakia. The same countries—without Czechoslovakia—are to hold permanent seats in the proposed inter-national atomic energy agency.

Will Control Pool.

The agency, when it is established, will control a pool of fissionable materials contributed by member governments. The pool will be used to fuel nuclear reactors for nations less advanced in the atomic field.

The more "enriched" the fuel, the more efficient the reactors, but the easier it may be to produce clandestine atomic weapons. Without safeguards, reactors in politically unsettled parts of the world might become a potential danger to peace.

"An efficient international system of inspection and control would be one possible safeguard, but establishment of such a system may be a long way off. Some of the countries which look to the proposed agency to supply them with nuclear fuels at present object to any system of control which is not also applicable to the big powers.

The 30 scientists who met here this week maintained secrecy on suggestions for other possible safeguards. The proposals are to be studied by the six governments and be discussed again at the scientific level before the atomic energy agency is set up.

It was understood that the suggestions put forward included various ways of limiting the "richness" of atomic fuels without impairing reactor efficiency or of mixing the fuels in such a way as to make them useless for military purposes.

The United States would probably supply the largest single contribution to the agency's pool. Russia has also declared its readiness, in principle, to contribute to the pool.

Czechoslovakia was included in the talks as an important producer of uranium, some of which would presumably also go into the pool.

Prof. I. I. Rabi, chairman of the general advisory committee of the United States Atomic Energy Commission, headed the American scientists at the talks.

JOHN I. ROLLINGS ARTICLE ON STATE'S LABOR PROGRESS

An article by John I. Rollings, president of the Missouri State Federation of Labor, on the progress of labor in this state is contained in the recent issue of The American Federationist, official monthly publication of the American Federation of Labor.

Rollings disclosed that in less than two years membership of the State federation had been increased from 100,046 to 145,254. He also described in detail activities of the Missouri State Labor League for Political Education, telling of the defeat of so-called "right to work" bills and forecasting increased political activity in the future, especially as to support of gubernatorial candidates.

"Because of our experience with the present governor, who has little respect for the common man of Missouri," Rollings wrote, "we expect to lay the facts coldly before all prospective candidates for Governor and before political leaders. We want to ascertain whether these candidates, if elected governor, would sign bills that the labor movement of Missouri advocates and that the workers of Missouri need. Bills of this kind have been vetoed by Gov. Donnelly."

RENARD HOSPITAL OPEN HOUSE,
BARNES PSYCHIATRIC UNIT

An open house for the public will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. tomorrow at the new Renard Hospital, psychiatric unit of Washington University-Barnes Medical Center, 4940 Audubon avenue. A private open house was held yesterday at the $1,580,000 installation, which will be dedicated formally Oct. 10-11.

Attending yesterday's reception were members of the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Renard, along with other special guests invited by the Corporation of Washington University, the trustees of Barnes Hospital and the faculty of the university's school of medicine. The seven-story, 100-bed hospital will provide space for clinical practice and for research.

Funds for the new hospital were contributed by the Renard family and by the Federal government, which provided matching funds under the Hill-Burton Act. Construction began in 1952. At the public open house tomorrow, visitors will be guided through the hospital by members of the medical school's neuro-psychiatric staff and Joseph T. Greco, associate director of Barnes Hospital.

LATIN AMERICAN GROUP SAYS REDS
CONTROL BOLIVIA

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 27 (UP)—The Second Congress Against Soviet Intervention in Latin America yesterday charged the government of Bolivia is Communist-controlled and therefore imperils the "continental security and liberty" of the Americas.

The charge was made in a resolution, presented by a delegation of Bolivians in exile, adopted at the final session of the congress. Bolivia was not represented, although an invitation to participate was sent to the government.

The resolution accused President Victor Paz Estenssoro of "fomenting Communist action through government measures." It charged that anti-Communist elements in Bolivia are the target of "violent persecution." The anti-Communist leaders from 20 Latin American nations adopted measures to set up an organization to be known as the Inter-American Anti-Communist Confederation for Continental Defense, and approved a plan to organize and improve legal measures to combat Communist activities.

SERIOUSLY INJURED IN FALL

Elmer W. Phillips, a carpenter, was in serious condition at St. Louis County Hospital yesterday after suffering a head injury when he apparently fell down a flight of stairs Friday night at his home, 3936A Council Grove avenue, Pine Lawn.

His wife, Estelle, said after she awoke yesterday and started looking for him she heard a groan and found Phillips at the foot of the stairway. She said on occasion her husband walked in his sleep, but she had not been awakened by noise in the night.

DES MOINES, Aug. 27 (AP)—A visitor at the Iowa State Fair, which opened today, is Alex Mc-Neill, Kodiak, Alaska, who recently retired as a machinist. "I have a weakness for fairs," McNeill explained.

"I go to every one I hear of, and up in Alaska there was not such a thing."

MENON PREDICTS U.S.-RED CHINA ACCORD IN WEEK

MADRAS, India, Aug. 27 (AP)—Indian Prime Minister Nehru's foreign affairs adviser said today the question of repatriating Chinese students in America and American civilians in China would be settled in a week. The forecast was made by V. K. Krishna Menon in an informal address to Madras legislators. United States and Red Chinese ambassadors have been meeting for weeks in Geneva in an attempt to get 41 Americans out of Red China. The Communists have insisted that Chinese students in the United States be sent back to Red China. The United States has said that any student who wants to return may do so. The conferences were reported blocked up to now on the exact role India would play in the repatriation machinery. Significantly, India has said that Communist China is keeping the Indians advised on the course of the talks.

FOUKE FUR CO.'S CONTRACT WITH U.S. IS RENEGOTIATED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27—A government contract with FOUKE Fur Co. of St. Louis has been renegotiated and the terms changed, Assistant Secretary of the Interior Orme Lewis announced today. The company processes and sells government-owned sealskins. Under the new agreement, the company will be paid a flat fee of $15 for each sealskin it processes, plus 17½ per cent of the selling price of each skin. The previous contract called for payment under a complex mathematical formula relating to varying conditions involved in fixing the processor's fee. The company, with offices at 1328 South Kingshighway, will receive a total of $32.50 for each $100 sealskin, under the new contract. The revised agreement is retroactive to last April's auction in St. Louis, at which 24,746 sealskins brought a total of $2,296,737. Lewis said the contract was renegotiated at the company's request, because of increased production costs.

KOREAN TRUCE TEAM MEETS TOMORROW; REDS ACCUSED

mand today called a meeting of the Korean Military Armistice Commission for Monday to discuss "Communist violations of the armistice." Maj. Gen. Harlan C. Parks, senior U.N. delegate to the joint commission said the Panmunjom meeting will begin at 3:30 p.m. Monday.

Downtown Traffic Problem

Third Street Highway to Increase Parking Headache

New Artery to Be Finished in October — Will Bring More Automobiles Into Congested District.

By HARRY WILENSKY
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

THE Third Street Interregional Highway, a ribbon of concrete two miles long and six lanes wide unfurling along the Mississippi riverfront, will be completed in October, opening a new gateway to downtown St. Louis for traffic from the southwest. This $13,500,000 artery, the first new unit in a 46-mile system of expressways, will mark a big step in the program for expediting flow of traffic—but at the same time it may well aggravate the downtown parking headache.

Expressways, being designed to make the central business district more readily accessible to outlying areas, mean more automobiles pouring into the congested district east of Twelfth boulevard. The most recent survey shows that a deficiency of 5678 parking spaces exists here already.

In planning development of the arterial system comprising the Third Street Highway and the Daniel Boone, Mark Twain and Ozark Expressways, engineers gave priority of construction to the Third Street unit in order to ease congestion in the western end of the business district.

Despite its 120-foot width, Twelfth street is taxed to handle the heavy load of traffic during rush hours. With the opening of the Third Street Highway, automobiles coming downtown via Gravois avenue in the morning or using the southwestern exit at the end of the day no longer need be funneled into one dense stream along Twelfth street.

The engineers who designed the St. Louis expressway system took it for granted that large parking areas would be developed near the downtown terminal points. This was an altogether reasonable assumption. Why should a city invest millions of dollars in super-highways if it did not intend to follow through? What would be the point of bringing thousands of additional automobiles downtown if, once dumped onto crowded streets, the vehicles had no place to go?

It is obvious that expansion of parking facilities must go hand in hand with construction of expressways, but after years of discussion the city's downtown parking program is still in the talk stage. No sites for municipal garages have been selected, much less acquired. The city has no parking authority set up to build facilities and oversee their operation. It lacks enabling legislation needed to finance construction of garages.

As a result, the parking situation presents a series of mounting worries.

City officials believe that opening of the Third Street Highway, by diverting traffic from Twelfth street, will create a demand for 1000 additional parking spaces in the eastern end of the downtown district.

They know that this demand will skyrocket when the new artery is linked with the Mark Twain Expressway on the north and with the Ozark Expressway on the south.

And they shudder to think what would happen if Congress, in response to the pleas of civic interests, authorized development of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial, thereby depriving the city of the huge parking lot which accommodates more than 4000 automobiles on the riverfront site cleared for the memorial years ago.

DEVELOPMENT of the memorial is blocked by the decision of Congress to appropriate no funds for the project until the federal budget has been balanced. The Chamber of Commerce, however, plans a big industrial and agricultural exposition to be held for one month each year on the riverfront. This "Mid-America Jubilee," scheduled for its first showing in September 1956, will step up the demand for parking in the area.

The Missouri-Illinois Bi-State Development Agency has proposed construction of an underground garage with space for 3670 automobiles off Third street beneath the memorial site. Included was a suggestion that moving sidewalks of the conveyor-belt type carry customers from the garage through an underground passageway as far west as Eighth street.

Underground construction is costly, and such a project might require $10,000,000. After inspecting underground garages in California, Bi-State Agency officials said they were convinced that this type of facility was desirable for St. Louis.

The Union Square Garage in San Francisco and the Pershing Square Garage in Los Angeles were built under city-owned land, and the subsurface rights were leased to private corporations created for the purpose. A major part of the funds needed was raised through loans from insurance companies, and downtown business firms supplied the "equity capital" in return for junior securities.

The suggestion that this method of financing a riverfront garage be tried here has produced no results. Nor has any headway been made by a proposal for a huge underground garage beside Kiel Auditorium.

Aerial view of Third Street Interregional Highway as it nears completion. Starting at Washington avenue (lower right), expressway sweeps past crowded parking lot on the riverfront, then mounts a viaduct which carries it under Terminal Railroad tracks and approach to MacArthur Bridge. At southern end, a depressed roadway carries the artery under Lafayette avenue to connections with Gravois avenue at Twelfth street (top). Y-shaped buildings of Joseph M. Darst public housing project are seen at upper right.

Postmaster Bernard F. Dickmann for years has been urging construction of parking facilities under the area extending from Twelfth to Twentieth and from Market to Pine streets. There could be connections to Union Station, the Main Post Office, the Auditorium, the Municipal Courts Building, City Hall, the Federal Building and the Civil Courts Building.

Such a garage, suggested by the City Plan Commission in 1947, also would be convenient to the Daniel Boone Expressway terminus at Eleventh and Clark streets.

Kansas City has just built an underground garage beside its municipal auditorium on the edge of the downtown shopping district. Pittsburgh has municipal garages, including an underground facility, in the heart of the city. New York is considering construction of an underground garage at the Brooklyn Civic Center.

But the local association of garage owners and parking lot operators argues that such public facilities are not needed in St. Louis. Private interests could handle the parking problem here "if the city would remove itself as a potential competitor," it contends.

Asked what would happen to the 4000 automobiles now parked on the riverfront if the municipal lot were eliminated, the association replies that the all-day parker should be forced to use public transportation.

"When they can no longer park for 25 cents (the all-day fee on the riverfront), up to 50 per cent of these motorists would not bring their cars downtown," a spokesman asserts. The private operators would be glad to accommodate the remainder of the all-day parkers—for a price.

Meanwhile, private parking rates have been going up. A number of lots have eliminated the all-day fee and are charging on an hourly basis. Many operators who formerly charged 25 or 35 cents for two hours' parking now collect the same fee for one hour.

Mayor Raymond R. Tucker does not subscribe to the theory that the way to solve the parking problem is to discourage people from driving downtown. He considers it the city's duty to provide facilities in areas where private enterprise does not meet the need.

The Third Street Highway, extending from Washington avenue to the intersection of Twelfth and Gravois, embodies three types of expressway construction: It runs at ground level from Washington to the Terminal Railroad's elevated tracks; from this point to Eighth and Barry streets it is elevated, the 3800-foot viaduct passing under the approach to MacArthur Bridge and over several streets, including Broadway; then the artery continues to its southern terminus as a depressed roadway.

As it approaches its northern end, the expressway widens to eight lanes to feed traffic into and out of the downtown district. Electric signals govern turns at Walnut, Market, Chestnut, Pine, Olive and Locust streets. There also is a turnoff at Park avenue, where ramps provide a connection for MacArthur Bridge traffic.

CONSTRUCTION of the expressway cost $10,000,000 in state and federal funds. Right-of-way cost approximately $3,500,000, with the city paying one-third.

It took four years to build the highway after a two-year delay in starting construction. Demolition of residential property along the route was blocked from 1949 to 1951 by the State Legislature at the instigation of the late Senator Anthony M. Webb, who contended that the housing shortage was too acute to evict poor people from their homes. The long steel strike and other labor troubles delayed completion by more than a year.

The state hopes to proceed much faster with the Mark Twain Expressway. A construction contract for the first leg, a half-mile viaduct along old Commission Row, is to be let in February or March.

There is parking space for 800 automobiles under the Third Street Highway and on strips of land beside the expressway, but whether all this will be used is uncertain. When the state recently offered a 10-year lease on 30,000 square feet of parking space under the viaduct between Gratiot and Lombard streets, there were no bidders. At present a trucking firm is leasing space for 50 machines on a temporary basis.

Ramp Buildings Corp., employed to make an engineering study of the city's parking problems, has recommended construction of four garages and a big parking lot in the downtown area as a start. These would provide accommodations for 2052 automobiles at a cost of $5,576,000.

The traffic engineers proposed a garage at Third and Locust; another at Sixth and Pine; a third in the block bounded by Market, Chestnut, Eighth and Ninth, and a fourth in the block bounded by Delmar, Lucas, Eighth and Ninth. The parking lot would take up the entire block bounded by Tenth, Eleventh, Market and Chestnut.

The Mayor's Off-Street Parking Commission, set up as an advisory body, is not satisfied with all these locations, and further studies are being made. The big problem, however, is not sites but financing.

The State Legislature has authorized St. Louis to issue revenue bonds to finance construction of off-street parking facilities. If these facilities could not be profitably leased to private operators, the city would have right to operate the garages itself.

The parking commission believes additional legislation is needed: To develop parking facilities in outlying shopping districts, the city seeks the right to condemn residential property; furthermore, it wants authority to pledge future income from parking meters for retirement of revenue bonds issued to finance garage construction.

Bills to provide these powers were introduced in the Legislature but failed to pass.

THE CITY'S receipts from parking meters, which are earmarked for traffic improvements, now amount to $330,000. Revenue from this source could be utilized to buy property and construct garages, so long as it was not used for retirement of revenue bonds, but a parking facility of any size would call for more money than can be accumulated from the 8000 parking meters.

In its planning the parking commission is concentrating on the needs of the short-term parker, the shopper. It is impressed by studies indicating that, unless a parking facility is within 650 feet of a shopping center, it will not be popular.

The commission believes that any municipal garage erected downtown would require capital over and above what the facility could bring in. An earning rate of 1.25 or 1.30 per cent, a recent estimate, would not be attractive to a private operator unless bolstered by additional commitments.

Business establishments which would benefit from development of downtown parking facilities may be asked to help the city with the financing. In Philadelphia, merchants have established a revolving fund for loans to the city's parking authority.

It took St. Louis 27 years to get the Third Street Highway, an improvement first proposed by the City Plan Commission in 1928. The city cannot afford to wait this long to meet its parking needs—needs which are acute already, and will become ever more pressing with each new mile of expressway.

President's Authority To Carry Out Arms Inspection Proposal May Be Challenged

Legality of Trading Defense Blueprints With Russia, Allowing Soviet Air Inspection, Is Not Certain—Opposition by Some Republicans Seen—Discussion By U.N. Disarmament Subcommittee Begins Monday.

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.

IT is one thing to permit administrators of the Soviet Union's agricultural program to visit the United States so they may view with awe the tall corn of Iowa and the fat hogs in Chicago's stockyards. It is quite another to give the Soviet Union blueprints of United States defense installations and permit the Russians to make aerial photographs of those installations.

Hence, if President Eisenhower presses his sweeping proposals to the Russians for an unprecedented exchange of vital military and defense information he may run into serious challenges in some quarters at home as to his authority to pledge the United States to such a radical program.

THE FIRST ROUND TABLE discussion at the international level of the President's proposal since he offered it at the Big Four conference in Geneva July 21 is scheduled to begin Monday at a meeting of the United Nations disarmament subcommittee.

Harold Stassen, the President's special assistant on disarmament matters, who is sometimes referred to as the "Secretary of Peace," will present the President's plan in detail.

But the blueprints which the President would exchange and the installations he would uncover for aerial photograph are, theoretically at least, hermetically sealed behind federal espionage and security laws against the intimate knowledge of all but a few highly placed Americans.

With some qualifications, these laws forbid the very type of activity which the President proposes and were enacted to prevent anyone, under serious penalties, from performing these functions.

The key to whether the gathering and transmitting of defense information to the Russians, or permitting them to do it, would involve violations of the federal statutes appears to hinge on the question of intent.

The punitive provisions of the law apply to those engaged in such activity "for the purpose of obtaining information respecting the national defense with intent or reason to believe that the information is to be used to the injury of the United States or to the advantage of any foreign nation."

Thus it may be argued that:

1. There could be no imputing to the President of the United States any intent to prejudice the safety or interests of the United States or to benefit any foreign government to the detriment of the United States.

2. The proscribed intent could not be attributed to acts done with the sanction of the President of the United States.

3. That under the President's proposal the information to be obtained by aerial reconnaissance would be used, not to the injury of the United States or to the advantage of Soviet Russia, but rather to the advantage of world peace.

As the record stands now, President Eisenhower offered an arms inspection proposal to the Russians in these words:

"I propose that we take a practical step . . . immediately. These steps would include: To give each other a complete blueprint of our military establishments . . . from one end of our countries to the other. Next, to provide within our countries facilities for aerial photography to the other country . . . by this step (we would) convince the world that we are providing against the possibility of great surprise attack, thus lessening danger and relaxing tensions. Likewise, we will make more easily obtainable a comprehensive and effective system of inspection and disarmament, because what I propose, I assure you, would be but a beginning."

The President suggested to Russia's Bulganin, Khrushchev and Molotov that "we gain an arrangement, very quickly, as between ourselves—immediately."

Placing the President's proposal side by side with the United States code we find this:

"Title 18, Sec. 793:

"Whoever for the purpose of obtaining information respecting the national defense . . . goes upon, enters, flies over or otherwise obtains any information concerning any vessel, aircraft, work of defense, navy yard, naval station, submarine base, fueling station, fort, battery, torpedo station, dockyard, canal, railroad, arsenal, camp, factory, mine, telegraph, telephone, wireless or signal station, building, office, research laboratory or station or other place connected with the national defense, owned or constructed or in the process of construction by the United States or under the control of the United States . . .

"Whoever . . . copies, takes, makes or obtains or attempts to obtain any sketch, photograph, photographic negative, blueprint . . .

" . . . Shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both."

There are six other sections in the code specifically proscribing photographing and sketching defense installations, gathering or delivering defense information to aid a foreign government, use of aircraft for photographing defense installations, publication and sale of photographs of defense installations, disclosure of classified information by government officer or employee.

Moreover, there are the espionage and security provisions of the atomic energy act which parallel the provisions of the United States code but which are, in many instances, much more severe.

Again, in evaluating the President's proposals against the proscriptions in federal law it must be remembered that "intent" by the person or persons engaged in the activities determines whether the actions are violative.

The manner in which the President may eventually decide the projected plan should be effectuated will have an important bearing on whether he will run into legal trouble.

He suggested the plan as the basis for a bilateral agreement by the United States and the Soviet Union. If this agreement were arrived at by treaty, ratified by the Senate, there would be no question, in the view of some lawyers, of anything in the treaty being unlawful, since the treaty would supersede any existing statutes to the extent that the statutes and the treaty were in conflict.

In the absence of a treaty three courses would be open to the President:

To make an executive agreement with the Russian leaders, which would be entered into only after he and his advisers determined that such an agreement was fully within the scope of the executive authority.

To seek a congressional resolution specifically authorizing him to enter into the agreement.

To obtain amendment by Congress of the United States code to resolve any question that the exchange of information with Russia would conflict with the law.

There is reason to doubt that President Eisenhower would assume full responsibility for such an important step as an executive agreement with Soviet Union without requiring Congress to share the responsibility with him.

Should the President seek a congressional resolution on the blueprint plan, it would have to clear the Foreign Relations Committee. There he probably would run into bitter opposition from such Republican Senators as William Knowland, of California, Homer Capehart of Indiana and Bourke Hickenlooper of Iowa, who appear at times to feel that it would be all right for the President to use his executive powers to make war on the Communists but not to make peace with them.

ANOTHER FACTOR which might militate against an executive agreement without an authorizing resolution is that in questions of foreign policy, the President depends heavily on Democrats in the Senate. He and his advisers might reason, therefore, that as a matter of good public relations and in the interest of continuing bipartisanship such an abrupt revision of foreign policy, and domestic policy as well, should not be undertaken without prior consultation with the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Should the President ask Congress to amend the United States code to resolve any possible conflict between his project and the federal laws and thus permit him to go ahead with an agreement with the Russians, the legislation would have to be passed on by the Judiciary Committee.

There he would encounter the displeasure of Senators Herman Welker of Idaho; William E. Jenner of Indiana; Arthur Watkins of Utah; Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois and John Marshall Butler of Maryland, all Republicans. In varying degrees all of these Senators agree with Senator John W. Bricker of Ohio that when it comes to making executive agreements or treaties, especially with Russia, the President's wings should be clipped.

President Eisenhower is not the first American by any means to suggest that a plan of some kind providing for exchange of information and mutual inspection might be worked out with Russia, looking toward easing of tensions and some type of disarmament.

In 1946, David E. Lillenthal and Dean Acheson submitted a report to President Truman which dwelt on such a possibility with emphasis on the atomic arms race. Later, Bernard Baruch, representing the United States at the United Nations on atomic matters, submitted a plan bearing his name in which were incorporated many of the Acheson-Lillenthal ideas.

In 1951, Acheson, then Secretary of State under President Truman, offered the U.N. General Assembly an outline for a plan for exchange of blueprints on military buildups aimed at atomic and non-atomic disarmament.

All of these undertakings fell by the wayside under the bitter scorn by Russia and her satellites.

Many observers express the opinion that President Eisenhower doesn't have to worry about complications on the home front since the Russians probably won't agree this time, either.

President Eisenhower may or may not feel the same way about it.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Footnote on an Old Home

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I was born in the old sturdy home on East Watson road, Crestwood, as were my brother, my mother and grandfather.

The house was built in 1833 and was originally a log house. About 1890 it was covered with weatherboards and the old logs removed. The Sturdys were married in Harpers Ferry, Va. (now West Virginia), and migrated to Missouri in a covered wagon, arriving here in 1831. They had 14 children, seven sons and seven daughters. The sons all lived to marry.

My grandfather, Thomas Daniel Sturdy, was the second youngest son, and at the time of his mother's death in 1879 asked for and received the home place. My mother inherited it from him, and at her death in 1935, my brother, Harold Sturdy Smith, and I inherited it.

Five years ago, the proposed Ozark Expressway was surveyed through the acreage on which the house stands, the highway cutting the place in two diagonally. This meant there would not be enough ground for the dairy that my brother was then operating so he put the place up for sale.

It grieves me deeply to see the house go. It is home. As a small child I roamed the house and barns, climbed the trees and fell in the creek.

As a young woman, I helped my brother establish the Sturdy Farm Dairy, churning butter, washing bottles, cooling milk in an old ice cooler, to say nothing of cleaning coal oil lamps, wrestling with a troublesome oil stove and drawing every bit of water from the old well with a windlass and a bucket.

When I would say something about the work, my granddaddy would tell me how his mother stood at the door of the first house with a gun to keep wolves away (hearsay for him), and how she would hitch up the horse and drive two miles for water, shear the sheep, card and spin the wool and then make pants for seven sons, plus all the other things a pioneer had to do.

As far as I know, and I believe I have probably the only original papers left, the Sturdys were never slave owners. (The slave owning part of the family was my grandmother's family. She was Mary Elizabeth Thompson Sturdy.) Nor did the house ever have gold knobs.

To anyone of the family or anyone interested, the Sturdy family cemetery, now completely surrounded by a subdivision, is a quarter mile east of the house. There you will find the graves of Oswald Sturdy, his wife, Susan Ann Catherine Kramer Sturdy; John O. Sturdy, the first policeman killed in St. Louis; my grandparents, Thomas Daniel and Mary Elizabeth Sturdy; my parents, Lott and Louisa C. Smith, and my son, Robert Thomas Berndt, who makes the fifth generation to be buried there; plus all the other Sturdys and in-laws.

The cemetery is still in use and is the care and charge of the family to be kept clean and cherished for the generations of future Sturdys, who might care to be buried there—including myself.

MARY ALICE SMITH BERNDT.

Speaking of Pairs

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
In your Aug. 8 editorial on congressional attendance, you appear to include a "paired" Congressman as fulfilling his duty at vote time.

While I have no argument with a "live pair," which goes on record as indicating a yea or nay and which does negate a pair of the opposite vote, I do object to the general pair. The general pair does no such thing. Rather it assumes 100 per cent contradictory party votes.

The general pair negates no vote and is as good as an absence as far as the Congressman's constituents are concerned.

Sunday Night Sports

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Do you remember the uproar by church people over the proposal that the Cards play Sunday night baseball? Now what do we have? Good church people are staging Sunday night football game. Is there any difference? W. S. GWALTNEY.

Certainly He'll Run

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Will Ike run again? What a silly question! Of course, he'll run again. The G.O.P. tycoons who are administering this country in their own image will make him run again. They waited 20 agonizing years to turn the clock back, and they're not going to lose their only chance to finish the job.

If the people of the United States are naive enough to elect a big, hollow myth to the presidency for another four years, we probably deserve to have most of the progress of the past 20 years cancelled and the responsibility for world leadership assumed by some forward looking power as it surely will be.

MRS. ROBERT D. KREIGH.

Sanity Restored

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I think that President Eisenhower has done more towards restoring sanity in regard to the Russians, than would have been possible under any other leadership. Imagine Harry Truman or Adlai Stevenson having Gen. Zhukov for a pen pal. Or anyone other than Henry Wallace inviting the Russian farmers to Iowa?

In Response to Geneva

The four heads of government, desirous of removing the threat of war and lessening the burden of armaments, —convinced of the necessity, for secure peace and for the welfare of mankind, of achieving a system for the control and reduction of all armaments and armed forces under effective safeguards,

—recognizing that achievements in this field would release vast material resources to be devoted to the peaceful economic development of nations, for raising their well-being, as well as for assistance to underdeveloped countries.

In these words President Eisenhower and Premiers Bulganin, Eden and Faure at Geneva five weeks ago set forth the purposes for which they ordered a new attack on the problem of disarmament. It is to follow out their directive that the subcommittee of the United Nations Disarmament Commission will resume meetings at U.N. headquarters in New York tomorrow.

Nobody who has followed the intricate and often disappointing course of disarmament negotiations since 1945 expects that these new meetings can produce a sensational success overnight. It is unlikely, indeed, that the U.N. subcommittee will have any tangible achievements of a major character to report to the Big Four foreign ministers in October.

Disarmament is perhaps the single most difficult problem facing the big powers. Sound and durable agreements in this field most probably will take years, rather than weeks or months, to reach.

Nevertheless it is none too soon to get started on what the whole world hopes will be a new phase of the negotiations. The very fact that the Big Four heads of government issued a strong directive on the subject has already had beneficial results. The United States delegation is presenting a comprehensive new disarmament plan, and doubtless the Russians will have something fresh to say also.

Anything which causes both sides to review their past positions and make an effort toward bridging differences is worth while. The Big Four initiative appears to have had this result at least.

Nor can it be denied that during the past few months considerable progress has been made in finding common ground on issues which for so long seemed to defy solution.

The Russians now accept the idea of a reduction in armed forces which would bring about rough equality between East and West, whereas they used to insist on the kind of reduction that would increase their own relative power. They have also come round to the idea of balanced disarmament in atomic and conventional weapons alike, instead of demanding atomic disarmament first—which, again, would increase their own relative power.

And progress has been made—on paper at least—on the most important issue of all—that of international inspection to guarantee that any disarmament agreement was being observed. President Eisenhower is proposing reciprocal aerial surveillance of each party's military installations, and the Soviets have proposed the admission of international inspectors to key airports, industrial centers, ports and railroad terminals.

These plans are a long way apart. Neither has yet been spelled out sufficiently to assure that they would accomplish the main purpose of providing the "effective safeguards" mentioned in the Big Four directive. But the fact that specific plans for inspection are now being broached and discussed is in itself a gain.

Let us hope that this gain, and others too, will be broadened by the negotiations beginning at U.N. headquarters tomorrow.

What to Apologize For

India's Ambassador Mehta has now been suitably, we trust, with official and unofficial apologies for the Houston incident.

The Ambassador and a secretary, stopping at the Houston airport on the way to Mexico, were mistaken for Negroes by the lady manager of the airport restaurant, and ushered into a segregated dining room. She operated so smoothly that the Ambassador at first thought he was being honored with a proffer of privacy.

As usual, a great many of the apologies seem to be based on the premise that it was a terrible thing for two important Indians to be treated as if they were Negroes. When will Houston, and the United States at large, learn that the real thing to apologize for is treating unimportant Negroes as Negroes?

Formula for Palestine

The statesmanlike proposal of Secretary of State Dulles for stabilization of Israeli-Arab relations brought immediate—and perhaps inevitable—speculation about its motivations. One of these theories is that the United States hopes to check an increase of Russian influence in the region. Another is that new clashes in the Gaza area have increased fears of an all-out renewal of war between Arab and Jew. And still another suggests that French troubles in North Africa have convinced Great Britain as well as the United States that they must eliminate the risk of further anti-Western disturbances.

It is of relatively slight importance which, if any, of these ideas was uppermost in Mr. Dulles's thoughts. The situation was serious before any of these considerations assumed prime importance. So instead of searching motives, we hope that the plan will be accepted.

Even though not spelled out to the last detail, it covers the chief requirements of a Palestinian peace. First, Mr. Dulles offers help in working out permanent boundaries and a guarantee against their violation by either side. He also proposes compensation and resettlement of the unhappy Arab refugees driven out of Israel, this to be facilitated by a generous loan. And as a last point he suggests definite acceptance of an international Jordan Valley Tava as the best means of raising the area's living standards and thus reducing its conflicts. Here again the United States can be of practical help.

Properly enough, Mr. Dulles—speaking with the President's authorization—did not assign an exclusive role to the United States. Instead he asked for the co-operation of other powers, and favorable responses already have come from the British Foreign Office and from the United Nations' Dag Hammarskjöld. No agreement to discuss the proposals has come as yet from the Arab governments or from Israel. This may be delayed until Ben-Gurion's new Israeli government takes office. But refusal would be a flagrant denial of the desire for peace.

Fear of an expansionist Israel or of an irrevocable and vengeful Arab combination has darkened all Middle Eastern prospects since the acceptance of the U.N.-sponsored truce. Mr. Dulles's definite guarantee against aggression should lift this curse, and his suggestions for solving the refugee problem and for developing the resources of the area should substantially reduce the danger of new disagreements. Only the most deep-seated and obstinate prejudice can spurn such a hopeful offer. And the Middle East is too poor to afford the perverse luxury of abiding hate.

Political Puzzle Amid Sunflowers

Gov. Fred Hall of Kansas has upset many of his Republican colleagues. He discouraged them by being elected in the first place, after disunion split party ranks. He dismayed them by vetoing a "right-to-work" bill aimed at organized labor. He annoyed them by handling patronage without reference to the party committee. And now he is trying to oust several officials who claim tenure.

What is the matter in Kansas? The state and its independent governor are receiving national attention, and puzzled political observers can only note that next year the Jayhawkers will elect a Governor and Senator. Gov. Hall, they think, is strengthening his position to strive for one or the other, probably the former, since Senator Frank Carlson has a good grip on his post.

This is a purely factional fight. Gov. Hall, and behind him Alf Landon, 1936 presidential candidate, appear to be challenging party control by Senator Carlson and National Committeeman Harry Darby. The final test may be control of the 1956 national convention delegation. If President Eisenhower runs again, then each faction will try to appear more pro-Eisenhower than the other. If the President does not run, there will be a free-for-all among the sunflowered delegates.

Kansans are accustomed to such factionalism, for it is a natural outgrowth of a one-party state. Kansas has given the nation not only a Republican president but a complete G.O.P. congressional delegation. The Democrats represent perhaps two fifths of the Kansas electorate, but their power is concentrated in the cities and elsewhere their organization is weak. The Democrats generally have won the governorship only when the G.O.P. or wheat prices fell apart. Even then they did not often win the Legislature.

Kansas is, in short, a Northern switch on the Southern one-party system. Kansas Republicans, like Southern Democrats, have their ins and outs and old guards and young Turks and so on. Where one party rules, the meaningful political fight develops inside that party, and sometimes it does not make much difference which party. Aside from that, we do not know what is wrong with Kansas any more than the Kansans do.

St. Louis Sits for a Portrait

St. Louis has been done handsomely by in the sixteenth of a series of pamphlets on Missouri published by the Missouri State Division of Resources and Development. Beautiful photographs beautifully reproduced, many of them in color, have distinguished the entire series; but in the St. Louis booklet the Division seems really to have outdone itself.

How many St. Louisans already knew their city is the world's largest market for raw furs, the world's largest producer of sugar-mill machinery, stoves and ranges, woodenware, brick and terra-cotta? This booklet, issued in co-operation with the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis, has many other interesting—and prideful—facts to tell also.

Our city is the second largest rail center in the United States, and the second largest motor carrier center on the continent with 5000 trucks a day. It is among the top five farm markets, the ninth largest manufacturing center in the United States and, through the assembly plants located in the area, second in production of motor cars. The nearby canal around the Chain of Rocks in the Mississippi river north of St. Louis is equipped with the largest navigation lock in the hemisphere, 1200 feet; and the mechanized mail handling facility under Union Station is the world's largest.

Logic, Once Over

In the upside-down land of South Africa, the Supreme Court has added a new syllogism to the law. Failing to return a borrowed book, says the Supreme Court, can not be theft because, if it were, then half the lawyers of South Africa (including the judge writing the decision) would be thieves; and that, of course, is unthinkable.

The syllogism runs like this: A lawyer cannot be a thief; some lawyers keep books that do not belong to them; therefore, keeping a book that does not belong to one can not be theft. Q.E.D.

Mr. Humphrey's Tax Promise

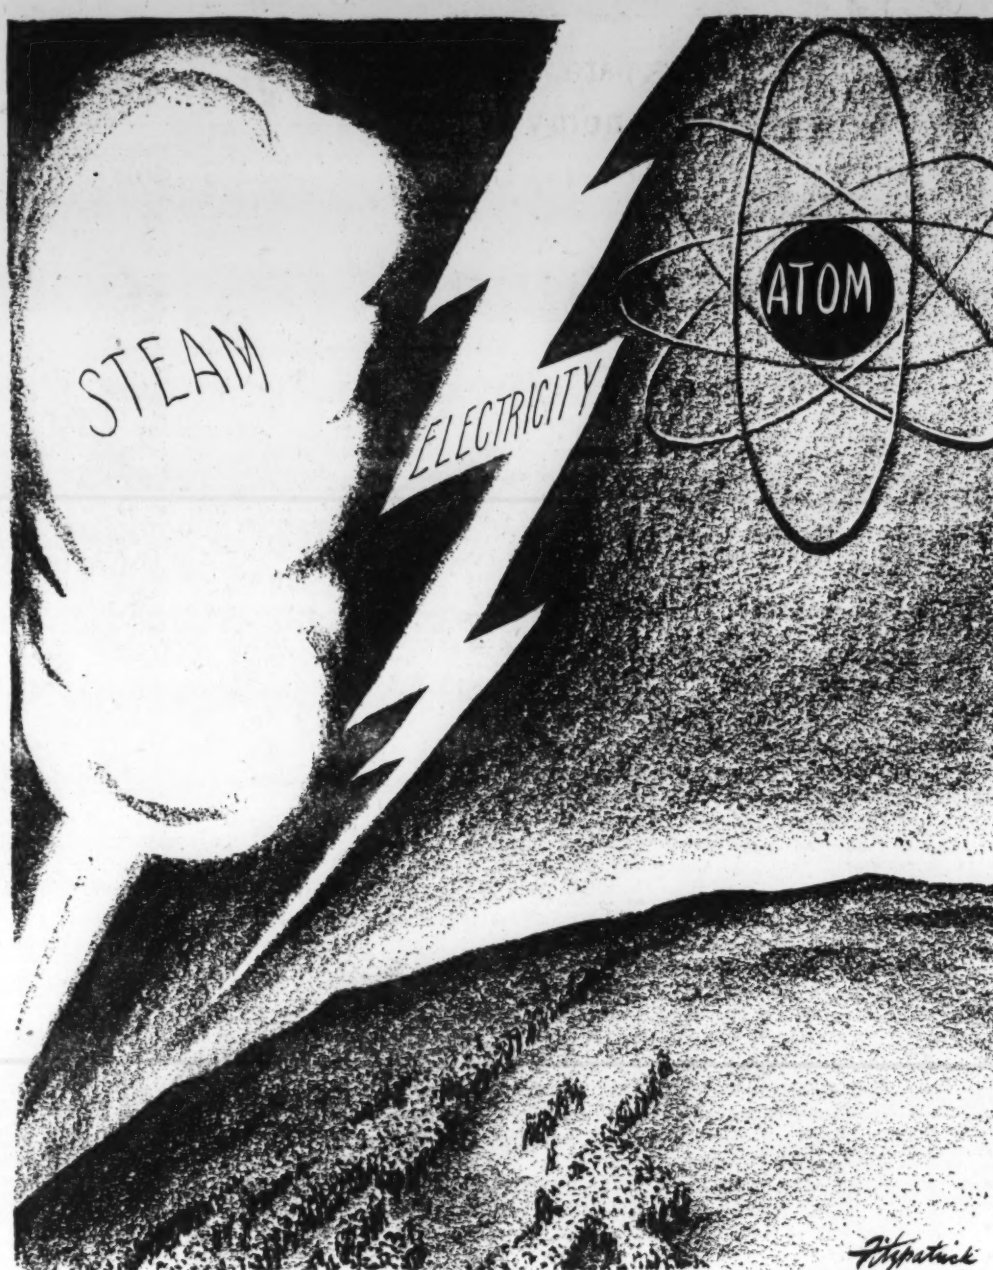

It is rather strange to find Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey joining the ranks of those who hold out the promise of a tax cut next year. Could it be that Mr. Humphrey, too, cannot forget that 1956 is an election year?

The Secretary, in commenting on revised budget estimates, approaches the subject more cautiously than some. He says a balanced budget must definitely be in sight before taxes are cut. That is a good deal sounder attitude than was taken by the House Democratic leadership, which last spring tried to rush through a predated tax cut before anybody could know whether a balanced budget would be in sight next year or not.

Even so, it seems to us that Mr. Humphrey also is getting ahead of himself. What has become of the sacred objective of reducing the national debt? When the Republicans were out and the Democrats in, this was supposed to be one of the first ends of sound finance. Now Mr. Humphrey says reduction of the debt must wait a more tranquil world and a lesser defense burden. What has led him to decide that it is reduction of the debt that must wait, instead of tax cuts?

There is another and more urgent reason for restraint in promising tax cuts now. Surely one of the main considerations to be studied next year is the state of the national economy. If the economy is expanding at an unhealthy rate, showing symptoms of runaway boom, surely it would be folly to inject the added stimulant of tax reductions. On the contrary, in such circumstances it would be the duty of the Government to maintain present taxes or even increase some of them. And how can Secretary Humphrey know, in August 1955, whether the economic situation in 1956 will permit sound tax cuts?

Anybody who has followed the course of tax legislation in even-numbered (i.e., election) years knows that Congress will be heavily predisposed to cut taxes in 1956, whatever the state of the budget, whatever the state of the economy. But the Secretary of the Treasury ought to take a broader view. Is it possible that three years in politics have tainted Mr. Humphrey with political reactions?

YESTERDAY, TODAY, AND TOMORROW

Security Does Not Mean Safety

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Distinguished attorney finds both cruelty and foolishness in 50 "security risk" cases; boards are investigating men's minds and their relatives; secrecy handicaps program; our courts are good because public can see them; urges publicity for security work.

Charles P. Curtis in The Saturday Review

Editor's note: Charles P. Curtis is a well-known Boston attorney and author. World War I veteran, former member of the Harvard Corporation and former special assistant in the State Department. His latest book, "The Oppenheimer Case" (Simon and Schuster) will be published soon.

I have just finished reading a series of brief accounts of 50 cases in our federal personnel security program. They are not, of course, enough to support any final judgment on our security system, but they are enough to give any man pause.

No one knows how many cases of the kind represented in this collection have been decided since the security system spread through the Federal Government more than seven years ago. We do know that some 10,000,000 men and women, one out of six in our working population, are subject to some kind of security test.

If "derogatory information" relating to the present or past activities of the individual himself, or some friend or relative, turns up in the file he may be suspended from his job and required to prove to a security board that his continued employment is "clearly consistent with the national security."

Let me say at once, to begin with, that the people who are administering our security system have not had the benefit of being watched.

Secrecy and Complacency

There are some things our public officials do best in secret, some few things. Passing judgment on their fellow citizens is not one of them.

A good half of the reasons why our judicial system is admirable is that we are watching it. We can come and go, in and out of its courtrooms, and we watch our judges from the jury box. Our security system suffers under the handicap of secrecy and isolation.

If an employee is disloyal the sooner the Government gets rid of him the better, but it is as easy to be sanctimonious about loyalty as it is about honesty, and security in fact has a way of turning into a sense of security, or even into complacency. Let's see just what sorts of charges were made in these 50 cases. They fall into four lots.

One lot is the charge that the employee has been, no matter when or how long ago it was, a Communist. There were only five, possibly six, cases in these fifty where it was charged that the employee had ever been a member of the party; and in four of them the employee was cleared.

'Associated With Your Father'

We've pretty well got rid of ex-Communists as well as current Communists now that the Government has persuaded itself that membership in the Communist party is a chronic and incurable disease. But a card-carrying Communist has become too rare a dish to content us.

A second lot of cases rests on the charge that the employee has been a member of a subversive organization, that is, one of those listed as such by the Attorney General, or by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, or by the California Committee on Un-American Activities.

Three of these cases struck me particularly, but perhaps only because I am a lawyer. For in these three cases the subversive organization was the International Workers Order, and the Supreme Court had held that the act of the Attorney General in so listing it was "arbitrary and unauthorized."

A third lot is the well-known matter of associations. "Sympathetic associations" is the usual phrase. I was startled by the inclusion of an employee's family in this category of derogatory associations. It was logical, and the more logical the more ruthless.

In one case a typist in the Signal Corps was charged with being a security risk solely on account of his association with his parents. "You are closely associated with your father, who reported—"

He was cleared, but the course of the hearing led the board's attorney into an inquiry about the dates the man had made with Japanese girls during the Korean War, where he had won the Bronze Star, about his reading habits, what he thought of the Marshall Plan, the Truman doctrine, tidelands oil, and the Army-McCarthy hearings.

Searching a Man's Future?

Finally, of course, there are all the things a man has said, as reported by people who claim to have heard them. You can't say they are not relevant, assuming they were in fact said, to what he might do in the future, but some of the boards go beyond speculation.

One chairman said, "The basis for the security program as it is set up is not to determine whether he is or might be disloyal, but whether there is any doubt as to his loyalty under any foreseeable circumstances."

One charge against a postal clerk was this: "In 1950 Communist literature was observed in the bookshelves and Communist art was seen on the walls of your residence." Yes, he owned the Modern Library edition of "Das Kapital," and there were reproductions of Picasso, Matisse, Renoir and Modigliani in the sitting room.

We have, I think, a deep feeling that this is wrong, but we are inquiring into what a man or a woman might do in the future, and not simply into what they did do in the past. How can we help judge the individual as well as what he has done? But if we are going to pass judgment on the individual, he is laid on his back on a couch, not standing in the dock. And everything is relevant.

The Assumption of Guilt

Again and again the employee asks who it is that says these things about him, things he can't remember, things he knows are not true, and yet cannot refute or explain, but only deny. He is bitterly aware how ineffective a general denial always is, however vehement, against a specific and particular assertion, however false.

It seems to me that this assumption of the guilt of the employee is the root of the evil in our security system.

A tribunal, making an inquiry, as well as when judging a case, is helped and not hampered by fair dealing. Due process of law is not required of our courts simply for the sake of litigants, nor simply out of compassion for those charged with crime. Due process of law, and here a fair treatment of government employees, is a good way to get to the truth of the matter.

Open the hearings, so far as the classified material will permit, to the public. Drop the pretense that the secrecy is for the protection of the employee who is being investigated. Tell the boards that we want their reasons as well as their conclusions.

After all, what is needed is no more than the yeast of a little courage to raise the good bread of common sense. And that we never forget what Benjamin Franklin wrote long ago: "The way to be safe is never to be secure."

Miriam in a Coonskin Cap

From The Christian Science Monitor

Miriam in a coonskin cap averts complacencies of map which call a town by quiet name to prove the territory tame.

Avenues urbane with speed pound like buffalo stampede, trolleys on a polished track growl behind the walker's back, intersections loom a maze of forest prime to human gaze.

Miriam in a coonskin cap meets the barrier, makes the gap, moves with foot and fanfare free past provincially across macadam wilderness of homely street and known address, red light, green light only star to steer a stanch discoverer through dim defile and lonely pass (to underbrush of Brookline, Mass.).

Thus Miriam by coonskin rule hews a frontier way to school.

From The New York Herald Tribune

"Pluto, for all your wit as poodle And zeal for sound, you seem a noodle To bark, as dogs will bark for ever Across a summer-shining river. It is your echoed self you hear, It is your frenzied self you fear; The crystal mockeries of distance Evoke this comic, grim persistence."

"Master, for all your wit as thinker And keenness as a beauty-drinker, You seem a bigger kind of noodle Than any of the race of poodle: You rave and rhyme and walk and stare For words which never flashed on air, Your snatches of immortal choirs Are echoes of your own desires."

A SUCCESSION of American ambassadors has used every form of push and persuasion since 1945 to try to end Italy's chronic unemployment and improve the miserable lot of the lowest one-third of this seriously over-populated country. To this end the United States has spent several billion dollars and substantial help in one form or another is still coming in.

Despite this intensive effort, it has often seemed that the fundamental relationships remained unchanged, with the rich getting richer and the poor, if not poorer, anyway little more aware of their poverty and therefore more inclined to fall for the gaudy promises of Communism. One handicap has been an owning class of the most reckless irresponsibility. While they are small in numbers they have advertised their indifference to Italy's future with a gay abandon that the more profligate Roman emperors might have envied.

In recent years, the Roman tax collector has published figures showing what most of the wealthy declare as their income and what the collector, by diligent effort, estimates is their real income. On the last list of Rome's greatest aristocrats, Prince Alessandro Torlonia, was shown to have listed an income of $17,000, while the tax collector put his income at $1,279,000. On $17,000 as the cynical Romans were fully aware, the prince could scarcely pay the wages of the liveries and grooms who exercise his blooded horses. The custom where such great discrepancies exist is to settle for a relatively small sum.

Changes for Better. But for all the discouragement that Americans have felt from time to time, changes for the better can be noted for Italy. The policy introduced by American Ambassador Clare Boothe Luce, of enforcing the provision in the American aid law which says that no contracts shall be given to any plant with a Communist-dominated union, beginning to pay off. The strength of the Communist-led unions is down to 50 per cent from a peak of about 87 per cent. In the great Fiat plants in northern Italy it is down to 37 per cent. Granted that part of this is due to the pressure for the benefit of American much of it represents real gain for the free unions.

Land reform has been too little and too late, but when this has been said it must be added that the problem has some resemblance to bailing out the ocean with a teaspoon. Of Italy's 9,500,000 farmers more than 5,000,000 own farms of less than one acre, some 3,500,000 have farms ranging from one to 10 acres, while only 500,000 own farms in excess of 2500 acres. Under the land reform program about 6 per cent of the arable land, which is one third of the total, has been redistributed, and this has taken off some of the pressure in the south.

Real Hope in Oil. But the real hope in Italy today is oil, which has been discovered in considerable amount in a half-dozen areas from the Po valley in the north to Sicily in the south. Inevitably these rich finds have become involved in politics—both Italian politics and the politics of big oil on a world scale.

Prior to these discoveries, the Italian state corporation, ENI, headed by Enrico Mattei, who is a kind of national hero, both

Foreign Minister of Israel Still Aligned With the West

By DORIS FLEESON

(Copyright, 1955, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

THE PRINCIPAL ARCHITECT of Israel's foreign relations is the small, brilliant, intense Moshe Sharett, Prime Minister. Under his direction the new nation looks steadily West. He thinks the West does not always smile back with suitable warmth but that is just one of his many problems.

Since the armistice agreements were signed in 1949, the Arab states have been waging a cold war against Israel. On the borders the conflict occasionally gets hot which creates a special and difficult situation.

This cold war consists chiefly of economic sanctions.

Egypt refuses to let ships bound for Israel ports through the Suez canal. Iraq has shut off the oil pipeline which ended at Haifa. This combination forces Israel to import its petroleum supplies from a long way off—Venezuela, chiefly—and to bring them the long way round which adds enormously to the expense.

Vital Water. Syria persuaded the United Nations Security Council to seal off a vital stretch of the upper Jordan river near the Sea of Galilee so that an important water project has been halted. Lebanon with its world port of Beirut does not trade with Israel.

What will the end be? Sharett replies crisply: "At some undefined period, peace. Until then a long period of waiting and patience. Meanwhile we make Israel stronger and strengthen its ties with other nations."

Sharett reminds Americans impatiently that Israel has "times without number" asked for a mutual defense treaty with the United States. Candidly he says its purpose would be "to bring the United States to our aid if attacked and to stabilize our position in the Middle East."

Revolt in Morocco Follows Historic Pattern Of Ruthlessness, Cruelties and Racial Bigotry

How French Rule Has Deteriorated Since Days of Able Marshal Lyautey.

By WILLIAM K. WYANT JR.
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

FRENCH military efforts to pacify North Africa take place against a historical background that offers little hope that women and children will be spared. The record is one of repression by European powers and savage cruelty on the part of the Moslem dissidents.

Throat-slittings of the innocent at Oued Zem and elsewhere have horrified the civilized world, creating an atmosphere in which it is not easy to discuss the merits of the nationalist case in French Morocco. Yet thoughtful Frenchmen know fire and sword offer no permanent solution.

Gilbert Grandval, the Resident General, an advocate of moderation, has thus far retained the support of Premier Edgar Faure despite the outcries of French "colons" who, in their rage and terror, blame Grandval's policy for the gruesome atrocities that have taken place.

Good Start Under Lyautey.

In the view of other observers the blame is more properly to be assessed against the French colonists themselves, who have opposed efforts to give North Africans more voice in government. France has departed with grievous consequences in this view, from the broad concepts laid down some 40 years ago by the first Resident General, Marshal Louis Lyautey.

Lyautey, who established the French Protectorate in Morocco in 1912, knew how to temper force with diplomacy. He achieved immense success in his policy of dealing with Moroccans through their own chiefs, while avoiding interference with tribal customs and religion. He liked and respected the Moslems, and his policy was calculated to preserve their self-respect and integrity, even under colonial domination.

Whether Lyautey could have prevented today's outbreaks, in the face of the worldwide surge of subject peoples toward independence, is questionable. However, he certainly did not visualize the host of French "fonctionnaires" that subsequently descended on Morocco, nor the mood of racial bigotry that now taints relations between colonist and Moslem.

Twice saved Protectorate.

"It was easy to do because I loved the people," Lyautey once remarked of his work. On two occasions he saved French Morocco. In World War I, Paris demanded a large contingent of his troops for fighting against Germany. Lyautey sent them but managed to hold on, with reduced force, in the protectorate.

The second time was in 1925, when Abd El Krim attacked the Fez-Oujda lifeline to Algeria. Lyautey has been debating since 1934, Abd El Krim, now 74 years old, is in exile at Cairo, Egypt, where he is openly the chief of a tangled skein of resistance movements working for liberation not only of Morocco but of Algeria and Tunisia as well. Moslem elements have called on the United Nations to prevent reprisals for the North African disorders.

A glance at events of the past half century sheds light on the current situation. It shows clearly enough that the North African peoples, while no lambs, are not the childlike savages they are sometimes represented to be. It also reveals a record of ruthless colonial exploitation, mitigated by introduction of some of the benefits of western science and culture.

Algeria Annexed in 1830. Morocco, a harsh and mountainous land peopled by warlike Berbers, came last under the yoke. France annexed Algeria in 1830 after the Dey hit the French consul on the nose with a fly whisk. Algeria is now a part of Metropolitan France. Around 1880, the French marched into Tunisia to shore up their position in Algeria. At

RED CHINESE ROAD BUILDERS IN TIBET NEAR INDIA BORDER

CALCUTTA, India, Aug. 27 (AP)—The newspaper Statesman reported today 2000 Red Chinese troops building roads in Tibet have reached Yatung, only 15 miles from the Indian border and 90 miles from Kalimpong.

A dispatch to the paper from Kalimpong said the Chinese were making an automobile highway out of the old trade route between 14,000-foot-high Natsu pass in the Himalayas and Phariang. This road will link up with the route to Gyantse in southern Tibet.

Arab states," he added. "It is not his interest in the region in only island of progress in a sea of discontent. We would like the gap between ourselves and our neighbors to be as narrow as possible."

Reminded that Israeli dynamism makes many people, not alone Arabs, feel that it will one day burst out of its borders, he said: "Let them make peace and define our borders. That is the way to dispose of that fear."

Sharett described United States Ambassador Eric Johnston's forthcoming efforts to get his Jordan river multi-purpose water project moving with Israel, Syria, Jordan and Lebanon as of great importance. But he warned:

"We must have a conclusion fairly soon, there is not much time to lose. We have quadrupled our irrigation area. Now we must double that. Our whole progress depends on it. If he fails now, we should then resume our freedom of action and do what we can to advance our projects."

ABD EL KRIM

the turn of the century, Morocco remained free.

By the Franco-British treaty of 1904, France obtained recognition of her "special interest" in Morocco after giving Britain a free hand in Egypt. The idea originally was that France would ensure tranquility in Morocco and the various nations could trade as equals. In 1911, the appearance of a German gunboat at Agadir caused a war scare, but France gave Germany a slice of the French Congo and obtained the right to set up a protectorate in Morocco.

Traditionally a hard country to get into, from the European viewpoint, Morocco had deteriorated internally since the death of the last strong Sultan, Mulai Hassan, in 1894. His cruelties were legendary, but he kept order. By 1911 things had gotten out of hand for a successor, Mulai Hafid, who called on the French for help against rebel Berbers. He agreed to a French protectorate.

Fez Revolt Suppressed. Less than a month after the Sultan accepted the French, tribesmen revolted at Fez. Thirteen French officers, 40 soldiers and 13 civilians were killed. Lyautey came on the scene as Resident General. In a few months he was so well ensconced that during World War I, his force much weakened, he was able to advance the area of French penetration into the wild Atlas regions.

The job, as he put it, was to "empty the shell without breaking the egg," and he accomplished it. Meanwhile, he built roads and otherwise improved the country's economic potential.

The task of pacifying what Lyautey called "useful Morocco" had been completed by 1923, this despite the most determined German efforts to stir up unrest. It was at about this time that the redoubtable Abd El Krim threatened to undo all that Lyautey had accomplished: "The Rif of Spanish Morocco, a proud, fierce, hard-fighting and intractable people, received important quantities of arms and money from Germany in World War I. In 1921 Abd El Krim led the Rifis and other tribesmen against a notoriously inefficient Spanish army, with crushing results.

Let to Upset in Spain.

With a few hundred men, Abd El Krim attacked the Spanish advance post of Anual. News of his success spread, and there was such panic among the Spanish force of 19,000 men that only 3000 survived the retreat. Gen. Silvestre, in command, either killed himself or was shot. In consequence of the disaster colonial government was replaced by a military dictatorship under Gen. Primo de Rivera.

After his initial successes, which were attended by every kind of butchery and atrocity, Abd El Krim was joined by the Jebala tribesmen, also Berbers, or western Spanish Moroccans. The riot spread, and in 1925, apparently because of commitments to tribes southward, the Rif chieftain was drawn into conflict with France.

Abd El Krim, a resourceful soldier, struck at the French traffic route into Algeria between Fez and Oujda in 1925. Lyautey, again refusing to withdraw, joined battle. Fighting was bitter, but by October Marshal Pétain was at the Rif with an army of 160,000 men. The Spanish effected a landing at Alhucemas, on the Mediterranean coast. Early in 1926, Abd El Krim surrendered to the French and was exiled on the island of Reunion, in the Indian Ocean.

Administration of Steeg.

To Marshal Lyautey's credit, the Moroccan countryside south of Fez on the long road to Casablanca remained quiet. Theodore Steeg, succeeding the Marshal as Resident General, said France wanted Abd El Krim to be "neither exalted nor humiliated—but, in time, forgotten." Steeg instituted irrigation and water power developments. The subjugation of the High Atlas was finished in 1933 and people thought the colonial period was over in Morocco.

In the Rifian war as in the current disorder, the Berbers behaved like barbarians. They were guilty of treachery and atrocious cruelty. In their turn, the Spanish and French dropped high explosives on native villages. The bombing of the open town of Sheshuan in 1925, by American airmen flying for the French, has been cited by neutral observers as a horrid example. A number of native women and children were killed or maimed.

While the western mind has come to regard the infliction of casualties by indirect means—such as by aerial bombing or by shelling—as somehow more civilized than when direct bodily contact and cold steel are involved, the less advanced peoples of the earth are not likely to share this view.

Examples of Ruthlessness.

Nor would North Africans have to go all the way back to 1925 for instances in which the French took the velvet glove off the mailed fist. Some instances have occurred since the signing of the Atlantic Charter. The following could be cited:

In Algeria, as World War II was coming to an end, an extremist leader named Messali Hadj was deported to Equatorial Africa. There was a violent demonstration at Setif, in the Department of Oran, and police fired on the crowd. As a result, 103 Christians were murdered and the rioting spread. Troops were called in, villages were wiped out from the air and doused with gasoline and burnt. The French said there were 1000 Moslem dead, but neutral sources at Algiers put the figure at close to 40,000.

In Tunisia, in the late 1940s, Arab strikers at Sfax, a port town, tried to stop the "auto-rail" leaving the station. A French brigadier was stabbed to death. French tanks opened fire, killing about 100 persons.

No 'Easy Solution' in Sight.

Nobody who has visited North Africa would be prone to believe French accomplishments or to say that there is an easy solution to the French dilemma. Nationalist elements are clamoring for the return to Morocco of the deposed Sultan, Mohammed Ben Youssef, but there are deeper issues.

The economic plight of the native populations in French North Africa is miserable, on the whole. The native gets less pay for equal work. Being subject to Koranic law, he is in most instances not a citizen. He may not move about at will, and he is discriminated against even in jail. On the farms his lot is harsh. Outside the great cities fly-blown "bidonvilles," or shanty-towns, make mockery of sanitation laws.

In the present crisis, Paris is moving forcefully to protect French nationals and restore order. Unfortunately the fighting and its resultant bitterness will make more difficult the task of ultimate settlement—whether France stays in North Africa or decides to get out.

Soviet Union Took Some Risks In Permitting Tour of Its Farms

Contact With Free World Could Make Some Russians Question the Infallibility of the Communist System.

(FIFTH OF A SERIES.)

BERLIN, Aug. 27. WHY DID THE LEADERS of the Soviet Union decide to admit an American farm delegation into their country for an extensive tour reaching nearly to the Sinkiang border and lasting five weeks?

One reason plainly was the need to gain technical information from the United States. Soviet agriculture has not been making sufficient progress to suit the men at the top. They know that American farmers are far ahead in production methods, though the Soviet propaganda machine continues to extol the glories of Communist agriculture and to belittle capitalist farming of the United States.

Another reason was that this trip and the corresponding one of the Russian farm delegation to America fit the current line of friendship and conciliation.

Amazed at Good Will.

We members of the American delegation in Russia were amazed at the demonstrations of good will throughout our trip. We were deluged with flowers at every stop. We were welcomed with traditional Russian peasant bread and salt gifts. We were given Uzbek and Kazakh robes and hats, lacquered soup spoons and other gifts.

I can remember no occasion at which a welcoming dignitary did not mention the desire of the Russian people for peace. It was peace, peace, peace everywhere.

Twice when I was asked to respond to a welcome I made myself unpopular by saying that peace could not be obtained just by talking about it. Peace takes hard work, I said, and willingness to negotiate and compromise. This dash of realism was received coldly.

But there is no doubt in the minds of us American delegates that our welcome by the Russian people was genuine. It was plain that they were relieved at the change in the official line which permitted them to be friendly to Americans.

Took Some Risks.

The Soviet government took some risks in permitting the farm delegation exchange. It exposed a good many Soviet citizens to contact with the free world. However brief this contact, it could shake the confidence of some Russians in the infallibility of their government and system. It could make them question future propaganda from Moscow.

We were asked lots of questions about America and you may be sure the answers will travel rapidly throughout peasant villages. In many instances people would tell us proudly about some new method they were using, then ask us whether we used it in the United States. Quite often we replied that American farmers did use that method a number of years ago but now were using a more efficient.

A surprising number of people asked us about ownership of cars, wages paid hired men on farms, production of milk per cow, corn yields and so on. The answers are bound to be subversive to the idea that everything in the Soviet Union is superior. Farm chairmen, directors, staff agronomists and officials asked these questions. We had little opportunity to talk to the peasants themselves.

On Grand Tour Route.

The Soviets also took a risk in permitting Americans to see as much as we did and to photograph freely. For this also will tend to weaken the effects of Soviet propaganda in the outside world. The Russians tried to minimize this by taking us only to their better farms and tying us down to a rigid schedule which prevented much independent roaming. I discovered that a collective farm we visited in Tashkent had received six foreign delegations prior to ours this year. One state farm we were taken to near Rubtsovsk had had a visit from Indian Prime Minister Nehru in June. Other indications along the way convinced us that we were on a grand agricultural tour.

But the very fact that we saw the Soviet best makes our comparisons all the more damaging to the religious faith that everything under Communism is superior.

The change in the Soviet attitude toward the United States has been so sharp that many people are tempted to say the Communist system is changing, that the brutalities of Stalinism are past and that the new Red leaders really want to be good world citizens.

People Are Charming.

The Russian people are charming. From top agriculture officials to hotel maids, girl swineherds and tractor drivers, they are warm, courteous, hospitable.

After several weeks of this gladdening it is difficult to remember that the bosses of this mysterious land have callously used murder, torture, mass starvation and other forms of barbarism both at home and abroad to achieve their purposes.

What do they mean by their friendliness policy now? No one outside the Kremlin can know. But of this much we can be sure: Russian leadership wants peace and more intercourse with the outside world for the time being. It wants to develop Russia's economic system faster and especially to improve agriculture. It may want to ease the armament burden on Russian economy.

I use the word "may" because there is no evidence yet of any important reduction in Soviet military preparations.

DRIVE TO BAR PRIVATE SCHOOLS IS CHARGED

Cardinal Says Effort Is Made to Force All Pupils Into Public Education.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 27 (AP)—Powerful pressure groups in the United States are waging a campaign to drive private schools out of existence and to force all children into state-controlled schools, Cardinal James Francis McIntyre said here today.

"This constitutes a machination which is opposed to American freedom," the Archbishop of Los Angeles said in an address prepared for delivery to the convention of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae.

He said the trend to compulsory education of all children in public schools is "a positive and declared intention of the National Education Association and its affiliates."

He said the N.E.A. was a leader in a move to override the 1925 Oregon school decision in which the United States Supreme Court held that children could not be compelled to attend public schools only.

Compulsory education in state and federal schools, the Catholic leader said, "violates the spirit of the Sherman anti-trust laws and can bring on evils found in Europe's totalitarian states."

"Regimentation in education quickly leads to tyranny."

Also contributing to "state monopoly in education," the archbishop said, are discriminatory legislation, increasingly extravagant accreditation demands and activities of the National Citizens Commission for Public Schools.

The archbishop also was critical of proposed federal legislation to authorize grants to states for school construction and financing. He said private non-profit schools are entirely excluded.

WILSON ORDERS ARMY TO REJECT BRITISH LOW BIDS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (UP)—Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has ordered the Army to reject the low bids of a British firm for electrical equipment for the Chief Joseph dam in Washington state.

Rejection of British low bids for similar equipment for the Chief Joseph dam two years ago brought protests in the British Parliament and elsewhere that the Eisenhower Administration was not following its professed policy of "trade-not-aid." Later a number of contracts for power equipment went to British firms.

The new contracts will be awarded to Westinghouse Electric Corp. and Pennsylvania Transformer Co. English Electric Export & Trading Co., Ltd., offered to provide three transformers for $470,965. The winning bidder, Pennsylvania Transformer, will charge $556,868. English Electric offered six generators for $5,460,351. Westinghouse Electric Corp., which gets the job, bid $6,338,491.

Opening of the $2,500,000 dial telephone center in Ferguson shortly after Jan. 1 will complete the changeover to dial operation in St. Louis and St. Louis county, Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. announced yesterday.

The center at 330 North Florissant road, which will provide dial service for local calls in the Florissant, Ferguson and Berkeley areas, also will make it possible for customers there to dial out-of-town telephones direct.

One- and two-party telephone customers who now have Victor 7, Temple 7 and University 4 numbers will be able to dial calls to more than 100 communities in and around St. Louis, ranging from Belleville and Collinsville in Illinois, to Cedar Ridge, High Ridge and Weldon Spring in Missouri.

The Ferguson center is the third St. Louis county exchange to be equipped for direct distance dialing. Mehlville and Ladue already have the service. At present direct dial service on out-of-town calls is limited in range, but it is planned ultimately to extend the range so that a telephone user may dial almost any number in the country.

Fred P. Rapp Food Market In Northland To Open Next Tuesday

TENTH UNIT IN CHAIN—Largest of all of the Fred P. Rapp food markets in the St. Louis area and one of the largest store units in the huge, new Northland Shopping Center at Lucas and Hunt road and West Florissant avenue, this store has been completed and is scheduled for formal opening next Tuesday.

Rapp's Store
In Northland
Set to Open

The tenth and largest of the food stores in the chain of Fred P. Rapp, Inc., is to be opened formally next Tuesday in Northland, the huge new shopping center at West Florissant avenue and Lucas and Hunt road.

The Rapp store is on the lower mall facing West Florissant avenue. The building is entirely separate from other structures in the shopping center and has parking area on three sides of it, with wide sun-canopies along the sides of the building as well as across the front.

Architects Russell, Mulgardt, Schwarz & Van Hoefen designed the store. Legal matters in negotiations for the establishment were handled by Clarence Barksdale of Barksdale & Abbott. Fred P. Rapp, president of the food market chain, said the new store has been designed and equipped to handle "a greater volume of sales than any supermarket in the Greater St. Louis area, and to achieve second place in sales volume in the Northland group of more than 50 stores." The building has 29,000 square feet of floor space. Shopping aisles have been made extra wide. Self-service and meat counters are 120 feet long, there is 100 linear feet of frozen cases, 60 feet of refrigerated produce cases, 48 feet of refrigerated dairy goods cases. The store also has huge freezing and cooling rooms in the stock handling area, and the whole store is air-conditioned.

Terrazzo floors and the decorator color scheme of toast and green harmonize with light green shelving and canary yellow checkout counters. Incandescent lighting recessed in the ceiling was selected to

Lindell Apartments Sold

THE PARK ROYAL—Sixteen-story, 62-unit Park Royal Apartments building at 4605 Lindell boulevard, sold last week by the Park Realty Co. to the Royal Realty Corporation (Detroit interests) in transaction negotiated by Jack Dubinsky & Sons Realty Co., the Shuchart Realty Co. and the Herman B. Mayer Realty Co., with financing through the Giralddin Brothers Real Estate Co.

Another Northland Store

FROM THE WEST—Architect's drawing of the new S.S. Kresge Co. store to be opened next Thursday in Northland shows the store from the western elevation where a strong contemporary feeling is brought out by the sign background of finished aluminum. Kresge's, occupying 25,000 square feet, is the second largest unit in the shopping center. It has 81-foot frontages on both malls.

Kresge to Open Ninth Unit in St. Louis Area

The S. S. Kresge Co., which operates 673 stores in the United States and Canada, will open its ninth store in the St. Louis area at Northland next Thursday, with a three-day festival lasting through Saturday.

The Kresge unit at Northland is the second largest store in the Northland development, with 81-foot frontages on both malls, and with 25,000 square feet of floor area on two levels.

Exterior finish of the store is in natural stone and face brick, with aluminum and glass. The sales floors are connected by escalators. There is a luncheon-fountain on each floor, the one on the lower level having 68 seats, the one on the upper level, 23.

The entire store is air-conditioned.

Illumination approaches daylight brightness through use of continuous rows of fluorescent lights. Asphalt tile in tan and maroon squares is laid checker-board pattern on the sales floors.

Pioneered by Kresge's, counters are of the new type that can be taken apart and assembled to fit particular needs. Majority of the 2200 linear feet of counters is set up for customer self-selection.

The store features all departments carried by larger Kresge units, including wearing apparel and household needs as well as five-and-ten-cent notions and novelties.

Six entrances open into the store. Three double-door entrances of glass are provided from each mall. They contribute to the open appearance induced by high plate glass windows brought down to sidewalk level.

Throughout the construction period, R. W. Denzine represented the Kresge Co. as construction superintendent. Walter Buchanan has been named manager of the store.

ELECTED VICE PRESIDENT

George S. Metcalfe, president of Roosevelt Federal Savings, Ninth and Locust, reported yesterday that Walter Bolliger has been elected vice president in charge of the association's lending operation effective Aug. 15.

Bolliger for the last two years was vice president in charge of sales and outside agencies for a local title insurance organization. Prior to that he worked with mortgage loans for a company with operations in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri and Kentucky, serving as manager for several years of their Decatur (Ill.) and Clayton (Mo.) offices.

He is a member of the St. Louis and St. Louis County Real Estate boards and of the Mortgage Bankers Association.

Builders Busy Preparing for Home Displays

With National Home Week only two weeks away, members of the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis who expect to have a part in it are hurrying around with instructions to get set down, get painting jobs done, get wallpaper on, get all the finishing touches finished in some 75 to 100 houses that will be on display.

National Home Week, this year Sept. 10 to 18, is a nationwide fall festival of new homes, in which the year's work and the outlook for next year's work are presented en masse to the general public in one grand, industry-wide promotion.

Banners and directional signs go up in all the suburbs where subdivisions are being carved out of woods and fields and special display houses are thrown open for a full week to all comers, whether they be prospective buyers, do-it-yourselfers looking for ideas, or the merely curious with time on their hands. For even the most casual visitor may come upon something he'll like and remember until the day he does become a home buyer.

For Many Tastes.

C. T. Wilson, chairman of the National Home Week Committee of the Builders Association, said that homes in every price range, in varied locations and with architectural styles and interior designs to attract every visitor will be exhibited in the nine-day display.

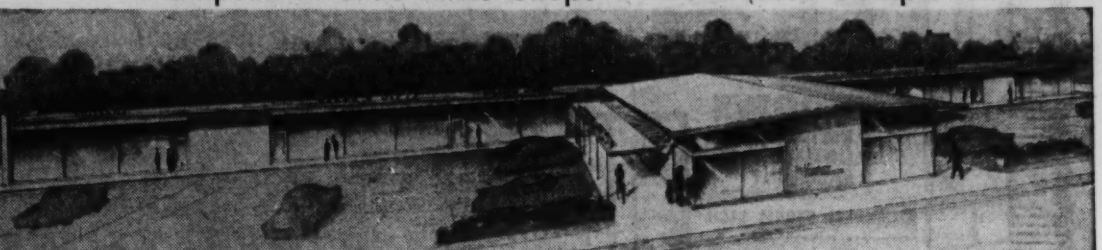

"The builder of today considers not just the home itself, but the community, general environment and its influence on the family. He is a craftsman proud of his work and deeply interested in the bettering of the individual standard of living and creating a progressive community. Trying to please dad by adding a workshop, or just mom, by creating a large spacious kitchen with no cognizance of the needs of the rest of the family is as outdated as using gas lamps. Homes are built in proximity to schools and recreational facilities for the use of the children. Near bus routes and fast highways and streets so that dad may get to work speedily and safely, and within convenient shopping distance for mother. In doing this the builder creates a community and must think of churches, family recreation and surrounding safety condition."

Wilson said sites are planned much better today, with an eye for their natural beauty and complete communities are set up with the maximum of modern conveniences.

"Over $2,000,000 worth of new homes will be displayed, with prices ranging from about $10,000 to $20,000."

Hampton Avenue Little Shops Center Nears Completion

RAMBLING INFORMALITY—Scheduled for completion in September is this 9500 square-foot little shops center, being erected for Clyde and Kirby Chiles on the block front of Hampton avenue, Potomac to Marquette, in southwest St. Louis. Architect Arthur B. Rathert designed it, the Willingham Construction Co. is building it. Parking area in front of the building and along both sides of a "T" shank of it will accommodate 48 cars. Warm, red brick is being used in walls other than display window areas and a semi-detached canopy will extend the slight slope of the roof over walkways to protect customers from rain and sun. Roof slope will be retained inside, in plastered ceilings under bar joists. The roof will be tar and gravel built up over poured gypsum. Lights are to be fluorescent and incandescent. A. J. Meyer & Co. has been given the agency for the building, said unit footages will run from 670 to 1400 square feet each, for small stores and shops.

Food Center to Open Eighth Store This Year

NEW JENNINGS MARKET—New National Food Center store at 8319 Jennings road, which is to be opened formally next Tuesday morning, is the chain's eighth store in the St. Louis area to be opened this year. The company will mark the completion of a remodeling project in the store at 6333 Natural Bridge road, Pine Lawn, at the same time. Considerable parking area has been added at the Natural Bridge store in recent years. The Jennings store will have parking area for 100 cars.

Detroiters
Apartments

A 16-story, fireproof Lindell boulevard apartment property, the Park Royal, built in 1930 by the Pollock family and retained ever since by members of the family, was sold last week to Detroit investors, real estate dealers here report.

Title passed from the Park Realty Co. to the Royal Realty Corporation in a direct real estate transaction, no stock being involved. Consideration wasn't reported, but new financing of $850,000 was written on the property by The Great-West Life Assurance Company through negotiations with the Giralddin Brothers Real Estate Co., the insurance company's mortgage loan correspondent here.

Sale of the property was negotiated by Jack Dubinsky & Sons Realty Co., the Shuchart Realty

Co. and the Herman B. Mayer Realty Co., with title service and closing through the Lawyers Title Company of Missouri and with legal details checked by Jones, Hocker, Gladney & Grand.

Dealers said members of the purchasing firm are Ben B. Fenton and Milton Saffir.

The Park Royal has 62 luxury-styled dwelling units ranging in size from efficiencies to six-room-three-bath size. The nominal arrangements are four apartments to a floor, a six-room, and three five-room units. The efficiencies are on the first floor. There is an 80-car garage under a landscaped terrace at the rear, and full basement.

REALTY AGENCY MOVES

Hacker and Graupner, Realtors, formerly at 6212 West Florissant avenue for a number of years, have moved their office to larger and more modern quarters at 6208 West Florissant avenue, three doors east of the former location. Jos. A. Hacker and Theodore F. Graupner are partners in the firm.

VETERANS GET BREAK ON TAX OF HOME SALE

WASHINGTON, D.C. (AP)—President Eisenhower has signed a bill to allow servicemen who sold their homes before Jan. 1, 1954, up to four years after a sale in which to use the proceeds for another home without paying a capital gains tax.

The Senate finance committee, in approving the bill, said the exemption on the capital gains levy already applies to servicemen who sold their homes after Jan. 1, 1954. It said the present law had an "unintentional discrimination" against those who sold before then.

National Food
Opening Eighth
Store of Year

The National Tea Company's Food Center Division is to open its eighth new store of the year in the Greater St. Louis area at 8319 Jennings road next Tuesday morning. At the same time, the completion of remodeling in the chain's big store at 6333 Natural Bridge road, Pine Lawn, also will be observed with formalities.

W. H. Sievert, branch manager of National Food Center Stores, Inc. of St. Louis, said the new Jennings store replaces the National Food Center store formerly at 7021 West Florissant and is the eleventh store opened under a $7,500,000 expansion program.

Other new National stores now under construction in St. Louis are at Broadway and Riverview, Twentieth and Ferry, and Natural Bridge and Newstead. Stores under construction in St. Louis county are at: Natural Bridge and Springfield, 10017 Gravois, and Olive and Old Bonhomme. Out of town stores under construction include stores in Belleville, Edwardsville, and Springfield, Ill. All the above stores with the exception of the store at Twentieth and Ferry are located in shopping centers.

The new Jennings store has about 12,000 square feet of space, most of which is sales area. The structure is of modern design, all glass front, and has a large buff-colored brick sold before then.

MARQUETTE PARK
OPENING TODAY

Formal opening has been planned today of a new subdivision called Marquette Park. It is located on the west side of Lindemann road in Des Peres, about two blocks south of Marchester road and consists of about 30 acres.

Two new streets are being built in the area, one, called Montour drive, leading off Lindemann road and the other, called Armat Court, a U-shaped drive opening at both ends onto Montour drive.

The project is the fifth subdivision for the Kuni-Jacobsmeier Co., which has done the development and is doing the construction. The company's previous developments have been O'Brien Court, Warson Manor, Monier Park, Warson Terrace, all at points along Manchester road.

The Harvey Vatterott Real Estate Co. has been named promotion agent of the newest project. A Vatterott spokesman said Kuni-Jacobsmeier is building two styles of homes in Marquette Park, one L-shaped, with a living-dining combination, the other ranch-styled with a large kitchen, but no dinette. All are to be in brick, with full basements.

AIR PHOTOGRAPHY SERVICE
ESTABLISHES OFFICE HERE

The Winged Camera Service, an aerial photography operation based at Washington, D.C., has established its first branch office in St. Louis in planned expansion to cover the entire nation. The St. Louis office is at 509 Olive street.

John Sterling, sent from the Washington office to become regional manager here, said St. Louis's bond issue reconstruction planning led to the decision to locate an office here, since it marked the city as the heart of one of the most progressive regions of the Midwest.

Company planes are based near Washington, dispatched to handle orders from given areas in groups to achieve more economical operation and lower cost to customers.

Initially there are to be four persons employed here in sales and scheduling procedures.

INGENIOUS SOLUTION

Many industrial products must be shipped long distances and stored for indefinite periods before they are used. This creates a special packaging problem to make sure that corrosion will not render them useless. Such articles as machine tool parts, gears, motors and surgical instruments are highly susceptible to rust and ordinary methods of packaging will not insure their preservation.

The answer has been found in the development of protective coatings which are applied in liquid form by dipping the various items in heated solutions. In this manner, a skin-tight "co-coon" is formed. The coating is airtight, moisture proof and easily peeled off when the time comes for the article to be used.

Alpha Phi House Under Construction in Columbia

PROVIDENCE ROAD PROJECT—Perspective from St. Louis Architects Jamieson, Spearl, Hammond and Grolock of chapter house under construction at the University of Missouri in Columbia, Mo., for Alpha Phi International Sorority. St. Louis alumnae of Alpha Phi on the building committee are Mrs. Henry Griesedieck, Mrs. William Fixley, Mrs. Joseph Hammond and Mrs. Duncan Dorris. New chapter house, at 910 Providence road, was started in June, is scheduled for completion late in October. Larger than the old, it will provide two formal drawing rooms, card room, conference room, house mother's suite, chapter president's room, powder room and a men's cloakroom on the first floor; study rooms, bedrooms and baths on second and third floors; kitchen, dining room and recreation room in the basement.

bring out the natural color of fruits, vegetables and meats. The store will have 10 departments, including drugs, household items and liquor.

A Busy-Bee Candy department also will be a part of the store.

The store has its own bakery and bake shop. All bakery goods sold will be manufactured on the premises in a bakery having walls lined with ceramic tile and floors of quarrystone tile.

A system of preparing bakery goods, freezing it and then baking it upon order or shortly before time of selling, is to be used, thereby supplying customers with hot bakery goods.

A central cashier in a booth near the entrance will take returned empty soft drink bottles, before customers begin shopping. More than 150 feet of gravity roller conveyor will move bottles through a tunnel under the floor to a bottle room in the basement at the rear of the store.

A public address system, with loud speakers throughout the store, will be operated from this same cashier booth.

Eleven automatic checkout counters of the double conveyor belt design, capable of twice the capacity of conventional checkouts, will be manned by 55 clerks.

Customers leaving checkout counters may have their groceries routed through a pick-up station. They will receive a numbered claim check and a corresponding number will be placed on their packages. Shopping carts then will be routed to the pick-up station, to which cars may drive up.

Vic Peowell, former manager of Rapp's St. Charles Rock Road store, will manage the Northland unit. The store will employ about 125 clerks.

Earlier this year, the Rapp organization opened a huge grocery warehouse at 8590 Page Blvd., to service the expanding chain. Several additional stores are planned for the future, the company said.

pylon carrying the store's insignia.

The store's sales area is air-conditioned. In addition, the meat cutting room is air-conditioned to enable the processing of self-service meats.

Fluorescent lighting is used throughout the sales area and both entrance and exit doors are automatic.

The exterior of the building and parking lot will be illuminated with mercury-vapor lamps.

The newest of automatic checkout stands and food handling equipment, facilities for frozen and refrigerated foods have been installed.

Other departments include: Household needs, beauty needs and medicine cabinet supplies.

The store will also have an office for the collection of gas, electric and telephone bills and for the issuance of money orders.

Space for approximately 100 cars has been arranged for customer parking with all-weather surface and flood lighting.

Owner and builder of the property is R. K. & A. Jones, Inc. Kenneth Crecelius, 7347 South Yorkshire drive, Affton, will manage the new store, and Paul Ellerbracht, 10316 St. Jude drive, St. Ann, will head the meat department.

Lang said he anticipates that the Metropolitan St. Louis delegation will increase to 175 persons, perhaps 200. Such a total would establish an all-time record for a St. Louis delegation to a city so distant, and would continue the St. Louis record of having the largest delegation from any point outside the state in which the convention is being held.

will it out-live the mortgage?

That's a question that prospective homebuyers are asking more and more frequently in these days of 25-year and 30-year mortgages.

But it's a question that needn't concern you for a moment. You can be sure that your home will be sound, livable and attractive years and years after your mortgage has been paid-off and forgotten—if it is built of unit masonry.

And through the years you'll have a home that affords all-weather protection and requires minimum maintenance—a home you can be proud of.

Naturally, unit masonry homes have greater resale value than those built of less durable, substitute materials.

Home in St. Louis Hills Sold

DELORE STREET HOME—Residence numbered 6565 Delore, in St. Louis Hills, bought by Mr. and Mrs. Orville Goerger from Marion G. Alpers in transaction negotiated by the Gabbert Realty Co. House has four bedrooms and bath on second floor, three rooms and a sunroom on an elevated level three steps up from the main house. Main floor has usual living quarters and a powder room.

MEAT COMPANY RECONDITIONS LOCAL PLANT

A remodeling job that's been carried out over a period of two and one-half years has just been completed in the plant of the Supreme Meat Company, 314 South Twenty-first street, the company reports, upgrading the firm's operation to meet all requirements of United States inspection service for such properties and operations.

All frame construction in the property has been replaced by concrete and asbestos cement in walls, and by extra-hardened cupric-oxide impregnated concrete in the floors. The cupric-oxide is an insect killer. New and heavier insulation has been installed in the walls of the chilling rooms.

In addition to improvements in the building, the company has installed new steam boiler equipment and a battery of stainless steel "smoke house" or curing room equipment.

The company, incorporated in 1946, is a dealer in institutional supplies. Davis W. Canis is president, Milton J. Canis is vice president.

SPECIAL COATINGS FOR ROOFS

They are, in the main, three types of roofs on which special coatings are used for preservation and beautification.

For wood shingle roofs, there are special preservative stains. New shingles should be dipped in such a preservative before they are attached.

For flat roofs, built up of layers of felt and asphalt, protective fibred or unfibred roof coatings or roof emulsions — or asphalt emulsion should be used.

Tin roofs safeguarded with the types of roof formulated for metal surfaces. Special metal primers must first be applied. Coating for Shingles.

On asphalt shingle siding, the only type of coating that is satisfactory is one of the emulsions devised for exterior use.

INDIANS RALLY TO NIP YANKS, 7-6, AND TIE FOR LEAD HOAL, HARTWIG WIN DOUBLES; DAVIS CUP TO AUSTRALIA CARDINALS DEFEATED BY DICKSON AND PHILLIES, 8-2

ARROYO HITS HOMER, THEN GETS KAYOED

By Bob Broeg
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.
PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27.—Murry Dickson, athletically old, but young in heart and with a resilient right arm to match, again made the Cardinals say "uncle" today for their part in two of the worst deals in Redbird history—one they made and the other they didn't make.

At a time when Redbird hurling is as scarce as interest in the National League race, the 39-year-old Dickson continued to win for the fast-flying Philadelphia Phillies, who trimmed the Cards at Connie Mack Stadium, 8 to 2.

The wizened wizard of the variety store pitching assortment—a little of this, a little of that and a helluva lot of control and courage—topped the Redbirds a fourth time in a season of 10 victories, eight defeats, a 3.42 earned-run average and the gratitude of the seventh major league manager for whom he has played, Mayo Smith.

"He's still got the old rubber arm and he'll relieve any time you're in trouble," Smith said, chuckling, "just so you don't forget to give him his regular turn."

Sold for $125,000.

Dickson, sold by the Cardinals after the 1948 season for $125,000 that never has been known to win a game, labored with Pittsburgh's kindergarten class until Branch Rickey became hard up for cash two years ago. It was obvious to all in the trade that Murry was on the market and by then his old St. Louis teammates needed pitching. But a Redbird front-office that ought to know a man is only as old as he feels failed to buy.

So Dickson went to the Phillies for $60,000 and a couple of humpy-dumplings. Jack Lohmeyer and Andy Hansen, the kind of expendables with which the Cardinals were knee-deep, too. And both the Mery Magician and his new mates are doing handsomely, for Philadelphia finished fourth in '54 and today moved into third place.

With Dickson minimizing the damage of nine hits—only one St. Louis run was earned—the Phillies beat the Cards an eighth time in 11 games here this year, giving the Cards a commanding 13-7 edge on the season's play. While the Phillies have won 30 of their last 45 games, the Redbirds have dropped 27 of the most recent 39.

This time Philadelphia collected 12 hits, handing Lefty Arroyo his fourth straight defeat in an eighth unsuccessful bid for his twelfth triumph. The Puerto Rican southpaw now is just another so-so member of a ho-hum pitching staff.

Hits Homer, Yields Two.

Arroyo was a better hitter than pitcher this afternoon before a Ladies' day crowd of 24,769, which included 6822 single ticket patrons, belting a full and his first major league homer. But Stan Lopata and Gran Hamner blasted him for homers, too, and Richie Ashburn tagged a trio of St. Louis pitchers for three hits.

Ashburn's first hit, Rip Repulski's two-base error and Hamner's sacrifice fly produced Philadelphia's first run in the third, an inning in which Del Ennis's single, a walk and Lopata's sixteenth homer gave Dickson a 4-0 lead.

After Arroyo hit over the fence in the fifth inning, Solly Hemus beat out an infield single, Red Schoendienst was safe on Hamner's error and Musial singled across another run with only one down. But the Redbirds were done for the day.

The Phillies, meanwhile, scored again in the fifth on Hamner's homer, the 15th off Cardinal throwers in 126 games. And in the sixth a walk and Andy Seminick's single brought in reliever Mel Wright, who was a victim as the Redbirds outfoxed themselves with their unorthodox bunt defense, Dickson switching to hit away and reaching base on a fouled-up fielder's choice.

With three on, none away, Ashburn singled in two more tallies and the last run came in on Alex Grammas's wild throw after fielding Ennis's infield hit.

Long about then it began to rain, but not nearly early or hard enough to do the crops or the Cardinals any good.

Redbird Notes.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 27. ARROYO (5-11) JACKSON, twice victorious over the Dodgers, will face the bickering Brooks at Ebbets Field Sunday. Southpaw Karl Spooner is expected for the Dodgers.

Manager Harry Walker had starters Harvey Haddix and Tom Poholsky taking a turn on the mound pitching 10 minutes batting practice this afternoon. The hat is reviving an old custom. "Yeah, I'm going to have the starters throw batting practice once between starts. Robin Roberts, as often as he pitches, does it. Must be good."

EXTRA INNINGS by Roy Stockton SPORTS EDITOR OF THE POST-DISPATCH

Baseball Fans Pay For Razzberry Rights.

BASEBALL fans have been exercising their rights to boo great and small ballplayers down through the years, but it still is a shocking surprise to some ballplayers when the cheers suddenly turn to jeers.

Two outstanding ballplayers have heard the razzberry lately, Willie Mays of the Giants and Duke Snider of the Dodgers. And they are to be excused if the jeers shocked them. For they had been praised to the skies, compared favorably with the greatest of the diamond's greats, assigned to inevitable places in the game's Hall of Fame and apparently expected that vociferous adulation would be more than slightly permanent.

Mays, who with Johnny Antonelli, made the difference in the pennant race last year, has been having a tough season. While the pennant race was in the air, Willie was described as "confused." Baseball writers, who bravely will tackle any job, manage any team or tell anybody how the job might be done better, even volunteered as psychoanalysts and took Willie apart and put him together again on their typewriter couches.

The stands cheered Willie, but the other day he missed connections with a bounding base hit and instead of chasing the ball to the outfield wall, Willie quit on the thing and permitted a fellow outfielder to do the chasing, while two runs crossed the plate. That was a cardinal sin on the diamond. Even if you haven't a chance to relieve a ball in time to get a putout, you have to go through the motions. That's how the cheers happened to turn into jeers for Willie, the same Willie, who, if you believed the New York press, was greater than Cobb, Speaker, Ruth, DiMaggio, Snider, any or all outfielders, individually or rolled into one.

The Duke Pops Off, Then Apologizes.

SNIDER was fighting a three-weeks' batting slump when he ran into the inalienable right of a cash customer to get a Duke pop. The Duke was popping up in too many pinches and the stands jeered him. He should have known better, but he popped off. He blurted out that the Brooklyn press was the worst in the world, didn't deserve a pennant and were a bunch of front runners.

Brooklyn is a strange city and there was an unexpected reaction in the Flatbush stands. Even while the Duke was striking out on his first trip to the plate after his blast at the booing cash customers, he was cheered. There were jeers, too, but the cheers were in the majority. Perhaps because of that Snider decided to apologize. He admitted in print that "there are any number of good fans in Brooklyn." Now, wasn't that generous of the Duke?

Snider, a veteran now of many excellent seasons with the Dodgers, will be able to laugh off the boos or any reaction to his blast at the fans. It might be different in the case of Mays. Baseball fans are brutal and Willie is an impressionable young man. Too much booing could have an effect on his play and his future.

Brooklyn, while it has no part of a copyright on the razzberry, always has been tough on its athletes. Back in the old days of annually floundering Dodgers, Jack Fourmier actually stuffed cotton in his ears to shut out the jeers and unkind way cracks.

But you'll hear the jeers in any ball park. In 1926, when the Cardinals were battling their way to their first pennant, the Sportsman's Park fans picked Les Bell, third baseman, as the favorite object of their jeers. It was affecting Bell's play on the field, but Rogers Hornsby straightened things out.

"Don't pay any attention to those ribbon clerks out there in the stands," the Rajah told Bell. "Just remember that those so-and-soes, those 20-a-week clerks, are paying your salary."

And despite the jeers, Bell did all right. He was a fine third baseman that season and he led the Cardinal club in hitting, a club that included Hornsby, Hafey, Bottomley, Douthitt and Bob O'Farrell.

TRABERT AND SEIXAS LOSE IN FIVE SETS

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Aug. 27 (AP)—Australia's Lewis Hoad and Rex Hartwig, playing pirate-bolts tennis, won a dramatic doubles duel from America's best today to send the Davis Cup on another long trip to the bottom of the world.

The hard-hitting Aussies, after dropping a marathon 26-game opening set, rallied brilliantly to smash Tony Trabert and Vic Seixas, 2-14, 6-4, 6-3, 3-6, 7-5. This clinched the cup. Australia won with an insurmountable 3-0 lead.

The triumph, reversing last year's surprising score which won the cup for the United States in the first two days, made tomorrow's final singles matches mere formalities to be played only for fun. They cannot change the result.

With the issue decided, Captain Bill Talbot of the United States team asked and was granted permission to replace Trabert with Hamilton Richardson, young Rhodes Scholar from Baton Rouge, La. Talbot said Trabert had been bothered by blisters on his racket hand, an old ailment for him. Richardson has been a team member three years but never played in a challenge round.

Harry Hopman, Australia's captain, stood pat with his winning lineup. This means that Hoad, who whipped Trabert in yesterday's singles, will play Seixas. Rosewall, victor over Seixas yesterday, will meet Richardson.

While 12,000 cheered.

A crowd of about 12,000 in the West Side Tennis Club's concrete horseshoe thrilled to the quick-changing fortunes of the fiercely-fought doubles battle.

Both Seixas and Trabert, grim and full of fight, played better than in their singles assignments yesterday. Hartwig, a 24-year-old farm boy from the suburbs of Melbourne, was the strong man of the Australian combination, returning service brilliantly and making few errors.

Hoad, although his bomb-like service often was unplayable, fell into errors which frequently hurt his side's cause. His volleying particularly was erratic and he netted frequently.

It was Hartwig who played the major role in breaking Seixas' service in the twelfth game of the final set and then hitting the shot which decided the day—a backhand passing shot which kicked up the dust as Vic reached frantically in an attempt to return it.

It was a quick ending and the crowd stood for minutes, applauding the players as they shook hands in the middle of the court.

Applause From Kramer.

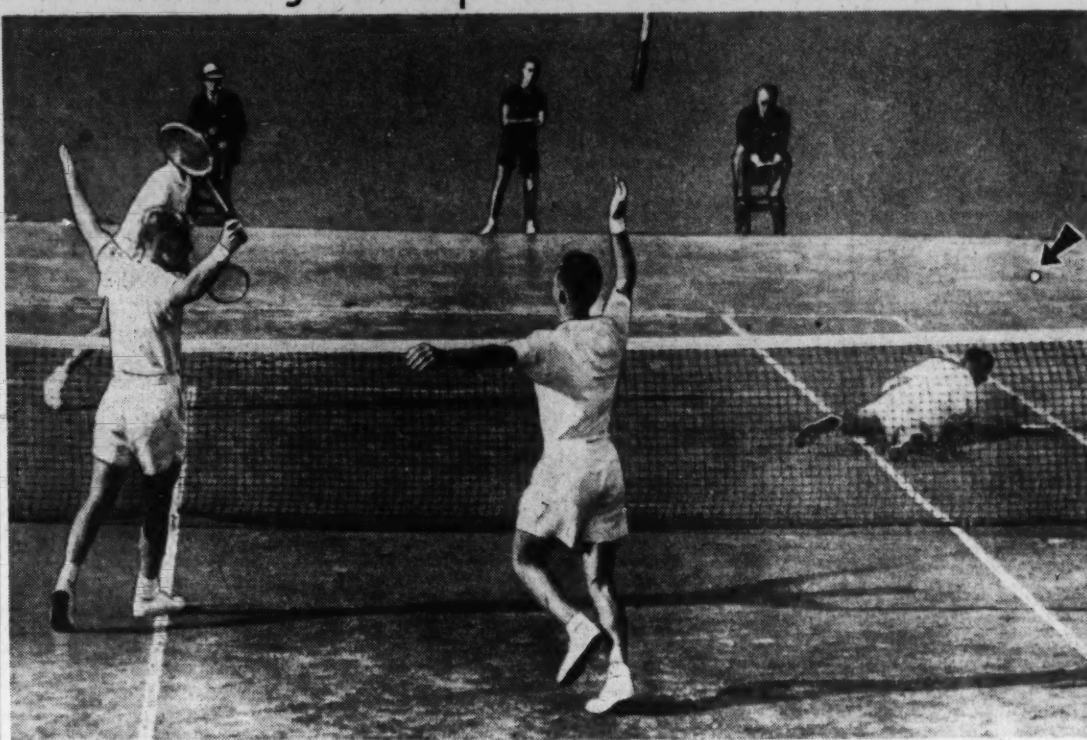

Jack Kramer, former world champion, said, "This was one of the greatest doubles matches in Davis Cup history."

Trabert and Seixas, who used their baseball signals system occasionally without noticeable success, fought off three set points to win the 56-minute opening set.

A mild rhabdus occurred in the 15th game when, with the score 30-15 on Hoad's service, Hoad's racket flew from his hand and the U.S. won the point. The umpire, Herb Lewis, called the play a "let"—meaning it had to be replayed.

Seixas quickly protested and soon had Capt. Talbot at his side. After a conference with Hopman, the point was given to the U.S. side. However, it made little difference in the long run since Australia won the game.

Saluting the Cup That Cheers Australia

Australia's REX HARTWIG (right foreground) throws his racket in the air, while that signal of tennis conquest still battles upward against gravity, above his raised hand, United States Davis Cup player TONY TRABERT completes the job of tumbling to the ground as the ball, indicated by arrow, goes past. It was the match-point miss and sprawl for the United States, as the Australians won the doubles and took back the Davis trophy, 3-0, yesterday at Forest Hills. Hartwig's partner is LEW HOAD. In the left background is Trabert's partner, VIC SEIXAS.

Cards Given Chance To Win From Lions

By Robert Morrison

Detroit's fundamentally powerful Lions, caught a little early in their pre-season preparation, are favored to beat the newly hopeful Chicago Cardinals in their pro football benefit game at Public Schools Stadium tonight at 8:30.

The Lions of Buddy Parker, 12,500.

Some Football Greats.

On display will be some of the great names of pro football, Ollie Matson of the Cardinals, Doak Walker and Leon Hart of the Lions. But Detroit will not have its famed Bobby Layne at quarterback because he is currently under treatment for an old arm injury.

In Layne's absence veteran Harry Gilmer will direct the Lion team that will be seeking its twenty-second victory in 28 exhibition games since Parker started his successful coaching tenure in 1951.

First-string offensive guard Stan Campbell will also be missing from the Lion lineup because of foot ailment, and No. 1 fullback Lew Carpenter may be limited a bit by a bruised shoulder. Tackle Charley Ane has long been out because of an appendectomy.

Otherwise the main thing the Lions lack is in their state of preparation after a late start on the pre-season conditioning. Rookie Dave Middleton (Auburn) has become their heaviest-duty running back, having carried 23 times for 112 yards. Carpenter has gained 63 yards in 12 carries, and No. 2 fullback the veteran, Bob Hoernschmeyer has lugged it 10 times for 53 yards.

Has 13 Pass Completions.

Gilmer, who took over for Layne against the Redskins, has thrown 13 completions in 24 attempts for 181 yards. Doak Walker has caught seven passes for 104 yards, and Middleton ranks next with four receptions for 72 yards.

Besides Left Half Matson, the Cardinals will be featuring newcomer Dave Mearns, from Oregon State and service football, at the other halfback position, Johnny Olszewski at fullback and Lamar McHan at quarterback. It's a backfield that has attracted early notice. Jimmy Hill, formerly with the St. Louis Knights, is running No. 2 behind Mann.

KSD-TV to Carry Davis Cup Play To Its Conclusion

TODAY's color telecast of the Davis Cup matches at Forest Hills, Long Island, by Post-Dispatch Station KSD-TV will be carried to conclusion. The program will begin at 1 p.m.

Challenge round matches also were telecast in color yesterday and Friday by KSD-TV.

GRAND SLAM BY WILLIAMS BEATS TIGERS

CLEVELAND, Aug. 27 (AP)—The American League race became hotter than noon at the equator in July today as the Cleveland Indians pulled up even with the New York Yankees and the Chicago White Sox slammed their way within a half game of the pace-setters.

A four-run rally in the eighth brought the Indians from behind to a thrilling 7-6 victory over the Yankees. The White Sox had it easier, crushing Washington, 11-1. And the Red Sox kept right in the battle by edging Detroit 4-3, on Ted Williams's dramatic, two-out grand slam homer in the ninth inning, to pull within four games of the leaders.

In the National League, Sandy Koufax, a husky, 19-year-old bonus baby, pulled the league-leading Dodgers out of a tailspin by blanking Cincinnati, 7-0, with a brilliant two-hit, 14-strikeout performance. Milwaukee kept 10 games behind by nipping New York 5-4, and dropped the Giants into fourth place. The Philadelphia Phillies moved to third by downing the Cardinals 8-2. In the other game, Chicago edged the Pittsburgh Pirates, 4-3, on Walker Cooper's ninth-inning homer.

On a Lemon Fly.

Trailing 6-3, chiefly because of Bill Skowron's three-run homer and starter Don Larsen's two-run homer, the Indians blasted their way into a tie for the lead on their four-run spree in the eighth. Bobby Avila's three-run homer off Johnny Kucks evened the score at 6-6. After the Indians loaded the bases on Bob Grim, Bob Lemon hit a sacrifice fly for the winning run.

The White Sox snapped a three-game losing streak on Lefty Jack Harshman's eighth-inning pitching and a 13-hit assault against four Washington pitchers. Minnie Minoso hit a two-run homer for Chicago.

Detroit got only two hits—Jack Phillips's run-scoring single in the first and Bill Tule's two-run homer in the third—and made it stand up for a 3-0 lead going into the ninth. Then Detroit's Frank Lary weakened.

With one away, he was reached for slams by Eddie Joost and Faye Thronberry. Billy Goodman singled but Billy Klaus singled to right to load the bases. Lary was replaced by Al Aber.

No. 24 of Year.

Wham! Williams sent the ball flying high in the upper right field for his 22nd grand slam homer, his third grand slam of the season and the fourteenth of his career. The Red Sox were back in the race.

Koufax, making his second start of the year, went only four and two-thirds innings against Pittsburgh July 6, yielded only a two-out single to Ted Kluszewski in the first inning and a two-out double by Sam Rice in the second. The two outs constituted a National League high for the year, surpassing the 12 strikeouts of Chicago's Sam Jones and Milwaukee's Bob Buhl.

Carl Furillo and Jackie Robinson each hit two-run homers to help end Brooklyn's three-game losing streak.

Danny O'Connell's eleventh-inning homer, his second of the game, propelled the Braves to victory and a three-game sweep of the Giants.

Yanks' Bonus Player Hit by Line Drive

CLEVELAND, Aug. 27 (AP)—Frank Leja, 19-year-old bonus first baseman of the New York Yankees, was hit in the face with a line drive while pitching batting practice here today and removed to a local hospital with a possible fracture of the nose and cheekbones.

U.S. Cup Forecast: Cloudy, No Change

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Aug. 27 (UP)—UNITED States Davis Cup Captain Bill Talbot, whose forces were flattened to 10 by the Australians, is gloomy about prospects of regaining the international tennis trophy.

"Let's face it, we have only one man—Tony Trabert," said Talbot. "Vic Seixas is 32 years old and who knows whether he'll be able or available? Our other kids are good but we don't take them out of school at 17 the way the Australians do and send them around the world learning to be tennis stars."

(Although no one would come right out and say so, the Associated Press reported it appeared that Seixas, a tired veteran of the tennis wars, is playing his last Davis Cup series.)

(Today, after Seixas and Trabert had dropped the doubles and the trophy, too, Seixas hinted he was at the end of the line.

Let's hope someone, if not me, will be knocking on the door in Australia next year when the challenge round comes up," he told the spectators.)

The Splendid Splinter Logs a Victory

All of Boston's runs in a 4-3 victory over the Tigers are represented here, and the cause of them all is the lanky figure at the right, TED WILLIAMS. It was a moment of about as much drama as baseball allows, even to a Williams: ninth inning, two out, Tigers leading 3-0, bases full of Boston, and Williams at bat. Then there was a swing of a bat, and the ball fell into the stands, and the curtain fell on another poor pitcher who can tell his grandchildren, yes, he met Ted Williams. Waiting at the plate, happy to meet Williams, are Boston's No. 35, BILL KLAUS; No. 20, EDDIE JOOST; and No. 26, FAYE THRONBERRY, all of whom scored ahead of him. At left, waiting his turn at bat, is JACK JENSEN.

$1,000,000 Profit in Mizzou Athletics in Faurot's 20 Years

But Costs Continue Squeeze

They'll Step Out in Pro Football Game Here Tonight

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Aug. 27—Don Faurot's athletic department has earned $1,000,000 profit at the University of Missouri since he became head football coach twenty years ago, but sports budgets have risen to the point where he'll have to continue to make ends meet each season.

The $569,000 budget for next year, for instance, calls for $118,000 for salaries, up some $25,000 from last year, and $120,000 for grants-in-aid, up $31,000 from last year. Those increases alone represent approximately the average annual profit for the last two decades and the budget total is $28,000 above last year's receipts.

But the Tiger athletic department isn't in dire straits; not at all. It has some $300,000 tucked away in cash and bonds after profits last year of $102,000, the second most profitable season in history despite the mediocre 4-5-1 season.

Contrast that situation with 1935 when Faurot came here. Missouri had completed three years of athletics with a deficit, continued to use red ink through Faurot's first season and was heavily in debt for Memorial Stadium and Brewer Field House.

Self Sustaining. Indebtedness on these structures has been retired; the stadium enlarged and paid for with cash; and the gymnasium enlarged to provide the athletic department with ample quarters, also paid for with cash.

While making money for the athletic department, which must finance its activities without help from legislative sources, Faurot's Tiger football teams have turned in a 96-65-9 record, not counting the war years when Faurot was in Naval service.

In addition to financing its own way, football at Missouri must carry the financial load of all other major and minor sports. Basketball does little better than break even, salaries considered, during most years.

Under Faurot's regime, football profits have ranged from a net loss of $16,000 during his fifth year to a profit of $151,400 in 1949, the year Oklahoma played in the Sugar Bowl and Missouri in the Gator Bowl.

Profits from these operations were split among all conference schools. But the financial picture has changed considerably during that time. When Faurot first came here, the Tigers had grossed as little as $45,000 from athletic operations. Now they are spending three times that much for salaries alone.

Friends Help. Grants-in-aid, the above-board way that Missouri and other Big Seven conference members award scholarships to promising athletes, have become an added expense, $120,000 next year. But somewhat offsetting this charge are contributions from alumni and friends of the university to the athletic scholarship budget, as well as use of revenue from football programs and athletic department concessions in the scholarship fund.

Another added source of income in recent years has been the Big Seven Conference itself. The tie-up with the Orange Bowl, with profits shared by all schools in the conference instead of just the team that plays, and division of television income among all conference members, has been considerable. In fact it just about represents another big football game, contributing $41,000 to Missouri last year and providing an estimated $26,000 asset in next year's budget.

Salary Increases. Merle J. Schlosser and Dale Samuels have been added to the football coaching staff at $6400 and $5200, respectively, and Fred Wappel appointed assistant athletic trainer at $4000. Transfer of Chaucer Simpson, freshman coach, to the physical education department with only part-time athletic duties, however, shifted all but $2400 of his $6400 salary off the athletic budget.

Pay increases to staff members included $1062.50 to Faurot, head football coach and athletic director, to $14,500; $600 to John (Hi) Simmons, assistant football and head baseball coach, to $7300; $300 to Wilbur N. (Sparky) Stalcup, head basketball coach, to $8000; $700 to John Kadlec, assistant coach, to $5200; $200 to Tom Botts, head track coach, to $7500, and $200 to Clay Cooper, freshman coach, to $6100.

The pay increases for the coaches is not out of line, inasmuch as the university's entire salary budget was increased by something under 10 per cent next year as increased funds were made available by the General Assembly. A difference, however, is that athletic salaries are paid from income earned in athletics, and not by legislative appropriations.

Dixie's Dandy Is Miami, May Steal the Show From Maryland

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of the annual series of college football previews prepared by W. J. (Duke) Duford, former St. Louis University coach, DuPont played for Marquette and the Green Bay Packers before beginning a lengthy coaching career that ended in 1947 at St. Louis U.)

By Dukes Duford
Down in Dixie, powerful Maryland again will make a bid for national recognition this fall, but the big news out of the South is about the University of Miami, the red-hot Florida independent that is likely to steal the spotlight from Jim Tatum's Terrapins.

Conference-wise, the old coach picks Maryland in the Atlantic Coast, Georgia Tech in the Southeastern and West Virginia in the Southern.

Nationally, Maryland, which opens Sept. 17 against Missouri at Columbia, might be No. 1 from the South, but it's my belief Miami will be the team to watch despite the Hurricane's toughest schedule in history—Georgia Tech, Notre Dame, Pitt, T.C.U., Alabama, Boston College and Florida.

Coch Andy Gustafson, whose team might beat Notre Dame Oct. 8 in the Orange Bowl stadium, has back 41 veterans from a squad that last year nosed out Maryland among others and lost only to a strong Auburn team by one point. Gustafson's line is stronger and faster, fortified three deep. Gene Reeves is a precision passer and the Miami coach, a former West Point assistant, rates Halfback Gene Rouviere as the nation's best—yes, better than Glenn (Junior) Davis who teamed with Doc Blanchard at Army.

Duke to Contend. In the Atlantic Coast Conference it looks like a two-team race between Maryland and the defending champion, Duke. The Blue Devils were severely hurt when they lost Quarterback Jerry Barger and Fullback Wuzh Lutz. But Coach Bill Murray has ample talent returning, including Halfback Bob Paschal off the third-team All-America and scatback Bernie Blaney. The Duke line won't be as fast, but it's heavier and should be more durable.

I'm looking forward to seeing Maryland if only because Tatum, never a shrinking violet in a profession noted for its conservatism, says the Terps are more powerful than any team he has coached, and he's had some of the country's best recently. Maryland up front will be big, fast and deep as usual and, in addition, Frank Tamburello, the sophomore quarterback whiz of a year ago, is being compared with All-America Bernie Faloney of two years back. He's a tremendous runner, good passer, smart play-caller and a defensive demon.

Elsewhere in the Atlantic Coast Conference, George Barclay's North Carolina team seems improved, but unfortunately, so is a schedule that includes the likes of Oklahoma, Notre Dame, Georgia, Tennessee and Duke. Virginia has 26 returning lettermen, including battering-ram Big Jim Bakhtiar, but Coach Ned McDonald befalls weak passing. The South Carolina Gamecocks upset Army the last two years and Rex Enright still has a dangerous backfield, but his line was riddled by graduation.

Vote for Tech. The Southeastern Conference race should be a Grade-A thriller.

A. W. Nebel Appointed To Mizzou Committee
Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Aug. 27—Two faculty members have been reappointed and a new one added to the athletic committee at the University of Missouri. The new member is Arthur W. Nebel, director of the school social work, who replaces Dr. D. A. Hinder, professor of physical education. Dean S. B. Shirley, chairman, and Dean L. G. Townsend were reappointed by President Elmer Ellis.

The committee, which also includes Elmer Webber of St. Louis and Dutton Brookfield of Kansas City as members representing the alumni, administers the Missouri athletic program.

W. J. (DUKE) DUFORD

er involving Auburn, Georgia Tech, Kentucky, Georgia and defending champion Mississippi. It could go down to the last game, too, but I'll cast a shaky vote for Georgia Tech.

Bobby Dodd's Rambling Wreck gave us a preview over TV last New Year's day when Tech beat Arkansas in the Cotton Bowl with sophomores. All-America Center Larry Morris is gone, but not much else. Reliable, crafty Wade Mitchell is again at quarterback with a bevy of backs that includes a new name to remember, 200-pound Stan Flowers.

Ole Miss lost heavily from the championship Rebel team that bowed to Navy in the Sugar Bowl, but Coach Johnny Vaught does have 20 lettermen, including two of the niftiest runners in the Southland, Bill Kinard and Eddy Crawford.

Auburn, which walloped Baylor in the Gator Bowl, is ready to roll again with perhaps the best college fullback in the U.S.A., Joe Childress. Kentucky made a surprising showing last year under Blanton Collier off Paul Brown's coaching staff and expects to have topflight passing and 225-pound Bob Dougherty at fullback for the trap play up the middle.

Georgia, out of the glory since the days of Frank Sinkwich and Charley Trippi, is ready to return to the limelight, but Alabama will have to give Ears Whitworth, its new coach from Oklahoma A.M., time to steady the Crimson Tide.

Vandy Should Improve. Mississippi State could improve a 6-4 record if fall practice uncovers a quarterback. Vanderbilt, which included a precious victory over Tennessee among only two triumphs, should improve and Bowden Wyatt, who gets the job done anywhere, can be expected to rebuild the Vols, too, though he lost Fullback Tom (The Bomb) Tracy to scholastic hurdles.

L.S.U., before it can improve under Paul Dietzel, needs a center, some tackles and a good passer. Tulane, which finished strong under Andy Pilney last year, beating Vandy, tying "Bama and losing by a point to Louisiana State, is relying heavily on sophomores. Bob Woodruff at Florida needs strength at tackle.

West Virginia's rugged Mountaineers seems a shoo-in to win the revised Southern Conference title for the third straight year. Even so, it looks like a year of fine football throughout the South.

(Next: The East.)

These big names of professional football, some new and some old, will be among the many on display in the pre-season benefit game between the Detroit Lions and Chicago Cardinals tonight at 8:30 at Public Schools Stadium. The Lions, western champions for three straight years in the National Football League, are expected to win and add to their great record under Coach Buddy Parker, but the Cardinals are believed to have improved considerably over last year's last-place club.

Dower vs. Young Martin.
LONDON, Aug. 27 (UP)—Dower of Britain will defend his European flyweight boxing championship against Spain's Young Martin at Nottingham's ice rink Oct. 3, promoter Reg King announced.

Racing 'Doubleheader.'

Swaps Runs to Beat Clock, Nashua to Beat Horses

They Duel Wednesday At Chicago

CHICAGO, Aug. 27 (AP)—The West's Swaps, who runs like a well-oiled machine, and the East's Nashua, a powerful colt who seems to run his best when there is something to catch, test their superiority Wednesday in a $100,000 match race.

The winner-take-all showdown for sophomore honors will be over the Kentucky Derby distance of 1 1/4 miles on the main course at Washington Park, whose homestretch measures 1531 feet and the longest in America since Capot ran off and hid from Coaltown at Pimlico in 1949.

The latest odds of the California future book lists Swaps at 1-2 and Nashua at 8-5. The match race is the first in America since Capot ran off and hid from Coaltown at Pimlico in 1949.

Rex C. Ellsworth's Swaps, California-bred son of Khaled-Iron Reward, is unbeaten in eight starts as a 3-year-old. His wins include a length and a half Kentucky Derby triumph over Nashua in 2:01 4/5.

The Derby was the only loss for the Belair Stud's colorbearer in nine outings this year. But since then the rugged, hard-hitting son of Nasrullah has captured the Preknex, Belmont, Dwyer and Arlington Classic to push his two-year winnings to $782,565.

If Nashua takes the $100,000 match race—which will be televised and broadcast by CBS starting at 5 p.m. St. Louis time—he will be only $20,000 short of Citation's record for one season (as a 3-year-old in 1948). He also will be within striking distance of Citation's all-time high total of $1,085,760.

Swaps has won $418,550 this year and $20,950 as a so-so juvenile.

Veteran Eddie Arcaro, the nation's stakes-winning champion, and Willie Shoemaker, who never has been worse than second in national ratings in seven years of riding, will be the opposing jockeys. Arcaro has been aboard Nashua in all of his 1955 starts except the Wood Memorial.

Swaps Beats Older Horses. Shoemaker, also, has missed only one of Swaps' races this year. Dave Erb was aboard when Swaps beat Andy Crevelin's 1954 Kentucky Derby winner, Dermine, by a length and a half in the world-record time of 1:40 2/5 for the mile and a half.

The great demonstration by Swaps against older horses in the California at Hollywood Park was done without Erb ever putting the bat to him.

"Nashua is a much improved horse since the Kentucky Derby, when we caught him in the stretch, then lost him," says "Arcaro. "He's smarter, faster and stronger."

However, in his last start—the Arlington Classic last month—Nashua was considered by many experts to have run a poor race. He had to put on a fast finish to beat out fast-closing Traffic Judge by half a length, covering the mile in 1:35 1/5.

After that, owner William Woodward Jr. said Nashua needed a long rest and shipped him to Saratoga Springs, N.Y., where Arcaro has gotten some fine workouts from him despite rainy conditions.

Before being sent to Chicago this week, Nashua played "Sunny" Jim Fitzsimmons by romping a mile and a furlong in 1:51 1/5 and galloping an additional eighth in 2:05 4/5.

Swaps will enter the match race off a great victory last Saturday in the American Derby at a mile and three sixteenths over the Washington Park grass course. He matched the American turf record of 1:54 3/5 in beating Traffic Judge by a length handily.

Jockey Shoemaker thought the lanky chestnut charger "seemed a bit leg weary at the finish."

It was Swaps' competitive debut on the sod and first race in more than a month. Ellsworth said "he needed the tougher competition after the layoff and should be even tougher against Nashua."

Nashua Has Early Speed. Trainer Meshach Tenney admits that "Swaps never has been extended this year." He adds: "Naturally, our race Wednesday will depend on what Nashua's owner and trainer decide to do. Nashua is quick enough to take the lead this time if they ask him to run that way. He got out of the gate first in the Kentucky Derby."

With the exception of the Kentucky Derby, each colt has gone the 1 1/4 miles route only once. Nashua stepped the distance on a fast track in 2:03 4/5 in the Dwyer July 2 at Aqueduct. Swaps covered it in the Westerner at Hollywood Park July 9 in 2:00 3/5.

The 1 1/4 miles record is 1:58 1/5 by Nour as a 5-year-old at Golden Gate Fields in California June 24, 1950. The Washington Park mark is 2:00 2/5 by Ponder Aug. 27, 1949.

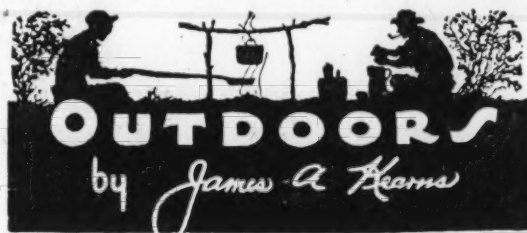

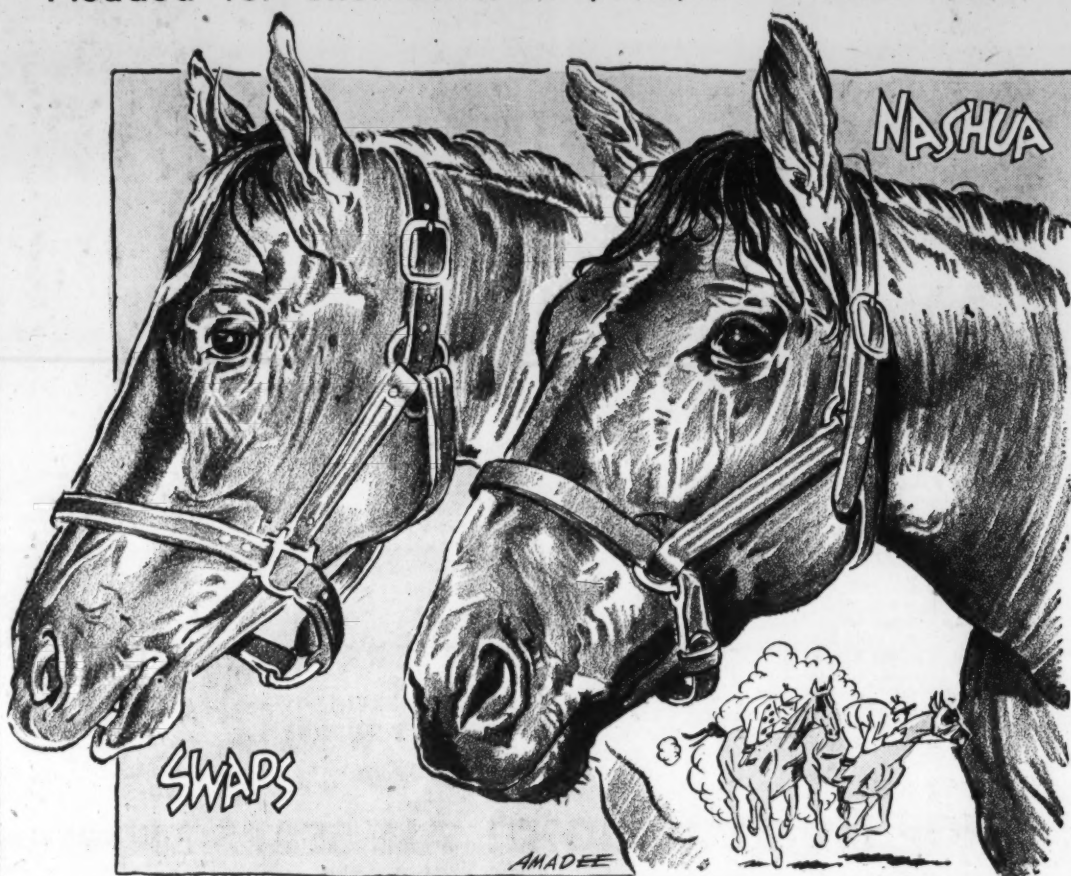

Vote for Swaps

DEL MAR, Calif., Aug. 27 (AP) POLL of 25 horse trainers at the Del Mar track favored Swaps to win over Nashua in their Washington Park match race Wednesday. The vote was 16 to 9.

Those favoring Nashua included Eddie Hayward, who trained Dark Star to win the 1953 Kentucky Derby.

Charley Whittingham, who handles the Llangollen Farm horses, was a Swaps backer. "I think he can outrun Nashua the way he is now," Whittingham said.

Headed for Showdown in $100,000 Match Race

Most Anglers Want Fish, Kind Doesn't Matter.

DAN SAULTS, editor of the Missouri Conservationist, raised an interesting point the other day. He said that perhaps the emphasis of fish management should be placed not so much on black bass and jack salmon but on providing fish, almost any kind of fish, for Missouri anglers.

Saults observed that the fishermen who concentrate solely on black bass and the jacks are in a select class—the specialists in their field, as it were—while actually the far greater number of anglers are fully content if they can take home a nice creel of fish, regardless of species.

Saults doesn't want to leave the impression that he's all for giving up trying to improve black bass and jack salmon fishing in Missouri—a position that would draw bitter cries from many anglers.

On the contrary, Dan is a black bass specialist himself, and he's in favor of whatever can be done to help that kind of fishing. But he does realize that modern fishermen don't go out enough to be choosy—to select bass and jacks and ignore panfish like crappie and bluegill.

His theory that the ordinary permit holder is happy to have a place to go for some kind of fishing with some kind of success is one that seems to be gaining favor with conservation departments throughout the country.

Fishing Areas Increasing. The number of sites being opened for public fishing under state management is increasing in Missouri and elsewhere. These places usually are within easy driving distance of metropolitan areas. Few, if any, provide de luxe fishing efforts; they are made to enable the fisherman to take at least a few panfish.

Actually, for pure sport, it is hard to beat the bluegill. The North Dakota Game Commission calls it: "Pound for pound—the fightingest, fish in fresh water! Best eating fish in our inland waters."

The Missouri Conservation Commission says: "Few other fish can make a line zing like a freshly deceived bluegill. Like grandfather's clock, this little fellow is almost always ready to strike."

Without question bluegills are easier to find and easier to catch than bass. More fishermen are probably familiar with this species than any other. It is the No. 1 pond fish. In fact, the problem with them is overpopulation.

They can be taken in three ways: Light fly tackle, preferably with a size 10 fly. Casting tackle, with small lures and spinners.

Pole-and-line, with small bait. Usually a wet fly, resembling insect larvae or water bugs, will be the most successful for bluegill, although dry flies and popping bugs are at times productive.

Worms the Best Bait. Earthworms are the best bait for bluegill. Small ones should be used and placed on the hook whole, with both ends allowed to wriggle freely.

Grubs, grasshoppers, small water bugs and insect larvae are good tempters. Roaches and crickets are in the same category.

When grasshoppers are used, the hook should be slipped through the rather hard section just back of the head. Grubs are particularly effective in cool weather.

The average weight of a catchable bluegill in Missouri is about six ounces, although a few pounds have been reported.

Regarding the bluegill's standing as a table delicacy, the Missouri Conservation Commission says:

"Come eatin' time and you've had four or five fish fried cracklin'-brown in deep fat, you can loosen up the old belt buckle and relax over your coffee."

Edwin Frankmann, 6508 Oakland avenue, caught a six-pound, one-ounce large mouth bass while trolling in Kentucky Lake. It was the prize catch of the season in the Murray (Ky.) area. He boated a total of 15 fish.

Angler's Surprise. Dr. Victor E. Hrdlicka, a St. Louis physician, writes: "On a recent fishing trip to Minnesota, Mrs. Hrdlicka and I had a rather unusual experience. We were fishing small lakes near Walker and using surface plugs almost entirely and having better than average luck."

"At dusk, one evening, Mrs. Hrdlicka got a strike (on a surface plug) of what appeared to be a good-sized fish, judging from the fight it put up."

"On netting the catch, we found there were two bass, about 1 1/4 pounds each, hooked on the rear treblehook of the plug."

"I wonder what the odds on an occurrence like this would be."

Dr. and Mrs. Hrdlicka live at 7424 Cromwell drive, Clayton.

The dove season will open Thursday in Missouri and extend through Oct. 15. Birds may be taken from one-half hour before sunrise to sunset. Limits are 10 daily and 10 in possession.

Doves also become legal game in Illinois starting Thursday but the season in that state extends only until Oct. 5, with limits of eight daily and eight in possession.

Former Junior Tennis Stars Capture Title

A pair of 1954 star junior players, Carole Boshard and Lois Weinstein, came through with a 6-2, 6-1 upset victory over Mrs. Mercene Parker and Marilyn Mueller in the women's double final of the St. Louis District Tennis Association's annual title tournament yesterday at the Triple A courts in Forest Park. Miss Mueller and Mrs. Bunny Wahl won the event last year.

Misses Boshard and Weinstein, ranked seventh in the nation's junior girls' doubles for 1954 season, predominated the junior activity prior to this season.

Miss Weinstein, a sophomore at Smith College, won the Muncy and district singles last year and Miss Boshard was the winner several years ago.

The top-seeded Al Holtmann, 19-year-old former junior star, defeated Ray Wiese, a veteran ace, in a 6-2, 6-2 semifinal men's singles match. Holtmann, winner of the 1954 Muncy and 1955 Kennedy invitational, meets Bob Hill, 1950 district champion, in the final today at 2 p.m. Hill won from the 1945 titleholder, Wayne C. Smith, 6-4, 1-6, 5-5, default.

Ward Parker and Ralph Hart, 1954 doubles winners, scored a 6-3, 6-3 victory over the Zierwogels brothers, Bob and Bill, in the lone semifinal match played yesterday. It was the first time the Zierwogels had played together as a team in 10 years.

The winners play Mike Oberlander and Holtmann, who attends Illinois U. in the fall, in the final at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Parker will go after her fourteenth women's singles championship when she meets second-seeded Miss Weinstein at 2. Both players finished their semifinal matches on Friday's program.

St. Matthew, with a 5-2 record, opposes St. Paul (1-3-3) in a Hickey Field summer soccer league match tomorrow evening.

The Friday night game will be between St. Edward (1-3-3) and Holy Rosary (2-3-3). The league schedule will be concluded the following week. Last week, St. Edward defeated St. Paul, 2-1, and St. Matthew nosed out Holy Rosary by the same score.

Although prospects for league play are reported very poor, Municipal Soccer Association officials are still asking for club entries for the coming season. Applications should be sent to Bud Grasser at the City Recreation Department, Municipal

3 Open Dates In October for St. Louis U. High

By John J. Archibald

Isn't there some school closer than Rochester, N.Y., or Baton Rouge, La., which would like to play St. Louis University High a game of football?

Father Thomas Kelly, athletic director of the Junior Billikens, has been trying desperately to break up a three-weekend layoff that the team faces in October but hasn't been successful. He sent out 76 letters requesting football dates, but received answers to only two, both of them no.

Three unsolicited offers were received, but they were for games in Rochester, Baton Rouge, or Springfield, O. That, Father Kelly feels, would be over-emphasis of prep athletics. The weekends that are unfilled for the St. Louis U. High team are Oct. 14, 21 and 28. The Junior Bills are especially eager to get an opponent for Oct. 21 or thereabouts.

St. Louis U. High has had difficulty in its athletic scheduling since becoming an independent when the Prep League was disbanded. The team, which will be coached this season by Gene Hart, has a healthy list of foes on both ends of the three-week layoff. In the first half of the season the Junior Bills play Southwest, Roosevelt, Beaumont and East St. Louis. After the open dates come C.B.C., Lincoln of East St. Louis, and Assumption in a Thanksgiving day game.

The only coach who will have the same position as last year at St. Louis U. High is Jim O'Neil, the track mentor. In addition to the appointments of Hart as football coach and Emmett Hanick as head basketball man, Father Kelly announced that Jim Robinson would coach baseball and Ebbie Dunn would direct soccer. Robinson has coached the Aubuchon-Dennison Legion team, composed of St. Louis U. High and McKinley students, for many years, and this season the team won the city championship.

Vashon High is seeking a football opponent for Oct. 1. Anyone interested should contact Athletic Director Frank B. Wilson, at the school.

Oklahoman Among Five Basketball Players
Going to St. Louis U.

Gary Balcer of Ponca City, six-foot-four all-Oklahoma prep player, is among five more players announced as intending to enroll at St. Louis University this fall.

Richard Berg, 6-4 DeAndreis player of 1951 before going into the Navy; Bruce Blume, 6-2, Warden, Ill.; Bill Harless, 6-0, Madison, W. Va., and Tom O'Brien, 6-1, Rochester, Minn., are others accepted for enrollment.

This group brings to a total of 15 the prospective freshmen for Billiken basketball.

12 Newcomers Enter Women's Open Tourney

Mary Lena Faulk, Mickey Wright and various other newcomers to the women's professional golf circuit will be new faces in the field for the second annual St. Louis Women's Open tournament Sept. 8-11 at Norwood Hills.

A list of players expected to compete has been received here by Jack Burns, head of the Eastern Missouri P.G.A., which is promoting the event. The list includes 12 who did not compete here a year ago.

Besides Miss Faulk and Miss Wright, both of whom have edged into the money-winning circle this year, the newcomers include Joyce Zlake, Alice Bauer, Diane Garrett, Vonnie Colby, Betty Bush, Gloria Armstrong, Peggy Kirk and Bonnie Randolph.

Burns said most of those who appeared here in 1954 are expected to return. This group is headed by leading money winner Patty Berg and Betsy Rawls. In addition are Louise Suggs, Jackie Pung, Marlene Bauer, Betty Hicks, Pat O'Sullivan, Bev Hanson, Marilyn Smith, Fay Crocker and Betty MacKinnon.

Amateurs Jackie Yates, Honolulu, and Gloria Fecht, Inglewood, Calif., also are likely to play in the St. Louis event. Certain St. Louis women amateurs also will be invited to play.

The women's professional stars, finishing a tournament in Kansas City this weekend, have no other events scheduled between now and the St. Louis competition. A number are expected to arrive here this week for early practice rounds, Burns said.

THIS IS THE CAR TO TRY FOR SURE!

Great Features back-up Chevrolet Performance: Anti-Dive Braking—Ball-Race Steering—Outrigger Rear Springs—Body by Fisher—12-Volt Electrical System—Nine Engine-Drive Choices in all models—and, finally, the great scientific, technical and engineering resources of General Motors.

This is the Chevrolet that's rewriting the record books—that's making all the other low-priced cars eat its dust... and most of the high-priced cars, too! Be sure to try this new champ before you buy anything.

When we say that Chevrolet's the car to drive, the official record books of stock car competition back us up all the way.

Thanks to them, we can prove what we've been so puffed up about ever since our V8 hit the road. Listen to this—as just one example:

Daytona Beach—NASCAR* Acceleration Tests Over Measured Mile From Standing Start. That's the place and the test, now here's the result. Chevrolet captured the four top positions in its class! Eight out of the first 11! And on a time basis Chevrolet beat every high-price car, too—but one!

What does that mean to you? For one thing, it means there's a special thrill in store when you take a check-out ride in this car. It means, too, that there's a special pride about owning a car with this much getup and go—a car with the kind of acceleration, cornering and handling qualities that make driving safer and more fun for you.

Come in—the weather's so nice these days that we love to get out in it too! And giving you a demonstration drive is all the excuse we need!

Italian Hamlet Getting Ready For Homecoming of Gino Prato

Town of Statale Too Poor to Provide Much of a Welcome for Shoemaker Who Won $32,000 on TV.

STATALE, Italy, Aug. 27 (AP)—Word has reached his native village that Gino Prato, the humble shoemaker made rich and famous in America by television, is coming home next week.

Statale, a hamlet of 500 population perched on a north Italian hillside, would like to give him a worthy homecoming but hardly knows how.

For Statale is just as poor today as it was when Gino left 25 years ago. Gino the shoemaker is rich now as he returns home after winning $32,000 in the $64,000 question TV show with his great knowledge of opera.

It was a telegram from Giovanni Paolo Prato, Gino's 90-year-old father, that made him decide not to try for the $64,000. Ever since then the old man has waited anxiously for his son's promised visit.

"We would like to celebrate," said Eugenio Garibaldi, the town messenger, who spent his youth with Gino, "but what can we offer a man who owns so many millions?"

He was speaking of lire, of course. It takes 625 lire to make one dollar. But $32,000 here is almost like $1,000,000 in New York. It makes 20,000,000 lire here.

The messenger said there was one thing he thought they might do.

"Since he left here I am sure he never has tasted pastasciutta con sugo di lepre," Garibaldi said.

"That is pasta with a ragout of hare. It is a specialty of ours. So, we will treat him to dinner, according to the local style."

In America, television viewers were amazed with Gino's knowledge of opera. Here, it's almost part of their ABCs.

The mayor, Eugenio Ravara, a lawyer, said, "My wish would be that all my fellow citizens might compete in that TV contest. They certainly would do well, all of them, and I would be the mayor of a millionaire town. Not of poor people."

But they have hopes that Gino may bring good fortune with him. A farmer hopes he might invest about 10,000,000 lire ($16,000) to exploit a mineral water spring which villagers claim has medical virtues.

Prato Wears Rented Suit at Daughter's Wedding.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (UP)—Lorraine Prato, daughter of a Bronx shoemaker, was married today with a fanfare that might be the envy of a Park Avenue debutante.

The only celebrity present was the bride's father, Gino, Italian-born cobbler who parlayed a lifetime knowledge of opera into $32,000 on a television program.

It was a splendid wedding.

The bride wept. Gino sobbed. Flashbulbs popped. Despite his new wealth, the father of the bride knelt before the altar in a rented cutaway and striped trousers, "You only wear 'em once," he explained.

The bridegroom was 26-year-old Eugene Joannides, a Korean war veteran.

Phone Courtesy Pays Off.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (AP)—The "hello girls" of the Atomic Energy Commission are dividing up a bonus for being polite and efficient. The commission has given "outstanding service" awards totaling $2525 to its telephone communications unit. The unit's 22 employees operate telephones and teletypes. All but one are women.

Tongue-in-Cheek Report

If They Really Want To Ease Tensions---

By Art Buchwald

THE ITALIANS COULD SEND US GINA LOLLORIGIDA AND WE COULD SEND THEM BUTTER.

ONE OF THE GREATEST TENSIONS in the world today is caused by people in some countries who still speak their own language when talking to American tourists. This has led to a great deal of misunderstanding and bad will.

To stop Americans from smuggling, easier customs regulations should be introduced. Restrictions on nylons, cigarettes and frozen foods should be lifted. It probably can't be decided at one meeting, but there is no reason why Americans, being who they are, should not receive the freedom of the port.

SOME CYNICS might bring up the question of the United States lowering tariffs. Instead of easing tension, a move like this could aggravate it. American manufacturers would never stand for it and the first thing you know there would be agitation to get the United States out of the United Nations.

And this sounds like a small thing, but it would help if the men at the summit would agree on a universal formula for making dry martinis. As it stands now, each country has its own ratio, and Americans who are trying to enjoy themselves when traveling still can't get over the message that they like their martinis dry, dry, dry.

Some people have suggested that one currency be adopted throughout the world, and the currency should be dollars. Nothing would be solved by adopting such a measure. If every country used dollars there would be no advantage to being an American tourist. Many Americans would give up traveling, and you don't ease tension when you keep Americans at home.

AT A FUTURE MEETING it would be a good idea to set up an international exchange program. The Russians could send us caviar and we could send them butter. The British could send us Scotch whisky and we could send them butter. The French could send us perfume and we could send them butter. The Germans could send us Dobermans and we could send them butter, and the Italians could send us Gina Lollorigida and we could send them butter.

There are many other items that could also be put on a future agenda. The practice of European shops closing their doors to American tourists during lunch hours should certainly be discussed, and the fact you can't get a drink at London airports on Sundays must be brought up.

The list is long, but time is running out. At any summit meeting it's a matter of give and take. The question of who gives and who takes depends on how open to suggestions the Big Four are. We'll just wait and see.

Mistress and Maid

By Bennett Cerf

THE new maid looked mighty fancy, so Mrs. Jones thought it the better part of wisdom to warn her, "Remember Gwendolyn, you're not to wear jewelry when you serve my guests this evening."

A BRASH HOTEL OPERATOR in the Catskills, reports Hy Gardner, labeled a home-made summer revue at his hostelry, "The Borscht Years of Your Life." A dyspeptic critic did not share the operator's enthusiasm for the production.

"Borscht, my eye!" wrote the critic. "He should call it, 'The Worst Years of Your Life!'"

HUNTER OF POLAR BEARS

By Dickson Terry

JAY B. SMITH is a short, stockily built man with an air of somewhat studied geniality whose life is divided among three rather widely assorted pursuits. By vocation he is a mortician, and by avocation he is a big-game hunter and amateur magician.

Having put on countless of benefit shows around St. Louis in the past 25 years, he is probably most widely known here as a magician.

He prefers, however, to be known as a big-game hunter. Adjoining his office on the second floor of his funeral parlor at 7456 Manchester avenue, he has a trophy room whose walls, floor and ceiling are literally covered with testimonials to his prowess with a gun, and mementoes of his visits to strange and faraway places.

Only one small space was left on one wall, and there members of his staff had stuck a small sign which read, "Reserved for Polar Bear."

Smith is just back from his latest big-game hunting expedition, which took him to the ice fields near Spitzbergen, off Norway, where he and a companion bagged six polar bears.

LEAVING the trophy room, we went back to the Smith's office where he sat down behind his desk to tell me, with the aid of a lighted globe and a closely penned notebook, just how they did it. Smith keeps a methodical day-by-day account of all his expeditions.

His companion was Harry Wedler II of St. Louis, owner of a chain of self-service laundries. Their destination, Spitzbergen, is as you may remember from your geography, an Arctic archipelago due north of Norway and about as close as you can get to the North Pole and be on land. It has long been the base for polar research.

Smith noted that there were three scientific expeditions on the combination freighter and passenger boat which carried them from Norway. They stopped at Bear Island, which Smith recalled mainly because they caught 230 codfish in an hour without the use of bait—just a two-pound sinker and a large hook.

At Spitzbergen they changed to a small, sturdy boat called the Havella, built for Arctic travel and equipped with both sails and diesel engine. They navigated around to the west side of the island where polar bear hunting is to be had.

AS IT turned out their most trying ordeals came not from bear hunting, but from the weather. The temperature there in July is generally from 40 to 45 degrees, but seal boats in the vicinity warned them by radio of a terrific storm coming so they anchored in a harbor. Soon the seal boats joined them. The storm lasted two and a half days. Then they traveled north to Wilhelm Island, where they saw their first polar bear.

Smith and Wedler had played a hand of gin rummy to see which would get the first shot at a bear. "Even though I do card tricks," Smith grinned, "I played fair. Wedler won, so it was his bear."

Polar bears, Smith explained, are rather innocent creatures governed by a mixture of curiosity and caution. They will run from a man, but are curious about noises and smells. Wedler had to maneuver for a couple of hours to get down wind from the bear and close enough to get a shot.

"I was watching through binoculars," Smith related. "I saw the bear rise and saw Wedler get him with the first shot. Our skipper said he was one of the largest taken this year. He estimated its weight at between 1200 and 1400 pounds."

They skinned the bear and then the skipper astonished Smith by cutting out its gall bladder and taking it back to the boat where he mixed it with a bottle of cognac. Wonderful tonic, he explained.

Winds from the north brought not only unseasonably cold weather, but ice floes, and the first thing they knew they were frozen in. The skipper said it was the first time in his memory such a thing had happened there in July. In the meantime, however, they hunted bear. They trailed one across the ice for four and a half hours, but he got away. They spotted another several hundred yards away, and started after it, but the skipper told them to wait and he would bring the bear to them.

"HE BUILT a fire under an iron pot," Smith related, "and then he filled the pot with bear fat and seal fat. It made quite an odor."

When the odor reached the bear, he started sniffing and moving in. "Then," Smith continued, "the skipper started the boat engines. The bear, the skipper explained, would be curious about the noise and come to investigate. And he was right. The smell and the noise between them brought him up to within a hundred yards."

They got that bear too. After their boat had been frozen in for four days the skipper decided something had to be done, so they started ramming the ice. For 27 hours they churned back and forth before breaking through to open water. Daylight lasted around the clock, and Smith and Wedler sort of lost track of time and slept when they were sleepy. In the meantime Smith did card and magic tricks for the crew to relieve the tension.

They stopped at a place called King's Bay, and the boat's crew asked Smith if he would give a show for a mining crew there. He did. It was the first entertainment they had had in years. Also in that neighborhood they visited the site of one of the most foolhardy of all polar expeditions. On July 11, 1897,

Ordeal Back on Job From Vacation

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (AP). RETURNING from a vacation is much more of an ordeal than going on one.

There is a thing called the "post-vacation blues," a hang-over disease from a sprightly spree in freedom. Maybe half the adult working population of America is suffering from this seasonal epidemic ailment at this moment.

One returns from a summer vacation to his daily bread-and-butter chores with the hypnotic feeling of a wild bird fixed by the steady beady gaze of a snake. The job a man lives by holds no glory; he groans in his rut; he feels no victory in accepting his usual insulting weekly paycheck.

(Did any man in the history of the world ever come back from a vacation and meet a raise in pay? What a delirious dream! "Welcome home, Jones," says the boss. "Boy, have we missed you! When you find a few extra bucks in your next envelope don't think it's a mistake.")

Lacking this surprise, the ordinary vacationer comes back to his daily tasks in office or factory with a split-leg regret. One foot faithfully plods toward the regular routine, the other holds back in a desperate toe-clutch on a last lost liberty. What can a man do to avoid this straddle of mind and body? How can a man adjust to the problems created by the death of a vacation?

HERE ARE A FEW how-to-do-it suggestions to cushion the shock of actually having to earn your own living again:

1. Inherit money during your vacation. There is no point in elaborating this idea further. Its advantages are obvious.
2. Try to get called for jury duty. The pay is small, but your boss can hardly fire you if you plead guilty to serving the republic.
3. Grow an ulcer. Higher-ups are notoriously sympathetic toward this ailment because, since they are susceptible to it themselves, they are sure that anyone afflicted with it is dedicated to his job. They will be particularly impressed by the fact you developed the ulcer during your time off from your work.
4. Take up a new hobby, such as bird watching, or if you're the indoor type—girl watching. Nothing will pep up your living more than your first thrilling glimpse of a rose-breasted Grosbeak trilling on a bough or a tufted secretary at bay on an office limb.

5. Go on a diet. If you are normal you probably gained a pound a day on your vacation. (A fellow is duty bound to if he stayed at a hotel on the American plan, which calls for three square meals a day.)

6. If you are single, go ahead and marry the girl you met at that summer resort and made all those sunshine promises to. Marriage will end any man's vacation.

7. IF YOU ARE ALREADY WED, tell your wife you'd like a divorce so you can marry a blonde you met on the beach. Naturally she'll want to know which blonde you have in mind, and this will result in interesting and stimulating family conversations that will keep the memory of your vacation alive for months and months.

8. Simply buckle down again to work and face the fact that vacation is over. Of course, if you actually do this it proves you are a born leader and don't really belong in the employee class at all.

9. Inherit money. When you come down to it, this is the first and last solution. Summon your strength and try to inherit as much money as you can. The more you have the more you have to count while waiting for your next vacation.

Here one sound and simple rule applies. If at all possible, the money should be inherited from other members of your family. Money inherited from strangers always causes local gossip.

Golden Days Bring Trials and Blessings

By Leonard Hall

IT WOULD be hard to pick out one month in the farm year more crucial than another. Yet in a grass and livestock operation such as ours at Possum Trot, this month of August is probably as critical as any.

It is a month when we spend more than the usual amount of time scanning the sky for clouds with moisture in them, studying the weather maps for cold fronts and generally hoping for rain. And as the time for marketing the steers and calves draws near, we study the markets, hardly consoled for weak prices by cheerful announcements from Washington that there'll be a food shortage in America by 1975.

You may have been conscious of a general lack of rainfall in the mid-west during recent weeks and read stories of the crop losses which are being anticipated because of the late summer drought. Yet this is offset in the news by reports of torrential rainfall in other parts of the country, with floods that have caused heavy loss of life and incalculable damage to property. The drought damage is less spectacular, yet very real to the farmers who are in its grip.

HERE AT POSSUM TROT, for example, much depends on getting normal rainfall at this time of year. Even with a poor market, the final prices for our livestock depend on the finish and "bloom" we can put on our animals and this, in turn, depends on the luxuriance of the pastures. So we walk out over the fields day after day, gauging how much longer this field or that will carry its grazing load and where we can put the animals next in order to keep them gaining. Equally important is that next year's income depends in part on how long we can stretch out the pasture this late autumn for the breeding herd and the young animals which we're starting out for next year. When we must start feeding a month or two early, as we did during all the drought years, next season's potential profit starts at once to dwindle.

Work in the fields, too, depends on moisture. In the rotations on a grassland farm, most of the land to be broken for fall planting of small grain and seeding of grasses and legumes is old meadow which has been used for hay and pasture for several seasons. Such fields have a heavy sod and have been tramped by livestock, so that they are impossible to work until rains soak the earth to a depth of several inches. Until the rains come we can only mark time, waiting with a heavy investment in seed and fertilizer and wondering whether the autumn will pass and find the crops still not in the ground.

DESPITE SUCH PROBLEMS, August has compensations. Haying is over and the barns are filled with baled oats, alfalfa and clover. The days stretch out one after another in a kind of golden succession. Mornings now are always cool, with the thermometer often standing in the fifties and a heavy dew—and mist in the valley along the creek which burns off when the sun warms up. The garden has about given up the ghost, though by dint of watering there's a late crop of roasting ears, enough tomatoes to keep the table going and a patch of late cucumbers that ripen so fast we can't pick them.

Our bees have become a secondary pursuit at Possum Trot, simply for lack of time. But the two hives did well until the extreme dry weather hit and we have taken off enough honey for our winter's supply. How much more honey they'll be able to store between now and frost, however, depends on rainfall to bring on the Spanish needle, asters and goldenrod. Right now the prospects for a good autumn honey flow look pretty slim. Yet there's enough honey already stored to take the bees safely through the winter, and it is a crop of which we prefer to take enough only for our own use.

THE POTATO PATCH did better than in all our years at the farm, turning out a tremendous yield for the few pounds we planted last spring. We haven't, in fact, finished digging them yet and hardly know where we'll store them after they're dug. But we've come to accept the country philosophy, based on a long experience with good years and bad, that a too-bountiful crop is far better than no crop at all. To dig the spuds we borrowed Harry Russell's old single-shovel plow which was used behind one horse to lay out corn rows. We hooked it behind the tractor in low gear and went once down each row, turning up more potatoes than I really looked forward to picking up. They filled several wheelbarrows and now we must go through the rows, just where we'll put those potatoes, we aren't quite sure.

Still, it's fun to sit down to a meal and calculate which courses are the produce of the farm. Not the today, of course, for we hesitate to tangle with the revenuers. But the broiled bass from the pond, French fried onion rings, whipped potatoes, tomato and cucumber salad, the shortening in the biscuits, the strawberry jam, the butter and milk and cream and the blackberries in the cobbler. For a while, at least, it would take quite a siege to starve us out at Possum Trot.

Heartbreak After Shooting War

50,000 Women Rearing Families in South Korea Without Fathers—Visit to One Widow

(Editor's note: The shooting is over but the heartbreak of war still lies heavily over South Korea, where 50,000 women are rearing families without fathers. In the following story the wife of the Associated Press Tokyo bureau chief visits a war widow in a land where sympathy must be spread very, very thin.)

By Roby Eunson

SEOUL, Aug. 27 (AP). ON June 10, 1952 on the west central front of Korea, Cpl. Kim fell dead from a Communist bullet that ripped through his head.

When the news reached his wife, she, with two daughters and infant son, was not at home. They had no home. More than a year before, shortly after Kim had been drafted, their bicycle repair shop and living quarters were completely destroyed by bombing.

War widow Kim Soon Ne is only one of 50,000 women in South Korea who today are trying to bring up families without fathers.

Widows take second billing only to orphans in this heart-breaking scene you see here today.

It's true that everyone feels sorry for Kim Soon Ne, age 30, and her fatherless brood, but Koreans have to spread their sympathy very, very thin.

So where are they now? Three years after her husband was killed driving the Communists from the land of his ancestors, Kim Soon Ne and her daughter, now 12, are huddled together making a yellow tablecloth of grass linen.

It is not a tablecloth for the dining room of their new home. According to tradition, Kim Soon Ne will not marry again, so there never will be a new home.

Mother and daughter are laboring over the tablecloth with the hope it will catch the eye of some foreigner in a gift shop where articles made by Korean war widows are sold.

If this tablecloth and more like it sell, then Kim Soon Ne may be able this fall to send her daughter to high school.

Perhaps. When Soon Ne learned that Cpl. Kim never would come home again, she followed an all too familiar pattern. First she sold or traded all her personal belongings for food; then she stood on the streets with palm outstretched. And for face in her distress and loneliness she turned to her older daughter, Heh Sook, then age 9.

Help came when she was admitted into the Sung Sin Home for war widows and their children in Seoul, one of the best of 24 such institutions in Korea.

A Presbyterian mission is responsible for the existence of WOMEN ARE TAUGHT TO SEW, TAILOR, WEAVE AND DO ALL SORTS OF HANDWORK.

Sung Sin, where Mrs. Kim and Heh Sook now squat sewing together in a room filled with busy but dejected women.

If the little girl yearns to stretch her growing limbs and spirit by bounding and shouting with friends in the courtyard below, she gives no indication.

Her eyes, when lifted from the needlework, reflect inborn intelligence, an eagerness to learn. This fall she will be ready for high school. However, education in the upper grades in Korea is a privilege and is costly.

The mother is defeated by the figure—approximately $2.50 per month. But hope in the young of even the most unfortunate takes time to extinguish, and the two pairs of hands work on.

When Kim Soon first came to Sung Sin she knew nothing about needlework. However, when a woman enters, she is tested for aptitudes and skills and placed where she will benefit most. Then she is trained in the hope she eventually will become self-supporting. As soon as this is achieved the mother moves on. Sung Sin is very crowded and applications for admission are many.

At present there are 72 mothers with an average of a little more than three children apiece

—a total of 231. The children range in ages from two to twelve.

SOME statistics of the institution were explained by a slight middle-aged social worker named Kim Duk Ki who said, "Every woman and her children are assured of shelter from the elements, and food—meager, but food."

"Each family is assigned to one bare room, living, eating and sleeping. The government donates the rice and the home provides a supplementary food, usually vegetable soup. The cost daily for each is estimated at 30 hwan—10 cents in your money."

"When the mother learns to produce a commodity that is marketable she receives pay. This varies according to her capabilities and the demand for her product. The most a Sung Sin woman can expect to earn is 30,000 hwan or about $5 to $6 a month."

"The women are taught to sew, tailor, weave and do all types of handwork. Those who are inept at these skills are given chickens, a goat, and perhaps a pig to care for in a day nursery next to the school. It is barren—without a toy or a book in sight. The children take their naps on wooden planks. They are poorly dressed and dirty, due to a shortage of soap and water. But their black eyes sparkle and their faces crinkle into smiles as they imitate animals, dance like raindrops and sing passages from the Bible."

As a matter of fact, there is no assurance that her small income, as well as that of other Sung widows, will remain constant. The market for their handwork is chancy, being made up of concessions in the Armed Forces post exchanges and a few special shops throughout the country.

Too, the lack of equipment often makes it impossible for them to take advantage of an opportunity to fill a large order. At the Sung Sin Home, which is considered the best equipped, there are four worn-out sewing machines and three looms which must have survived the turn of more than one century.

During the hot sweltering summer days Soon Ne and her daughter are not aware of that economic dictator, the law of supply and demand. They know their shoulders ache and their eyes burn, but the yellow tablecloth must be finished.

Children not old enough to help can not be with their mothers during the day. Mrs. Kim's small son is cared for in a day nursery next to the school. It is barren—without a toy or a book in sight. The children take their naps on wooden planks. They are poorly dressed and dirty, due to a shortage of soap and water. But their black eyes sparkle and their faces crinkle into smiles as they imitate animals, dance like raindrops and sing passages from the Bible."

At mealtime and at night Mrs. Kim is a mother again, alone with her children. Then she can love them and provide their growing bodies with extra needed nourishment from bits of fish or even a piece of fruit. They are bought carefully for her monthly $5. But the pittance won't stretch without limit.

As Mrs. Kim sat hunched on the floor, she spoke quietly: "It is strange. This summer Heh Sook works and plans and dreams of her high school. I too plan and work for her high school."

She shook her head. "I do not even understand myself," she said.

"Soon the weather will cool and the time for school will come."

"Nothing will change. . . . There will be no miracle."

"And for Heh Sook there will be no high school."

Marriage Division Of Work In Home

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

THE 50-50 deal in marriage doesn't mean that a man should do all his work and half his wife's. Yet some women seem to interpret it that way, and no doubt a few, by careful maneuvering, put it over. But they are contributing little to the sum total of marital happiness in their homes, and I'm afraid Mrs. Van L. is expecting too much of a willing partner.

"My husband works all day at his office; I work all day at home," she explains. "When evening comes, we are on an equal footing. There's still work around the house to be done. Is there any reason why I shouldn't expect him to take half of it then?"

To answer intelligently, one would have to know a good deal more about both of you, Mrs. Van L. How much harder does he work than you? Does he come home tired after fighting heavy traffic? What is it you expect of him on his arrival? Are you trying to make marriage a partnership for him, or a chain gang?

MRS. SIDONIE MATSNER GRUENBERG, long known as a champion of the homemaker's right to have help, felt obliged to sound a warning to wives, in a recent address. She said flatly that some of them were confusing co-operation with exploitation, and that sharing the work in the home does not mean saving it up all day for a tired husband to tackle on his return in the evening.

If you go about it tactfully, you can probably make a pleasant partnership out of some of the evening chores, and develop real companionship in the process. On the other hand, you may have to take into account his preference for some jobs rather than others.

The first thing for you to do is to increase your own efficiency and make sure that you are not dawdling and wasting

Center on Good Points

By Glen Shepherd, M.D.

ONE of the most wearing habits is self-pity. You are so put upon and not properly appreciated, so underpaid or overtaxed, that you feel sorry for yourself.

You can do something about it. Listen to Helen's story, for an instance.

"Phil just doesn't appreciate how hard I work for him. Never any sympathy from him. Of course, he is a good husband in some ways. He always has money to take care of the bills and my allowance."

She sighed. "But he never takes me out. He'd slip notices how clean the house is or how I look—or anything."

TRULY, HELEN looked desolate. Her shoulders drooped and a tear began creeping down her cheek.

Helen didn't change her husband but she could change her attitude—and she did when the way was pointed out.

Her doctor said, "Helen you can make yourself feel physically ill by going on this way. It's a bit silly. You can either feel indignant and neglected or happy—but not both. If you want to, you can start concentrating on the good things in your life rather than on the bad. Your husband is a man and, I suspect, very human. When you start feeling cheerful around him, you may be surprised at the attention it attracts."

A FEW WEEKS LATER, she dropped by the office again. She was radiant. Her eyes sparkled and she began to smile.

"Doctor, I tried it. I just pretended that Phil and I were beginning all over again." She hesitated.

"Of course, it wasn't really that easy. At first, I'd slip into the old habit of feeling sorry for myself." She looked up and smiled. "But it seemed that the more often I'd catch myself at that and do an about-face, the less often it bothered me. And do you know what? Phil has changed, too. Of course, he still doesn't notice a lot of things that I'd think he would, but he does pay more attention to me. He even suggested that we go out last night."

And so it is with many people. The slough of despondency can be avoided, the habit of self-pity can be broken. You lead this life only once. Why not rearrange your attitude so that it won't be unnecessarily burdensome?

If you ever get into New York there is one honest tailor here. He has dummies in his window who look like people.

He's down around Seventeenth and Railroad Avenue. He never

Assortment of 'Causes' in One Package

By Mary Margaret McBride

A CALIFORNIA reader has written me a mildly chiding letter suggesting that this column should be used exclusively to champion whatever vital cause I consider most important.

As a sort of intellectual exercise, I started mulling over the subjects which arouse me to anger even in dog days.

ONCE A WEEK, usually on Monday when the weekend death totals are on the front pages, I get in a rather about highway slaughter and savagely try to figure what kind of action people would take if a preventable disease killed 50,000 persons a year and crippled and maimed another 150,000.

By Tuesday I'm likely to be raging around about the way we Americans muddy the waters of international relations by our statesmen's habit of talking too much.

The middle of the week often brings a frustrated feeling about man's complete lack of understanding of man—usually in doing, reading, overhearing (or worse, uttering!) some careless remark which reduces the target to a quivering mass of insecurity and misery.

By Thursday I am disturbed by something purely personal and not as alive as I should be to vital cause. I am just fed up with the tasteless pap I've been faithfully consuming under my diet regime. This is not a great issue and I know it isn't but sometimes I feel I could write a wonderful piece of prose addressed to people who are just starting to put on those fatal five pounds.

I AM PRETTY SURE to have at least one day in the week when I feel about closed mind and explore the stupidity and stubbornness of those who can never see anything but their own side of a question. And, alas, too often for comfort I catch myself in this category and then I have an introspective session with myself on my shortcomings that unfits me to write anything.

I guess, California reader, you'll just have to put up with me being a cause-jumper.

Today—if I were the crusading type—I'd have a hard time deciding between two indignations. After a few days in town, which included some floral gifts, I'd like to ask certain florists just whom they save their fresh blooms for. And now, back in the country, I feel like campaigning violently for a self-starter on all gasoline powered lawn mowers. The grass is as high as an elephant's eye, and all I have that I can wield successfully is a pair of manicure scissors.

Handed guys like myself. I was walking past his shop when I saw a dummy that looked like me. He told me he got his dummies from a reform school.

This one had run-down heels, baggy knees, egg stains and cloth-resisting wrinkles.

The tailor told me, "Find another guy with your offbeat build and I'll give you club rates."

SO, IF YOU are old enough so the mosquitos have stopped biting you, about 5-7, round shouldered, if your legs have made a U-turn in your shoes and if you have reached the last hole in your belt, send me your name and address.

In return I will send you a loose-leaf application for one set of Bermuda shorts with options of buying.

His dummies are fat, thin, round-shouldered, bandy-legged and knock-kneed. It looks like Yucca Flats Prep School.

We would like to mention his name because he's the only tailor who makes buttons for left-

DEAR MRS. POST: Would it be wrong to go to a cocktail party if one does not drink? Quite often I receive invitations to cocktail parties and in the past have turned them down because I did not think it would be right for me to go. However, by staying away I am missing the opportunity of seeing many of my friends and also meeting new ones. I would appreciate your advice on this matter.

Answer: Certainly you can go—it does not obligate you to drink. If you refuse to go, it is very disapproving. If you go, you are approving of it for others even though you yourself don't take a drink.

DEAR MRS. POST: Is it necessary to invite the wife of the officiating clergyman to a house wedding, where the guest list is limited to the immediate families and fewest friends of the bride and groom? The ceremony will be followed by a buffet supper.

Answer: Under usual circumstances she is always included. But if the wedding is very small and she happens to be unknown to you, it would not be considered discourteous to invite the clergyman to remain alone after the ceremony.

DEAR MRS. POST: "My husband is very much interested in photography and takes pictures wherever we go. He is often asked by friends and by people we have just met, to send them copies of certain pictures after they are developed. I would like to know if it would be proper to send the negatives so that they may have prints made themselves, or must we send the developed pictures?"

To send them the negatives would be not only proper but just. Otherwise it could become an embarrassing extravagance.

DEAR MRS. POST: My sister and I are going to be married at a double wedding. However, we have run into a snag and need your help. It concerns the seating of the bridegroom's parents. Which set of parents are seated in the front pew? This is bothering us a great deal as we don't want to slight either one.

Answer: If there is not room for all in the first pew, the parents of the bridegroom who is marrying the eldest sister sits in the first pew and the other parents in the second pew.

Q. What makes women cry so easily?

A. Partly "born that way"—girl babies seem to cry more easily than boys. Later, they find it a method of managing men. Moreover, women are more emotional, more subject to depression, less likely to try to conceal their feelings.

Q. Does she accept the reverse, which would apparently be that if she really loved you she wouldn't expect you to make such great sacrifices?

Apparently you both need education. Send stamped self-addressed envelope for my free rating scale, "How Do You Know It's Love?"

Q. SHOULD an adopted child who has been raised by a sweet fostermother still look for her real family?

A. I think she certainly has a right to find out who they are, if she can.

Q. We wanted to adopt a child but were refused because our religion is different from that of the child's mother. What difference can that make?

A. None to you, but perhaps a great deal to the mother. She faces a great ordeal in giving up her child. In some instances she would think she was doing it the worst kind of harm by letting it be brought up in a different faith.

Q. Is there any special secret for keeping love alive?

A. Yes, plenty of them! One is, keep yourself an interesting person. Build up as many mutual interests as possible with your husband. (Each of you should have separate interests of your own, too.)

Q. What makes women cry so easily?

A. Partly "born that way"—girl babies seem to cry more easily than boys. Later, they find it a method of managing men. Moreover, women are more emotional, more subject to depression, less likely to try to conceal their feelings.

Helen Merrill, who just opened at Birdland, was signed to a five-year deal, 22 weeks a year, before she stepped on the bandstand. She was offered the co-starring role in "The Mountain," opposite Spencer Tracy, but her "Bus Stop" contract will keep her on Broadway until February. Elaine already has been given one vacation from the play; the producers permitted her to go to Hollywood to make "Too Late My Love," and her performance in that flicker earned her the offer to do "The Mountain." . . . Latest report on Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher, who were supposed to have exchanged vows last June: they've decided to "wait till next year."

Doctor's Waiting Room

By Christopher Billogh

GOOD doctors are busy men. Suffering people flock to them. They cannot serve everybody at once. So they must have rooms in which their patients wait.

When they tell a patient to come at a certain hour it does not mean necessarily that they will see the patient at that hour. Experienced patients know better than to expect anything like that.

Since there are more patients than there are hours in the working day no doubt the doctor has been forced to tell a number of patients to come at the same hour. Then, after they are assembled, he will try to do the best he can.

After all, the doctor makes things comfortable for his patients in the waiting room. He provides easy chairs in which they may sit and adequate lighting and air conditioning.

HE WILL HAVE HUNG THE WALLS of the waiting room with interesting engravings of ancient cathedrals and Roman ruins and other like illustrations of a restful and educational nature.

He will have provided also ample reading material in the form of magazines and newspapers. No doubt the doctor's office is the only place where a patient sees some of the magazines. So while he is waiting he will be afforded an opportunity to catch up on his reading.

IT IS QUITE POSSIBLE that in one of the magazines he will find an appealing article or story and become absorbed in it. The article or story may be fairly long. So, before he gets to the end it is quite possible that he will be told it is his turn to see the doctor.

Now what would the doctor say if the patient were to send word to him that he is in the middle of an interesting article and will the doctor kindly wait until he gets through?

Former St. Louisan's Discovery: Life Is Real, Life Is Earnest and You Have to Live It on Run
When You Publish Outstate Paper

By John Keasler

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

ST. CLAIR, Mo. Aug. 27.

YEARNING exists in some souls; a hard-to-scratch itch. These individuals would be country editors. One the surface these persons usually show few symptoms of their malady—they don't break out in a rash nor, for the most part, do they ever actually break away from their jobs at the typewriter, bottle works, public relations factory or whatever.

Perhaps they don't have the cash to take over a weekly newspaper, as per secret dream, or perhaps they don't have the nerve or knowledge. But the itch is there, a surprisingly prevalent one—its victims are numerous. Maybe you, yourself, have had a slight urge in that direction.

If so, it's not surprising. The fictionalized picture of a country editor is delightful. One is wise and wryly philosophical, the sage of a storybook town, solving local problems with a light touch of editorial genius and pausing en route to the shady fishing grounds only long enough to pick up a fistful of cash from the happy advertisers en route.

Dorothy O. Moore had the dream, the itch—country-editoritis—and was one of the comparative few who acted on it. Now she's a country editor. What of the vision, Dorothy, whence now the bright illusion?

"Ha!" snorted Mrs. Moore, the Missouri woman editor who holds forth here in St. Clair as a relative newcomer to the field of weekly newspapering. Well, we'll be the first to admit that "ha!" isn't the most comprehensive quote in the world, on the face of it. But it's difficult to interview Dorothy Moore. It's not that she won't hold still; she can't hold still. She's too busy. It's not that she doesn't like to talk or that we don't like to listen, because she does and we do, but she's got too much to do.

And she does it at a dog trot. Our own dog trot, we discovered, gotten a little rusty around the tendons in the placid and peaceful restfulness of citified newspapering—but by the end of a day of following this rural editor around we felt like an Olympic champion who had just collapsed at the tape.

Mrs. Moore, a woman with hazel eyes and a level gaze and unbounded energy and a businesslike, although somewhat harried approach to life, wanted a weekly newspaper. She's got it. Two weekly newspapers, in fact. She got them all by herself.

Her story is one of the wrenching transitions from blithe innocence to perspiring reality—her energy, and imagination, made the difference between sink and swim; the weekly newspaper field, she discovered in 1952, is a trifle different from the advertised version. It can be, in fact, a place of quicksand, quagmire and—foremost—sweat.

Her story, also, can make other yearners toward Weeklydom either look with added hope toward their goal of a rural paper or else—depending on their nature—take an added half-hitch on their present eight-hour day, start thumbing carefully through the company's pension plan pamphlet and smiling even more broadly at the boss's jokes.

MRS. MOORE, a St. Louisan, born in 1906, the daughter of a tool maker turned mathematician, had—seemingly—fine qualifications to become editor-owner of a small newspaper. She was a writer.

She had always wanted to write, even as a child; sold verse as a young girl, did a column at one time for the paper she now owns.

In 1924 she married Howard Moore, a St. Louis police corporal. She alternated between being a housewife, working as an accountant and doing free-lance writing. Some of her writing made national magazines, including a moving account of her small son's bout with polio. (Denis, the son, now 16, is a strapping, active lad.)

She was the first woman president of the Outdoor Writers' Association of Missouri. She has done prolific free-lance feature work for St. Louis newspapers. The weekly bug, all this time, lay fairly dormant; just the little itch. But editor friend kept telling her she should run her own paper. Finally, in 1952, she stuck.

After all, wasn't she an experienced writer?

As it developed, and swiftly and starkly, being a writer qualified her to run a newspaper about as much as Edgar A. Poe would have been qualified to run the New York Stock Exchange. Writing helps, but it's far from enough. On account of business is business.

"My ignorance was unlimited," Mrs. Moore told us, appearing more than a little appalled as she looked back at 1952. "Why, I came into this business thinking a weekly would be somewhat of a toy—a profitable one, yes, but certainly not much trouble."

"After all, it seemed so little—eight or 10 pages. And I would have a whole week to get it out! Why, I was told that after I got the paper out on Wednesday night I could just sort of coast right on over the weekend. And do you know what?"

Mrs. Moore paused for a brief shudder, and said, tightly: "You know what? I believed it."

So, with bland assurance, in June, 1952, she bought the St. Clair Chronicle, strolled into her very own newspaper office—and was caught up in a whirlwind which, to this very day, hasn't allowed her to get entirely on balance since. The surprising thing is she survived—although she works, by her own estimate, a 110-hour week in the process and has to pull minor miracles out of her hat to do it.

She was a writer. Well, that was just dandy. Except it seemed impossible to find time to write anything, inasmuch as she, immediately on making the purchase deal, discovered there were approximately nine thousand and thirty-three mysteries connected with weekly publishing—things she knew precisely nothing about, or knew only vaguely.

Ad. Rates on job printing, plasma of most weeklies. When to get help. How to dummy pages, how to set up bookkeeping, how to fill out government forms, how to cope with the clanking presence of a flat-bed press; an invention which has made generations of strong men weep.

She inherited a printer and an office girl when she forked over $22,400 for the Chronicle shop—but it was a case of find more help or give up. She managed, one way or another, regardless, it became evident that the invention of the 24-hour day hadn't taken her into consideration at all; there just wasn't enough time.

While she was taking a classified hurriedly in order to make a telephone call before going back to see what the printer was complaining about, Farmer Brown would come in and announce he had a double-jointed rhubarb for the front page—or Mrs. Jones would drop over to use the typewriter a little while to write to her aunt in Fargo.

At which point spot news would blow up eight miles down the highway. Mrs. Moore, the editor, would dispatch the photographer, Mrs. Moore. She takes her own pictures.

"THERE were times I thought I would sink without a trace," said Mrs. Moore. "Nobody can possibly know the demands of this business unless they've been in it."

Mrs. Moore did not sink. That is one thing that makes her a story. She now employs seven persons, and others part time, and her payroll last year was some $26,000. The reason she did not go under, by her own explanation, is that she was able to shake off the delusion that she was connected with anything glamorous. If anything, she has gone overboard in the other extreme; she deals in cold facts and figures now, basicaly, although, of course, human relations must play a big part in any small town endeavor.

"Small town newspapering is strictly a business," she says, somewhat grimly. "Just like a shoe store or a grocery store—except the initial investment is higher, the upkeep is higher and the work is harder."

Adhering to this disenchanted philosophy, she made the business pay—last year she bought a second newspaper, for $18,000 without equipment—the Tri-County News of Sullivan, which is 15 miles west of St. Clair. (St. Clair is 47 miles west of St. Louis. Population of St. Clair is 1779, of Sullivan, 3019.)

For somebody who knew little or nothing about the business end, she's made quite a record. Her gross this year shows a whopping increase over last. How did she do it? By being able to shed her illusions and—as importantly—working more than 100 hours a week. Her accounting background is largely responsible for her success; without a knowledge of business administration, she said, she would not have made it.

Also—she is, now that she has to be, hard-headed businesswoman. No deadbeats adorn her subscription list. She believes in her paper as an advertising medium; gives no free puffs. One example—a merchant made a stab at planting a straight-out ad, written in backwoods dialect, as news.

Dorothy shot it straight back to him, replying with a note in kind: "Ain't no news in it!" The merchant grinned, sent it back as a paid ad, and noted, "You'll make it, gal, you'll make it."

Nobody could accuse Mrs. Moore of a lack of conservatism. As to political views she says she has none, but her outlook is somewhat to the right of right; way right, that is. She sees socialism creeping up on her from all sides. She prides herself on being a rugged individualist, and that she is.

Yet, despite all her talk about facts, figures and profit, Mrs. Moore is proof that small town newspapering is far more than just a business. "Always has been, and just possibly always will be. For 'business men' don't make the trade mad at them, if they can help it; not repeatedly, anyhow."

At one time or another, she said, everybody in the area has been made at her about something—we were in the office when an irate subscriber tried to get a news item yanked.

"My business is to print the news," said Mrs. Moore, gently, "but so firmly—and she wasn't playing to the gallery, either. She printed it."

Her editorial policy has been progressive; she plumped for a new high school, and the bond issue was passed; has editorialized for a Folk Festival, now an annual affair; a new police car, other items, and currently is all out in promoting St. Clair as a site for industry.

HER shop is a study in order from chaos; Orono Wide-man, mechanical superintendent, bounces around taking care of the Cotrell press, the two linotypes, the rest of the complete printing equipment. (Mrs. Moore says it is increasingly true that a small-town editor must print two or more newspapers in the same shop to make an adequate profit.)

She has some front office help now, but even so the "business" is run in a highly informal manner; there's so much to do that occasionally everybody disappears. At one point we found ourselves alone in the office, busily sending back the wondrous words of country corre-

(her bedtime, nights, Sundays and most holidays) one night last winter. Her telephone rang before six o'clock.

"Hey, Dorothy," a subscriber reported brightly. "My lettuce is up, despite the cold weather." That's the way it goes. Big story.

THE work never ends. Now, she has gone into the office supply business, simply because she needed an experienced newspaperman to help her, couldn't swing his salary otherwise. Kelsey Short, formerly of the Sikeston Standard, has been hired—he is pitching in hard and faced with a multitude of tasks, said dryly: "This is considerably different from a daily."

Mr. Moore, with a few days off from the police department, said equally dryly: "This is considerably different from anything in the world."

Mrs. Moore, the woman editor, said, "This is, simply, the hardest kind of drudgery."

But, to us, she seemed her own contradiction; she looked like a woman interested in everything and having a lot of—heck—fun.

Among the conglomeration of odd items that pile up in weekly shops were a pair of gourds, the kind used to make music in those Latin-American bands. Mrs. Moore's vacation was back in 1952—before she became a small town editor. She's hanging on to them—it may be a long time before another vacation comes up.

"Give us some copy on the machine, any copy at all!" the man in the back shop called. A policeman came in with some news notes. An unshaven, job-seeking printer wandered in, and asked Mrs. Moore, who got her glamorous weekly, "Are you very busy?"

paper just writes and prints itself."

The everlasting mistakes creep into print. A new restaurant opened, pridefully ordered an ad for the "Steak House." When folks got the paper they were interested to note the ad about the "Snake House." Interesting, but not appalling.

Mrs. Moore, called on to talk at the Kiwanis Club, one jam-packed hectic day, was so bemused and preoccupied she got her speech-opening joke garbled; realized, with a shock and a blanch, hours later that her confused version had had a decidedly risqué connotation. She still gets kidded about that. You never saw such a startled bunch of Kiwanians.

After a typical day that started at 7 a.m., went through a mad race of news-gathering, ad-getting, chaos fighting and deadline racing, Mrs. Moore sank deep into sleep about one a.m.

Anna Maria Alberghetti will sing "Italian Street Song" as the guest of the Gary Crosby Show on KMOX at 7:30 tonight. Husband Eddie Davis was driving from New York to Florida. Malmberg got the highway patrol to issue a four-state alarm and an officer flagged down the surprised Davis.

The subject of one program was an escapee from Devil's Island, Renee Benoit. Malmberg found a Trinidad newspaper man who had helped Benoit escape in 1937. A man who knew only as "Jungle Jim" of Panama turned up when Malmberg on a chance called the main hotel in the Central American city.

"The only person we couldn't find was a Salvation Army man who was on Devil's Island in 1937. I put in 15 calls to London and Scotland and finally heard he died in Paris," Malmberg said.

FOR a program about a Japanese minister who lived through the Hiroshima bombing, Malmberg called in the local Japanese consul to talk to the man's family in Japan. The family flew to Hollywood on one day's notice.

"I work on some shows weeks in advance but usually I start one week before the show," he said. "If I can't dig up the people by Thursday we get a new subject."

The New Yorker magazine printed a cartoon showing a man who was to be reunited with his wife on "This Is Your Life." She was lurking behind the curtain with a gun in her hand. Malmberg posted the cartoon in his office as a reminder things could be worse.

Where There's a Phone Malmberg Will Find You

By Aline Mosby HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27 (UPI).

THE MAN with the biggest single telephone bill in Hollywood—more than $2000 a month—calls numbers all over the world each day to come to television's biggest surprise party.

Don Malmberg has to round up all those relatives and friends who surprise the "star" (or victim, depending on how you look at it) on "This Is Your Life."

Malmberg has tracked them down by way of tom-toms in the African jungle and officers of the highway patrol. He makes an average of 200 calls per program and today, as I sat in his busy office, he waved a phone bill for $2211.07.

"This is an exhausting job," he admitted. Malmberg knows many of the overseas telephone operators and he calls Africa as casually as you'd phone a drug store.

When master-of-ceremonies Ralph Edwards decided to probe into Victor McLaglen's past on "This Is Your Life," Malmberg had to round up people who had played a part in the actor's life.

ONE brother was fighting the Mau Mau in Africa and another was on a safari. "We got native runners to track them down," he said.

Another tough job was finding Martha Raye's husband when her life was to be depicted on the NBC-TV program. Husband Eddie Davis was driving from New York to Florida. Malmberg got the highway patrol to issue a four-state alarm and an officer flagged down the surprised Davis.

The subject of one program was an escapee from Devil's Island, Renee Benoit. Malmberg found a Trinidad newspaper man who had helped Benoit escape in 1937. A man who knew only as "Jungle Jim" of Panama turned up when Malmberg on a chance called the main hotel in the Central American city.

TV Change in Britain

Commercial System Starts Next Month

By Edwin Shanke LONDON, Aug. 27 (AP).

SUSIE and Bill get married Sept. 23 to the accompaniment of a few well-chosen advertising blurbs—and so commercial television will be born in Britain.

Tens of thousands of London housewives will put down their mops and dust rags to watch the mock wedding. And there are sure to be some husbands taking a peek, too.

For, Susie and Bill are the leading characters in the country's first daily television "soap opera," marking the start of regular commercial TV programs in Britain—the most revolutionary change in British broadcasting since crystal sets picked the first sound programs out of the air 33 years ago.

A formal preview opening of the new London station the night before will be a white tie and tails banquet affair in the Guildhall followed by a variety show.

For the first time, Britons will have a chance to switch programs if they want to and for the mock wedding they'll be bombarded on the air with advertising from a British station.

AFTER BITTER debate, parliament set up a commercial TV system under an Independent Television Authority (ITA) about two years ago to compete with the government sponsored British Broadcasting Corp. (BBC).

Commercial television, as conceived by the British, is quite different from that in the United States, where advertisers sponsor the shows. Here, advertisers will be completely dissociated from the programs and have no say about their content.

The ITA, partly dependent on a government loan, owns the transmitting station but has no studios.

Under present plans the ITA will lease transmitter time to program contractors who produce the shows and sell the advertising time from which they draw their revenue.

The BBC, which previously had a monopoly on the air, will continue its policy of no advertising, drawing its main revenue from the three-pound annual license fee ($8.40) each set owner pays. But it already is taking drastic steps to meet ITA competition.

BBC is increasing its program hours from an average 36 weekly to 48, one hour under the limit permitted by Britain's television act. That will mean an extra 20 programs weekly. The accent will be on more light entertainment, which commercial TV also is emphasizing.

Commercial TV is a big gamble for the advertiser. Because it has never been done here before, no one knows whether it will "take." But the new TV promoters claim practically all available time—six minutes in every hour for spot announcements plus shopping guides—has been sold at rates up to $2800 a minute for a peak viewing hour spot.

Classical Records

Including the Scandinavian

By
Thomas B. Sherman

JOHAN SVENDSEN, another composer of consequence whose music is rarely heard in American concert halls, is well represented on a series of recent recordings devoted to Norwegian compositions. His Symphony No. 2 in B Flat and his Second and Third Norwegian Rhapsodies reveal a pronounced and unflagging lyricism with regional Scandinavian coloring and a strong sense of organization. The performances by the Oslo Philharmonic Orchestra under the direction of Olvin Fleistad are excellent. The orchestra is a good one and the reproduction has a fine clarity and a singing resonance. (Mercury. One 12-inch LP.)

CONCERTO: George Gershwin's Concerto in F for Piano and Orchestra seemed a mere sensation of the moment when it was first performed back in the '20s, but it has shown a surprising durability. Now two more recordings of it have been made. Alec Templeton accompanied by the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, under Thor Johnson gives it a free, relaxed treatment but with plenty of rhythmic snap. (Remington. One 12-inch LP.) Julius Katchen, with Montavani and His Orchestra, is more sultry. (London. One 12-inch LP.) Despite the awkward formulation of this concerto—Gershwin never mastered the art of development—it continues to be an alluring work and certainly a representative American work. Katchen also plays "The Rhapsody in Blue" on the second side of the London recording. . . . Sylvia Marlowe gives a clean, crisp performance of Manuel de Falla's Concerto for Harpsichord and Orchestra with the concert Art Players, but the Rieti Partita and Carlos Surinach's "Tientos" which follow are more rewarding. The astringent harmonies and generally austere character of the de Falla work are offset only in part by its interesting color and rhythm. The Rieti piece is light, melodious and engagingly formal. Surinach's three "Tientos" are short essays suggesting a Moorish atmosphere. Reproduction is first rate for all instruments. (Capitol. One 12-inch LP.)

ORCHESTRAL: Antonio Vivaldi's "Four Seasons" are nature studies, as the title suggests; and while their imitative effects are naive in comparison with the descriptive writing of subsequent composers, no music is more delicately and fancifully poetic. The performance by the New York Philharmonic String Choir with John Corigliano as soloist has a studied precision and great beauty of tone. The reproduction could hardly have been better. (Columbia. One 12-inch LP.)

Best Sellers

VIVALDI: "The Four Seasons," see review in this column. (Columbia. One 12-inch LP.)
BRAHMS: Piano Concerto No. 1 played by Artur Schnabel and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, Fritz Reiner conducting. (RCA-Victor. One 12-inch LP.)
12-inch LP. . . . Herman Scherchen delivers masterfully bold and muscular readings of Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and No. 8. A little less drive in the second and third movements of the Eighth would have been conducive to the easy grace the scores suggest. Excellent reproduction. (Westminster. One 12-inch LP.)

CHAMBER WORKS: Handel's Ten Sonatas for Flute are invested with what seems a wholly appropriate formal grace by the flutist John Wummer with Aldo Parisot, cellist, and Fernando Valenti, harpsichordist. Formal patterns are worked out expressively and the group of sonatas, as a whole, shows a surprising variety. Reproduction of Mr. Wummer's flute tone is exceptionally good. (Westminster. Two 12-inch LPs in album.) . . . Members of the Vienna Octet play the Beethoven Septet with consistent beauty of sound and complete authority of style. Written for a wood, strings and horn combination it has much the same mood and content as a Mozart divertimento. In this instance Beethoven was content with providing an entertainment.

OPERATIC EXCERPTS: Selections from Rameau's "Hippolyte et Aricie" are likely to seem archaic and non-dramatic to the modern ear but their elegant beauty is timeless. Performances by a group of French soloists and orchestra conducted by Roger Desormiere have a minimum professional competence and the sound reproduction is below the average according to present standards. (London. L'Oiseau Lyre. One 12-inch LP.)

It's Official, Bob Hope Is Sticking to Comedy
HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27 (UP)—Bob Hope, back from a three-week vacation in Europe, denied rumors that he'll quit comedy in favor of drama.
"Ever since I did the Foy picture, word's been out that ol' Bob was going to don the heavy grease paint and make like Hamlet," he grinned. "I'm getting offers to do pictures, I'd never been considered for in the past."

Final Show Tonight at Muny Opera

THE final curtain of the 1955 "Municipal Opera" season will come down tonight with the last presentation of the Rodgers and Hammerstein Pulitzer prize-winning musical, "South Pacific."

The "South Pacific" cast is headed by Kyle MacDonnell, as Ensign Nellie Forbush, and Norman MacKaye, as Capt. Brackett. Eugene Dorian, as Cmdr. Harbison; Harry Weber, as Lt. Buzz Adams; Joe Cusanelli, as Stewpot; Christine Palmer, as Ensign Dinah Murphy, and Lewis Bolyard, as Professor.

"South Pacific" is based on James A. Michener's "Tales of the South Pacific." It tells the story of natives, French planters, and American military personnel on a tropical island during World War II.

The song hits include "Some Enchanted Evening," "Bali Ha'i," "Younger than Springtime," "I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Outa My Hair," and "There is Nothing Like a Dame."

Tonight's performance will begin at 8:30. Tickets will be on sale from 9 a.m. until show time at the theater in Forest Park.

When the phrase "he has run the gamut" was created, it could easily have been Calhern who inspired it. On stage and screen, former St. Louisan Calhern has run that gamut from "King Lear" to "Julius Caesar," from a villainous high priest of pagan religions in "The Prodigal" to Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes in "The Magnificent Yankee." He was a Wall Street broker in "Executive Suite," a man of letters in "Men of the Fighting Lady," the king in "The Student Prince," a British general in "Betrayed," a physical culturist in "Athena," and a teacher in "Blackboard Jungle."

Calhern brings another characterization to St. Louis when his new play, "The Wooden Dish," opens a one-week pre-Broadway engagement at the American Theater on Sept. 19. In "The Wooden Dish," Calhern portrays a man who has reached the ebb of life, a far cry from the role he played the first time he appeared here in 1911. It was with Grace George in "Much Ado About Nothing" at the old Olympic Theater. An advance man for Miss George's traveling Shakespearean company, in need

At the Movies

WE'RE NO ANGELS—Three escaped convicts—embezzler Humphrey Bogart and murderers Peter Ustinov and Aldo Ray—go all out to give virtue a hand in its struggle with evil even if it requires a killing or two. Verbosity turns the unusual tale into a moderately entertaining film. ST. LOUIS.

THE PRIVATE WAR OF MAJOR HESTON—One lady doctor, a handful of nuns and 300 young cadets tangle with Charlton Heston, who scores a triumph in his first attempt at comedy. But 9-year-old newcomer Tim Hovey gives him a good run for the laughs. FOX.

LADY AND THE TRAMP—Walt Disney cartoon all about dogs. Real cute, too, sometimes too cute perhaps, but on the whole sprightly and amusing. Looks like this will be the biggest thing with the kids since Davy Crockett. ORPHEUM.

INNOCENTS IN PARIS—Some mildly amusing fun and romances on the wistful side in this English attempt at the French style as seven Brits weekend in Paris. Sometimes too obvious, certainly never very subtle, in the script, but with a good cast headed by Clair Bloom, Claude Dauphin, the adroit Alastair Sim and Laurence Harvey. SHADY OAK.

THE KENTUCKIAN—A Kentucky pioneer days adventure-romance gets pretty dull before star-director Burt Lancaster injects it with large gobs of unnecessary brutality. Then it just gets disgusting. LOEW'S STATE.

Louis Calhern Has Run Theatrical Gamut

of extras, hired Calhern and five other members of his Central High School football team as extras.

That was the last the gridiron or academic halls ever saw of him. The stage-struck youth joined a roadshow stock company and obtained the rest of his education in drama and musical comedy, vaudeville, carnival and burlesque.

Today, his personal stationery still identifies him as "Formerly of Dunn's Comedians," name of one of his earliest troupes.

"We billed ourselves as comedians because in movie cities it was easier to get bookings if the theater manager thought he was buying a funny show. After we arrived in town we might give the audience one or two farce comedies, but Shakespeare was our chief stock in trade, and we palmed it off on them as often as possible."

Calhern recalls appearing with the Park Shendoo Players in St. Louis in 1914 and playing the very first performance on what is now the site of the Municipal Opera in "As You Like It," which starred Margaret Anglin. Among Calhern's stage successes are "The Song and Dance Man" with George M. Cohan, "The Love Duel" and "The Tyrant" with Ethel Barrymore, "In a Garden" with Laurette Taylor, "Dinner at Eight," "Golden Boy," "Life With Father," and as the swashbuckling Polish Colonel in S. N. Behrman's "Jacobowsky and the Colonel."

Calhern stars in and directs "The Wooden Dish," the thirty-third play of his career which has also included 66 motion pictures. Edmund Morris wrote the play which is being presented at the American Theater by Armand S. Deutsch as the first play of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society's subscription series.

50 Years On Stage

Anniversary
For Helen Hayes

By William Glover

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (AP). Stage star Helen Hayes, despite herself, is about to celebrate 50 years in show business.

"Well, gee," she comments with devastating brevity when asked about the event. The little-girl phrase is, however, untouched with wonderment. Queen Helen is not a woman impressed with dates, anniversaries and the clippings of fame.

But because the theater is a notably sentimental world, Miss Hayes is aware that hoopla is inevitable for a golden anniversary.

"You know me," she said, dabbing vigorously at a spot of cheek make-up. "Always being talked into things."

The star, whose gamut of roles extends from Pollyanna to Queen Victoria, was talking in her dressing room at the ANTA Theater. There, along with Mary Martin and a notable cast, she is currently appearing in a three-week revival of "The Skin of Our Teeth" which has already become one of Broadway's most memorable events.

When the run is finished Miss Hayes intends "very definitely" to carry out a program she has set of easing up on professional commitments and taking more time for sewing, gardening and all the other pleasures of domesticity at her suburban home where she is simply the wife of Charles MacArthur, playwright.

Her husband and Anita Loos are currently working on "Glory Be," a drama about the late Lady Mendl, a renowned art collector. Miss Hayes may appear in it later this season.

She denies published reports that a "special production" is planned to celebrate her fiftieth theater year which officially begins the first of January.

ALREADY, however, the American Theater Wing, of which she is president, has persuaded Miss Hayes to permit a golden anniversary ball here in her honor on Dec. 30. It seems inevitable that other events will follow.

The Hayes career, she recalls when pressed, began in her native Washington when she was 6 years old and the dancing school which she attended gave a public show.

In her cut-down-on-work program, Miss Hayes three years ago "rejected" any further movie roles, now seems ready to abandon television.

Mature Widow's Plight

Man Keeps Putting Off Wedding Date

By Martha Carr

Dear Martha:

I AM a widow of mature age and have been going with a man for some time. We are supposed to get married but every time the wedding date draws near he advances some reason for postponing it. He is financially able. He is always wanting to meet my relatives but changes the subject when I mention meeting his. Yet he professes to care deeply for me. What is your advice? DOUBTFUL.

My advice is to tell him that if he wants to marry now, fine. Otherwise, you will go your separate ways. That will force him to a decision, and if he walks out of your life with such an ultimatum, he can't love you very much. But stick to your word. Otherwise, as reluctant as he is, he'll keep putting off that marriage date as long as you'll let him. Also, I think you'd be smart to have a showdown on the family situation. Don't let him change the subject. If you're going to marry him, by all means find out something about his family and his background. He's a product of his home and even though his relatives may mean nothing to him now, you should at least know what kind of people they are.

Dear Martha:

I HAVE A 16-YEAR-OLD STEPSON. About a year ago he left his mother and came to our house but his father made him return. Since then he has been a regular visitor, spending a day or evening. He will start high school this fall. He has been telling me about stealing articles and says he has had two close escapes from the police. I can't tell his father as the boy trusts me to keep his secrets and yet he won't listen to anything I tell him. Too, if something should happen and it develops that I knew what was going on, that will cause trouble, too. Please help me. STEP-MOTHER.

In the first place, I wonder if he actually is guilty of these serious escapades or if he merely is trying to impress a new member of the family circle. If you let him know that you will have to take this matter up with his father, he might break down and admit he was bragging and exaggerating. However, whether it's the truth or not, you are making a mistake merely to listen without taking action. Tell him you can't keep this matter in confidence and let him know that you must tell his father. Then the two of you together can decide on your best course. After all, his father has every right to know and by keeping it from him you are making it easier for the boy to go his reckless way.

Dear Martha:

I STARTED A FRIENDSHIP with a boy in the Marines through correspondence. He was the brother of a friend of mine. When he came home on leave we met and fell in love. I waited for him for four months. He recently took another leave and we discussed plans to marry, deciding to wait until he was out of the service. Three days before his leave was up he told me he didn't love me anymore. He met another girl who doesn't have a very good reputation. I'm afraid he likes her, or maybe he's just trying to forget me. His friends tell me he really loves me but I can't understand why he would deny it to me. I've tried to date and get interested in others but I love him. Should I write and tell him of my love that will never die? WORRIED.

I don't doubt that you are crazy about him, but I do doubt that your love will never die. Nor do I think he loves you. I know it sounds brutal, but if he really cared for you he would say so, and I'm afraid you're fooling yourself when you think he might be trying to "forget" you by dating someone else. No, I don't think either of you is really in love. Love, to be good and enduring, must be built on a far firmer foundation. He was the first to realize it, so don't try to hold him with love letters. Let him go. It could be that later you will meet again and that your liking for one another will grow into love. But don't try to fan life into something that I believe never existed.

Dear Martha:

I AM A BOY 17. I want to work my way through college out west and to marry a girl a year younger than I. We have been going together for more than two years and we love each other. We feel we are mature enough to marry and that our marriage will be successful. Our parents naturally are against it, but as we will be self-supporting, I will no longer be dependent upon them. However, if we marry, she will not be able to complete her high school education here, as her school does not accept married students. There is a high school connected with the college I plan to attend but if we leave now, it will break all ties with her friends and deprive her of one of the best and happiest years of her life. I am confident she will make new friends out west and she is willing to make this change but I am worried about the effect it will have on her. I want to be sure our decision to go away is right. CHUCK.

Since you realize that by forcing her to leave, she will miss a happy senior year at high school, will have to make new friends and may be lonely away from her family, why do you insist on going ahead with your plans? Granted you love her, Chuck, but surely you can wait a year to be married and at least let her receive her high school diploma with her classmates. Both you and she will need your parents' consent, so it's possible that you're making all these high-flown plans in vain. Think this over calmly, Chuck, and weigh all the disadvantages against the joy of being together. If you love her that much, why do you have to go to the other end of the country? Why not go to school near here, let her finish her school work, date her during the next year or so, then think about marriage? Wait until your parents and hers can see it your way. Don't start out with that kind of a cloud over your lives.

New Autumn Coats Emphasize Long, Lithe Look

Practically All Garments Have Sloping Shoulders, Tending to Slim Down Entire Effect—Little Padding

DAVIDOW'S MACKENZIE TARTAN COAT, PATTERNED IN LIGHT BLUE AND BRIGHT BLUE WITH NAVY, RED AND WHITE LINES. FULL SLEEVES CONTRAST WITH THE SLENDER BODY OF THE COAT.

DYNEL AND ORLON ARE BLENDED IN THE FABRIC OF THIS COAT WHICH HAS THE APPEARANCE OF FUR AND IS ONE OF THE NEW STYLE IDEAS FOR THE WINTER SEASON.

FORSTMANN TWEED THAT HAS A KNITTED LOOK IS THE CHOICE FOR A CAVALIER COLLARED COAT BY GALLANT. A BIG COLLAR SPREADS TO THE EDGE OF THE SLOPING SHOULDERS.

THE "A" LINE SILHOUETTE IS A FEATURE OF JABLOW'S SLIM WAISTED COAT THAT HAS A LOW-PLACED FLARE AT THE BACK BUT IS STRAIGHT AT THE FRONT IN KEEPING WITH THE LONG, LITHE LOOK.

LESUR'S ROYAL BLUE AND BLACK TWEED IS USED FOR A FITTED TOWN COAT BY MARQUISE. FOX MUFF GIVES SOFT LINE TO COSTUME.

By Sylvia Stiles

THE long, lithe look which is the symbol of smartness in autumn apparel is illustrated by the new coats that are on display in St. Louis. Collections are varied, but the emphasis upon slimmness is a feature that every woman will want to consider when she shops for the basic item of her winter wardrobe.

The columnar silhouette is the one featured most extensively but those who like a certain swing to a coat hemline will find that there are several versions of the "A" silhouette as well as revivals of the reefer model to consider. Regardless of the hemline, an important point to note is the shape of the shoulders. The shoulder line, more than any other part of the garment, stamps it as of late 1955 design. Practically all of the coats have the sloping shoulders. This tends to "slim down" the entire effect. Padding is eliminated entirely or is handled with deftness to make

It conform to the natural slope. Armholes of many of the coats are deep, and there is a tendency to cut the fabric so that the seaming at the shoulders is minimized. Contrary to this trend is the more closely fitted reefer style with its regulation set-in sleeves and its moderately fitted waistline. Reefers include both the double-breasted and single-breasted styles. Some of these reefers have fur collars to show an Edwardian influence. Gray opopssum, for example, is used for the shawl collar of one of the overcoats that is semitrimmed with the familiar reefer closing.

Coats that have the fitted silhouette do not always observe the normal waistline. The vogue of low-placed waistlines is noted in this style of coat as well as those that are partly belted. Pocket flaps placed lower than formerly, intricate seaming above the hipline, and the addition of fabric trimming contribute to the long-torso effect that continues to be popular in feminine fashions. Straightline coats have little martingales across the back or straps of fabric at either side to mark the lower waistline.

Fabric texture and design have much fashion importance. Tweeds with the appearance of being knitted rather than woven are noteworthy. Black and white and brown and white color combinations are seen most in this type of material although the use of royal blue with black is effective. Plaid designs are numerous. The popularity of the black watch plaid, for example, is so great that it looks now as if every woman will have something plaid in her wardrobe. Other tartans as well as some unusual jacquard and brocaded themes contribute to the luxurious impression.

For those who want a smooth-finished coat that has a certain dressy quality, duvety and broadcloth are being revived. Rich shades of dark red and the deep shades of green are handsome choices for these coats. The sleeky finished hair cloth also is being used for coats while cashmere continues to be liked by those who want a lightweight, elegant wrap. New this season are blends of cashmere with Vicuna. The Vicuna also is blended with mink for some unusual coats that not only look but are expensive.

Featured among the fabrics that look like fur are the striking dynel and orlon blends which give evidence of starting an entirely new fashion in winter coats. Treated so that the surface does not mat when wet and produced in shades of real fur, the material has been made into several different styles of coats by numerous manufacturers. Blond and platinum shades follow closely those featured in sheared beaver. There also is a rich brown tone as well as charcoal gray. Styles include the full length enveloping coat with deep armholes, such as the model shown, the typical overcoat style which has a belt across the back, and several hip-length models. The shorter coats are jaunty and casual, intended primarily for the campus use, or shaped in the barrel silhouette for wear over suits or slim dresses.

Newest length in coats is the seven-eighths although it is expected that the full length will continue to be preferred by the majority. Many of the seven-eighths coats have matching skirts so that a complete costume is provided. Both the semi-fitted and the column straight silhouettes are available.

Uncomfortable Role For Lloyd Nolan

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27 (UP)—LOYD NOLAN returned to movieland after 18 months on the stage only to be saddled with what he considers the most uncomfortable role in the history of motion pictures. To play the role of a drunken frontiersman, the actor had to wear a peg leg, long-john underwear and a beard. His unhappiness with the trappings was evident when he sild self-consciously into the M-G-M commissary and sat down, rubbing his chin. "It's driving me crazy," Nolan complained, scratching his scraggly gray whiskers. "I've been wearing this beard since last May and it's never stopped itching around."

Lloyd co-stars with Robert Taylor and Stewart Granger in "The Last Hunt" for Metro, but the handsome leading men grab top billing while the unkempt Nolan takes his jumps. "Not only do I have to put up with this beaver," he said miserably, "the red woollies scratch like sandpaper. And the peg leg cramps my own leg so badly I can hardly hobble around."

"This role has made an old man out of me," he sighed. "The next guy who says we actors lead an easy life is going to have to answer to me."

In "War and Peace," now being shot in Italy, Miss Dahl, who had been cast in the role of Helene in the Tol-stoj classic, is in St. John's hospital, Santa Monica, suffering from anemia.

Lou Costello's Horse Keeps Him In Good Health

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27. (AP). LOU COSTELLO, who has had more than his share of illness, now has a horse for a doctor and never felt better in his life.

The world knows Lou as one half of the famed comedy team of Abbott and Costello. Another world—the turf world—now refers to Lou as the owner and breeder of Bold Bazooka, one of the fastest 2-year-old colts running today.

A longtime associate of the team reveals the radical change that takes place once Lou leaves the theatrical world for Del Mar, where he is vacationing.

"I even heard some people at the $2 window nudge their companions and say, 'There goes the breeder of Bold Bazooka.' Even Abbott was impressed," the associate says.

Lou's greatest colt tied the world's record for five and one-half furlongs when he won his first race last month. The time was 1:03 1-5.

"I wish I could tell the people just how much this horse has done for me physically and mentally. I feel 15 years younger and my health is so good that I don't think I'll ever need to take another pill," Lou says.

Thin Coat Of Wax for Hard Floors

By Dorothy Brainerd

HERE'S trouble afoot (or underfoot) down Poplar Bluff way, according to Mrs. D. W. who writes:

"We put hardwood floors in our home recently and they are causing trouble. No matter how easy you sit down in a chair or on the divan it slides against a wall. My neighbors, I find, are having the same trouble. Is there a solution?"

Yes indeed, and we hope it isn't too late to prevent any broken bones. I think it is quite likely that you may be using too much wax on those floors. This often is the case on wood floors where the polishing type of wax is used since many home makers mistakenly think that the heavier the coat of wax, the more protection. Actually, the thinner the film of polishing wax the better job it will do. Well-polished wax is hard and dry, and not slippery. It is the hardness of the wax rather than the thickness of it that does the protecting.

It also may be that the design of the chair legs or the material of which they are made makes them especially susceptible to slipping. You must consider the use of rubber tips, but don't use the black ones as they may leave black marks. For round-legged chairs you can use the same type of white rubber tip that is used on bathroom stools. Color the sides with crayon to match the chair. For square legs there are light brown rubber tips easily available. Neither of these types will mark the floor and all styles are carried in most dime or variety stores.

One more point—are you sure you are using a really high-quality wax? Cheap waxes may be made of raw ingredients that result in a soft, smeary finish that it is almost impossible to polish to a hard, dry, non-slip finish.

"CAN YOU TELL ME how to freeze cantaloupe?" asks Mrs. C. H. "I would like to put some in our food freezer while they are so plentiful."

Be sure to use well-colored ripe melons. Mrs. H., then cut into strips, cubes or melon balls, pack the fruit into containers and cover with cold 30 per cent syrup (two cups sugar to four cups water). Leave about one-half inch head space, seal and freeze.

To make the syrup, dissolve sugar in cold or hot water; if hot water is used be sure to cool the syrup before using.

"A GRATEFUL READER" writes: "I have a cabinet that has two drawers and a compartment for pots and pans under the drawers. I find that from opening these drawers so many times a day to get out knives and forks there is always a collection of fine shavings in my pots and pans, and am wondering how to avoid this."

"Also, can you tell me where to write for a Government pamphlet on freezing fruits and vegetables, and how much it costs?"

It is difficult to answer your first question without knowing a little more about the problem. If this is an antique cabinet it is possible that the bottom of the drawer may be powdery from age, in which case it might be necessary to put a metal strip on the bottom and the edges of the drawers.

If it is utilitarian rather than a fine piece of furniture, try rubbing the bottom of the drawers with soap. This may stop the annoyance unless the drawer fits so tightly that it rubs, in which case it should be sanded.

An excellent booklet entitled "Home Freezing of Fruits and Vegetables, Home and Garden Bulletin No. 10, United States Department of Agriculture" is available without charge upon request to the Food Marketing Program, Merchants Exchange Building, 315 Chestnut street, St. Louis.

READERS HAVE SENT IN a number of suggestions for Mrs. F.H., who wanted to know how to make contour sheets from some old ones of the conventional type.

We are told that patterns are available—one which must be ordered by mail from California; one which is offered by a large dress pattern company and is available in local stores.

Mrs. J.H. of Mountain Home, Ark. sent in specific directions. She tells us that she got started on this "for getting the wonderful convenience of contour sheets for baby-bed mattresses at very low cost, especially for the non-standard sizes."

Mrs. J.D. writes: "I made contour sheets for my baby's crib out of darling nursery prints simply by using one regular 'store-bought' sheet as a pattern. I carefully ripped out the corner seams, used the sheet as a pattern right over my material, and sewed it up again. From the pattern I could tell exactly what size to cut from each corner and follow the seams. By the way," she adds, "this is quite an economy measure to use old sheets for children's beds."

Any homemaking problems bothering you? If so, write to Dorothy Brainerd in care of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. She will answer your questions or publish them and see if other readers have the answers for you.

New Leading Man For Joan Crawford

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 27 (INS)

Joan Crawford, who has sparked the careers of more leading men than any other actress in Hollywood, has added another ember to the fire.

He is 29-year-old, blue-eyed, curly-haired Cliff Robertson—an ex-private detective, bus boy, radio announcer and longshoreman.

Cliff still is thunderstruck at his good luck in landing the romantic lead opposite Joan in her new film, "The Way We Are." "I can't believe it's happened to me," he grinned, "I don't really know much about movie-making, but Joan has been so wonderful to me that I guess I'll pick up some of the angles sooner or later."

Spareribs, Sauce for Barbecue

By Edith M. Barber

IT IS only recently that the barbecue has graduated. If that is the proper word, from the outdoor pit used originally in pioneer days when ovens and broilers were luxuries. It skipped the dining room but came into its own on the porch or in the garden.

Instead of a whole, or practically whole, dressed pig, lamb or even a beef, we, of course, use steaks, chops and chicken, and occasionally short ribs of beef or pork spareribs. All of these take short cooking, and we make them qualify as a barbecue by basting them with a hot, spicy sauce.

FOR PORCH SERVICE we often put the oven in the kitchen and the grill outside both to use. Sometimes we serve our meals on trays and sometimes from a tea cart. If we do not have room or do not wish to set a table. Barbecue experts are fussy about the type of sauce used for basting. You have probably noticed that there are likely to be arguments, especially among the men, as to what constitutes the "right" sauce. Some of these pet recipes demand an hour or more of slow cooking. For this reason it is a good idea to make them in large quantities. What is not used one day will come in handy another time.

Then, if the sauce has been prepared according to the specific directions of the man of the house, there can be no criticism.

DEVILED SPARERIBS: 6 pounds spareribs, 2 tablespoons salad oil, 2 tablespoons tarragon vinegar, 1/2 cup fine enriched bread crumbs.

Cut the spareribs into serving size pieces. Brush with salad oil combined with vinegar. Dip in fine bread crumbs. Grill or broil slowly turning the meat frequently until brown and crisp on both sides. The meat should be cooked thoroughly. Serve with devil sauce. Yield: six servings.

DEVIL SAUCE: 3 tablespoons minced green onions, 3 tablespoons margarine or butter, 1/4 cup lemon juice, 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, 2 teaspoons prepared mustard, dash of tabasco, one 104-ounce can beef gravy.

Saute green onions in margarine or butter until soft. Blend in lemon juice, Worcestershire, mustard, Tabasco and beef gravy. Heat through. Serve hot with spareribs. Yield: six to 10 servings.

Jacket Ensemble
A jacket ensemble with the contrasting bolero in a bubbly tweed pattern is among the fall styles in junior sizes. Dress is of dark gray flannel and has shirtwaist details with its front closing and big patch pockets. The fitted waist length jacket combines two shades of gray with royal blue.

Average Englishman Has Revised His View of the Typical American

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio Copyright, 1955.
LONDON, Aug. 27—The typical American, as visualized by the average Englishman, is a different sort of character now from what he was 30 years ago. A group of English gathered together the other night to describe the average Englishman's idea of the typical American of the middle 1950s. In the roaring '20s, the English pictured the typical American thus: He wore a big hat, smoked a big cigar, wore a diamond the size of an egg and bragged about how everything in the United States was bigger and better than any place else in the world. He was semi-literate. He had an earthy sense of humor. He had a heart of gold and an unlimited bank roll. Today, in English consensus, the average American wears a snap-brimmed hat and rimless glasses, nylon shirts and light-colored sports suits. He talks business almost constantly, using such phrases as productivity, automation, Dow Jones averages, industrial dispersal and industrial relations—none of which the Englishman understands. His daughter is a sociology graduate taking notes on the social problems of Europe. She wears horn-rimmed glasses and speaks in a jargon of sociologist phrases. His wife has a psychiatrist who has advised her to get her husband away from his factory to try and win back his affection which he has transferred to his machines. She is shocked by her daughter's frank discussion of sex and science. She is a bit bewildered, but not backward. The average American, it is believed, does not brag so much as he used to. He takes pills for indigestion. He has lost most of his sense of humor. He is pretty heavy-going when he gets started on business matters. The whole American family has been warned against over-tipping, so usually under-tips, to the sorrow of hotel employees. Pencil Collector. LA JUNTA, Colo.—(INS)—A retired Methodist minister living in La Junta, Colo., will never be without something to write with. Chaplain John R. Edwards has been collecting advertising pencils for 25 years and now has a stock of more than 3000 different pencils of which a fifth are mechanical items.

SLIGHTLY OFF HIS COURSE WEAVERS' GUILD EXHIBITION RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Col. Lester H. Kyle, retired, thinks this city is the Main Richmond on the map, but he knows there also is a Maine Richmond—in fact 17 states have Richmonds. A motorist asked him how to find the address shown on an envelope. The colonel explained that it was Richmond, Me. The stunned visitor turned around and headed north.

An exhibition of hand-woven work by members of the Weavers' Guild of St. Louis will open Friday at City Art Museum. It was announced yesterday. For the duration of the show, which will run through Sept. 26, Weavers' Guild members will present free public demonstrations of weaving on looms each Saturday from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

KANSAS IS FREE OF DEBT FOR BONUS TO VETERANS

TOPEKA, Kan. (UP)—For the first time in 32 years, the state of Kansas became debt-free on July 1.

On that date, the state finished paying off the last of its World War I veterans' bonus bonds. Final payment was $259,375, the last quarter-million bond retirement plus interest.

In all, the $31,650,000 in bonds cost the people of the Sunflower State $21,839,813 in interest, because the bonds were issued under a statutory provision that only one million of them could be retired annually.

Kansas legislatures in the last few years have defeated all attempts to provide bonuses for Kansas in military service during World War II and the Korean conflict.

Two Post-Dispatch employees, Philip Bieber, an assistant foreman in the press room, and Edward C. Raitel, a downtown supervisor in the circulation department, will retire Thursday.

PLANE SNAPS WIRE; 300 FEET OF IT WRAPS AROUND AUTO

DIAGONAL, Ia. (AP)—Ronald Beemer stepped out of his car to watch a small plane spraying crops. The plane's landing gear caught and broke a wire. About 300 feet of the wire whipped around and around Beemer and his car.

He had numerous deep cuts and welts and he estimated damage to his car at $200 to $300. The airplane apparently was not damaged. It kept on going.

SCOUT MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN TO OPEN

1955 Drive for 4500 Boys Begins Thursday and Continues Through Dec. 15.

The 1955 membership drive of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council is scheduled to begin next Thursday and continue through Dec. 15, it was announced yesterday.

A total of 4500 boys will be sought for membership in Scout units. Present membership is 33,141, including Cubs, Scouts and Explorers.

Membership is expected to total approximately 36,000 boys at the conclusion of the drive, a Scout official said. It was estimated about 1600 boys will leave the Scouts by the end of the year.

Members of the council will attend the tenth National Training Conference for professional leaders for one week beginning next Friday at the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

Approximately 2700 Scout executives from this country and its possessions are expected to attend the conference, which will include an advanced program of training in council administration, financial support, membership and planning.

Boy Scout Troop 480, sponsored by the Banner (Mo.) School, and Explorer Post 404, sponsored by the Knights of Columbus Council, Ste. Genevieve, joined the council last week.

The "Bald Eagles" of the council's Eagle Scout Association, will hold their annual family Labor day encampment at Irondale Scout Reservation beginning next Saturday and continuing through Monday. Approximately 200 persons are expected to attend. Reservations should be mailed to D.W. Adams, Route 6, Box 2498U, Sappington 23, Mo.

Eagle rank, Scouting's highest advancement honor, will be awarded to Explorer Scout Roy Kelsey in a ceremony at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Jefferson Barracks Community Center. The ceremony will be conducted by Troop 552.

Eagle badges were presented to Scouts Edward Murphy, Donald J. Huber and Bob Echele in ceremonies held last week.

Girl Scout News

Directors of the St. Louis Girl Scout Council will hold their first fall season meeting at 10 a.m. next Thursday in the ninth floor auditorium at Stix, Baer & Fuller downtown department store, it was announced yesterday.

Opportunities for families of any registered Girl Scout to camp as a unit will be available Labor day weekend beginning next Saturday at Camp Cedarledge, near Pevely, Mo.

Campfires, dancing, games and sports, including swimming, will be available for recreation at the camp.

A fee of $4 for adults and $2.50 for children under 12 years old will be charged. The fee will include three meals which are to be served in the camp dining hall.

Volunteers to prepare food and perform other essential tasks during the three-day outing are needed, a spokesman for the council said. Persons interested were asked to call the camp department, CE 1-9320.

Four original poems or essays on "What America Means to Me" will be selected by judges here and forwarded to Girl Scout national headquarters, where the best entries will be chosen for reading at the July 4 celebration next year at the Senior Roundup at the Highland State Recreation area in Michigan, it was announced yesterday.

Intermediate and Senior Girl Scouts are eligible to submit poems to the Senior Council here in care of the program department, 505 North Seventh street.

Deadline for submitting entries is Oct. 1. Compositions, in verse or prose, should be 150 to 1000 words in length, a council spokesman said.

Seven Girl Scout troops were camping this weekend at Camp Cedarledge. They were Troops 194, 331, 656, 1036, 1145, 1268 and 1275.

Little-Known Senate Prober Gets Headlines, But for Others

Carmine Salvatore Bellino Moving Force in Cases of Talbott, Vaughan, Others.

By MILT FREUDENHEIM
The Chicago Daily News Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch Copyright 1955
WASHINGTON, Aug. 27—Carmine Salvatore Bellino, little-known ace investigator for Senate committees, specializes in making headline news—for others.
President Eisenhower's former Air Force secretary, Harold Talbott, and ex-President Truman's aide, Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, are two of a long list of embarrassed headlines Bellino helped nudge onto center stage.
Some Bellino research subjects wound up behind barred windows after dodging Senatorial queries dreamed up by the soft-spoken, balding former FBI accountant.
Examples: Five per center John Maragon; Brig. Gen. Bennett Meyers, who was handing $1,000,000 in defense subcontracting on the side; agriculture department official Jack Cowart, who had warehouse interests.
Other Assignments.
Other Bellino assignments have included forerunner in the Reconstruction Finance Corp. government tin mines in Alaska, United States-subsidized aluminum in Greece.
The politics of his targets is a matter of indifference to Bellino, who learned bipartisanship while auditing the Democratic city hall and Republican (Union) county courthouse at Elizabeth, N. J., 25 years ago.
"I got so I didn't vote in the primaries at all in those days," he says.
Recently Bellino investigated Allen Whitfield, Iowa Republican chieftain nominated by President Eisenhower to be an Atomic Energy Commissioner.
Soon after, Whitfield informed the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee its questions were invading the confidential relationships of a lawyer and his clients. Not long after, the President withdrew the nomination at Whitfield's request.
In the Talbott case, Bellino and Robert Kennedy, chief counsel for the Senate Investigations Committee, looked into the files of Paul B. Mulligan, Talbott's partner in a management consultant business.
Their findings so embarrassed the Air Secretary that he resigned.
Perhaps even more celebrated were the activities of Vaughan, who was retained by Truman even after home freezers became a political byword. Bellino did the behind-scenes digging in that one, also.
Yet Bellino is so unassuming that he is usually unknown to half the Senators, Capitol Hill associates say.
"Carmine is the best investigative accountant there ever was," says Francis D. Flanagan, former chief counsel with the Senate Investigations Subcommittee.
Bellino was administrative assistant for accounting review to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover for six of his 11 years in the FBI.
Independent Accountant.
Today he operates as an independent accountant, contracting with Senate and House committees and Federal agencies for investigative work. A network of former FBI accountants helps him find the skeletons.
Born 50 years ago in New Jersey, Bellino learned to work at 6, pushing lawnmowers for his father, an Italian-born caretaker on large estates. He worked his way through high school, New York University night school and eventually to certification as a public accountant.
He gives his recipe for discovering corruption: "Digging and digging and digging."
As Bellino's wife and seven children well know, he doesn't agree with "the people who want to go home at 5:30 p.m. When you get an assignment, you've got to stick right with it."

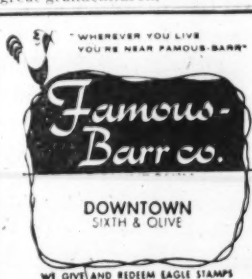

50TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY
Mr. and Mrs. Abe Glazer, 5915 Highland avenue, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary at a party given by their children at the home of a daughter, Mrs. David Framer, 1219 Meyer avenue, University City.
Glazer, 80 years old, operated a scrap metal company before retiring about five years ago. His wife is 68. They have two sons, Louis and Elmer Glazer; two other daughters, Mrs. Ben Weiss and Mrs. Ernest Eckstein; nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

22 KILLED BY TRIBESMEN IN ASSAM, NEHRU ASSERTS
NEW DELHI, Aug. 27 (AP)—Prime Minister Nehru has informed parliament that 22 Indians perished and 10 were wounded in clashes with head-hunting Naga tribesmen in Assam this month. Fourteen Nagas were killed and 10 wounded. He said he thought the "most effective way" of dealing with the Nagas was through community development projects to divert "the minds of these people to constructive and beneficial projects." Nevertheless, Nehru added, an Indian army battalion was being sent to the troubled area.

Recovery, Inc. Center to Mark Anniversary
The St. Louis training center for Recovery, Inc., a mental health organization, will celebrate its second anniversary tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. at its regular meeting place, the St. Louis County Library, 6814 Natural Bridge road, Pine Lawn.
The group meets weekly, training leaders who conduct local meetings to aid nervous persons in controlling symptoms, fears and temperamental reactions. Nine of these self-help, group therapy units are now meeting in the St. Louis area.
The purpose of Recovery, Inc., a national organization founded in 1937, is to help prevent persons susceptible to nervous disorders from having severe breakdowns.

MOBILE X-RAY UNIT TO VISIT CHAMP-ITEMS CO. PLANT
The mobile X-ray unit of the Tuberculosis and Health Society will visit the plant of Champ-Items Co., 6191 Maple avenue, Wednesday morning, to give chest X-rays to employees of four firms in the area, it was announced yesterday.
A total of 933 persons have been X-rayed in the past week with the mobile unit.
A spokesman of the society said a survey of 16 large cities in the United States showed St. Louis second in the number of tuberculosis deaths per 100,000 population.
Malaya State Nearly Red-Free.
BENTONG, Malaya, Aug. 27 (AP)—The State of Pahang, once the "reddest" in Malaya, now has only 275 Communist guerrillas operating, the Government announced today. It said British troops and security forces had "eliminated" 2120 terrorists in Pahang since the start of the Communist emergency in June 1948.

The former Miss Montgomery, a graduate of Buffalo Seminary, attended Bennett for one year. Last September she was presented to society at a dance at the Saturn Club. The bridegroom, an alumnus of John Burroughs School, was a member of last June's graduating class at Yale University. His fraternity is Beta Theta Pi.

VITAMINS

YOU SEND NO MONEY—NOW—OR EVER!

TRY THEM—BUT PAY NOTHING!

MINERALS, PROTEINS, AMINO ACIDS

We want to prove to you what over 250,000 Custom Plan customers already know! That is why we ask you to ACCEPT ABSOLUTELY FREE a FULL 45-DAY SUPPLY of the famous Custom Formula of Vitamins, Minerals, and Proteins—without any obligation—no strings, no "buts", no "maybes"!

Why do we make this amazing FREE offer? Because we want you to find out for yourself what a DIFFERENCE Custom Formula can make in YOUR health and happiness—what it can mean to you in new vigor, new vitality! Over 250,000 families have ALREADY PROVED what an important part our scientifically formulated Custom Formula can play in offsetting that tired, listless feeling—in making life worth living again.

Good reason, too, why Custom Formula has been able to do so much—for SO MANY! Here is no mere "minimum daily requirement" formula, but FIVE TIMES the required potency of Vitamin B-1—more than TWICE the minimum on Vitamins A, C, and D! Included, too, is a full mcg of the amazing B-12—that, according to scientific studies, actually activates bone marrow so that it produces life-giving red corpuscles that strengthen blood and nourish glands and vital organs. The entire medical profession accepts the findings of the National Research Council. In formulating Custom Formula, we matched and EXCEEDED their minimum daily requirements vitamin by vitamin. Then we ADDED vital minerals, proteins, and other important health supplements.

If you were to buy this High Potency Formula in a store, it would cost from $5.75 to $7.64—sometimes MORE! But NOW it is YOURS—ALL YOURS—ABSOLUTELY FREE!

THE CUSTOM FORMULA
27 VITAMINS, MINERALS, PROTEINS, AMINO ACIDS including the new wonder-working B-12, actually strengthens your blood and nourishes the organs of your body.

COMPARE! This is, to our knowledge, the finest high potency health supplement formula of its kind to be had, anywhere! Custom Formula has been developed to supply in proper balance the very vitamins, minerals, and proteins the body needs to help rebuild worn-out body cells and tissues and the energy the body needs to offset that "tired feeling." Just this one preparation taken daily gives you the 27 vitamins and minerals you need for buoyant good health! And you get not 10 days, not 30 days, but... a full 45-day supply—YOURS FREE!

CAN YOU GET THE VITAMINS, MINERALS, AND PROTEINS YOU NEED FOR VIGOROUS GOOD HEALTH IN THE FOODS YOU EAT?
"I don't need to take vitamins—I eat good meals!" Unfortunately, modern cooking, tasty as it is, refines so much of the necessary vitamins and minerals right out of the foods you eat—it isn't wise, it isn't even safe to rely on foods alone to supply them. Custom Formula is a food supplement. But more than that—it is a specially balanced supplement. In itself, taken daily, it supplies all the 27 vitamins and minerals needed for normal growth and development.

THE U. S. GOVERNMENT GUARANTEES PURITY AND POTENCY Vitamins are vitamins—by strict government law. For example, if we say each daily dose of Custom Formula tablets supplies 12,500 units of Vitamin A to help build body resistance, it's the same Vitamin A you get in any brand, regardless of maker's name. If we say one daily dose supplies 1000 units of Vitamin D to help you use the phosphorus and calcium in your blood stream or Vitamins B-1, B-2, and B-12, the great new blood strengthener, these are the same identical vitamins other brands must contain. If we say our brand also has Vitamin C, niacin, Vitamin E, iron, and many other vitamin and mineral factors, they are exactly the same as any other maker has to use. The government guarantees the purity. The label tells you the potency (read it!) THE BIG DIFFERENCE IS IN THE PRICE!

AIRCRAFTS SHOW AT PHILADELPHIA SEPT. 3, 4 AND 5

Tourists and visitors from all over the country will be among the 300,000 spectators who are expected to witness the annual National Aircraft Show at Philadelphia's mammoth International Airport over Labor day weekend, Sept. 3, 4, and 5.

The air show will be a vivid, visual report to the nation by the United States Department of Defense and the American Aviation Industry on our airpower.

Spectators will see the glittering array of jet fighters, interceptors, bombers and transports of all military services. All segments of United States aircraft industry will show contributions to American air supremacy in displays in five hangars and on the field.

Gates will open at 8:00 a.m. for the shows, which have activity continuously from 10:00 a.m. to 5 p.m. More than a mile and a quarter of planes will be lined up to see, feel and walk through.

The 1955 Aircraft Show is said to be the only event to have full co-operation of the Department of Defense and on each of the three days the military services will demonstrate their prowess in a three-hour show of precision flying.

The City of Philadelphia and the Chamber of Commerce of Greater Philadelphia are cooperating with the Air Foundation in staging the event, held in the East for the first time. The show is held for the benefit of charities affiliated with the Armed Services.

TRAVEL IN SPAIN

In recent years, travel within Spain has been greatly improved.

Railroads have been modernized, particularly on those lines that use the "Talgo," a low-slung, light-weight train now being considered by American railroads.

LARGEST TREE

If you want to see and photograph the largest tree in the world, head for Karasaki, Japan. The pine tree is now dead but is preserved as though it were living.

The spread of its branches is 160 feet from east to west, and 150 feet from north to south.

Seaside Sight

Sea turtles choose summer evenings to lay their eggs on Miami Beach sands. Visitors are sometimes able to watch the turtle make the long (for her) trek up the beach, deposit and bury her eggs where the sun will keep them warm, and return to the ocean depths.

Bull Market Nearly 2 Years Old

Showing Signs of Leveling Off

Government Applying Brakes by Tightening Credit—AP Average of 60 Stocks Up 77 Pct. Since Sept. 15, 1953.

By RADER WINGET

NEW YORK, Aug. 27 (AP)—The greatest bull market in history is getting ready to celebrate its second birthday. Billions of dollars have been added to the price of securities.

Is this thing extending itself into an era of perpetual boom or is it going to end up in another bust? Probably neither. There are signs that the boom is rubbing off the boom. The Government is applying the brakes to inflation by tightening credit. While that doesn't mean the bottom is going to drop out of the stock market, it may mean that the boom will level off.

Wide swings in the stock market do occur, and people lose money as well as make it, but these swings don't spell crisis. Nearly three years ago, the stock market rallied when President Eisenhower was elected. That was nipped early in 1953 when the Federal Reserve tightened up on credit. The decline that started then was hurried along by the end of the Korean war.

Start of the Big Rise.
Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve liberalized its tighter credit policies, dividends expanded, profits mounted, and suddenly on Sept. 15, 1953, the stock market erupted in a rise that for strength and duration has never been matched.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks on that date two years ago stood at $99.50. It recently hit a historic peak of $177, a net gain of 77 per cent. In the same period, the total value of all securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange has gone up from around 115 billion dollars to more than 198 billion dollars.

Added to this capital gain were dividend payments which in the past two and one-half years have amounted to more than 16 billion dollars. Dividend payments in the first six months of this year were the highest ever recorded for a first half—$3,278,851,290. That amount was paid in cash. In addition, stockholders were given dividends payable in additional stock or in valuable rights to buy additional stock at reduced prices.

The price of a particular stock is linked directly to the amount of dividend it is paying or might pay in the future as a result of higher earnings. Profits currently are at an annual rate that may make 1955 a record breaker.

The boom in the stock market when measured against those figures seems normal.

Not All Together.
All stocks don't go up and down together. They go their separate ways, depending on whether the company represented is making money or is likely to make money. Groups often move together as industry-wide developments occur in the railroad business, aircraft, atomic energy, mining or other segments of the economy.

Some place along the line there has to be a yardstick to measure the major flow of stock prices. That is where the stock market average comes in. There are many averages, each designed for a specific purpose. Some have a single mission, such as measuring the trend of merchandising stocks. Others measure the general trend of the market as a whole and these have become exceedingly popular with traders and investors. Such averages are used as a tool and a guide.

Sometimes these averages don't reflect a true picture of the stock market. The wise trader doesn't rely on a single guide to market movements. Ralph A. Rotnem of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Harris, Upham & Co. said that in a study of 500 leading issues his company found that 32 per cent were still selling under their highs of 1946. General Market Average (Dow-Jones) had risen more than 100 per cent since that time. Since 1946, 68 per cent of these 500 issues have not kept pace with the general market average.

Another study by Harold Clayton of the New York Stock Exchange firm of Hemphill, Noyes & Co. found that since 1946, only 24½ per cent of 801 stocks studied did as well or better than the Dow-Jones average, which is compiled by the Wall Street Journal.

Based on Blue Chips.
One reason for this is that some of the most widely used averages are based on the shares of the well established big-name companies—the so-called blue chip stocks. Those companies have been the ones making record high amounts of money and paying greater dividends than ever before.

People and institutions have naturally been drawn to these stocks, and the demand has pushed the price still higher. Many of these companies have split their shares two-for-one and three-for-one in an effort to bring the price down to the popular levels. The result has been more buying and continually higher prices.

In the great eras of business expansion, it is usually the well established and well managed company that makes the most money and makes it first. As the boom spreads, the secondary companies begin to share in the prosperity, and finally the marginal operators make profits.

In the stock market, the pattern so many times is a boom in the blue chips followed by the pale blue chips and joined later by the others. At the tail end of the rise, the marginal and rank speculative stocks have their fling, and then the whole boom is over for a time. These latter stocks in Wall Street are called "dogs," and the professional traders start to move out when the "dogs begin to bark."

This cycle is accompanied by mounting public speculation and gambling for quick capital gains. Tipsters have a field day. When the break comes, many of these little people are burned. There is talk of a "crash" and a "depression."

Four Reactions This Year.
So far this year the stock market has gone through four reactions. In each case it renewed its advance to new highs. All of this has been done without developing speculative excesses and without the type of climactic selling associated with a major market break.

Any one of those reactions by going down a greater than normal distance at high speed could ring the alarm for the end of the present market boom.

No stock market boom goes on forever, and brokers and others are increasing their vigilance in searching for signs that will indicate when this one will end.

They are checking off several items. The Government and banks are tightening credit, making money more expensive and hard to get. This applies to consumer credit, which is the highest in history, to ordinary business loans, to home mortgages, and to loans on securities.

Brokers recall that similar credit tightening moves were made by the Federal Reserve early in 1953, and a fall in the stock market followed.

Higher interest rates are deflationary in that they tend to discourage borrowing. Speculators are quick to take a flier on cheap money. They are deterred when money gets expensive.

Big A.T.&T. Expansion.
More solid projects aren't so easily discouraged. For example the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. this month went into the market to borrow $635,000,000 for expansion. It was the largest single piece of private financing in the nation's history. But the company had to offer to pay interest of 3½ per cent on 12-year convertible debentures (a form of bond), the highest rate for that kind of borrowing since 1929.

There is concern in Wall Street over the fact that the yield on bonds is rising while the yield on stocks is falling. Back in 1929, bonds actually paid more than stocks. When bonds become more attractive as investments, there is a tendency to sell stocks and buy bonds. Such selling of stocks depresses their price.

Actually, the stock market is a barometer of the economic weather in the nation. It always is in a ferment with the daily prices of the 1526 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange, and the hundreds of others on the lesser exchanges, reflecting not alone the profit and loss position of individual companies but also the level of business in the community, the political fortunes of the moment in any given area of the world, and the weight of opinion of the millions of investors throughout the country.

Supreme Court Action Makes Old Negro Think of Moses

Segregation Ruling Speeding Colored Toward Equality With Whites Faster Than Many Thought Possible.

By BEN PRICE.

ATLANTA, Aug. 27 (AP)—The Negro doctor leaned against an automobile outside a church in Norfolk, Va., and mused, "You know, when I think of what the Supreme Court does I think of Moses."

How's that?

"Well," said Dr. S. F. Coppage, "the Lord told Moses to go down in Egypt and tell the Pharaoh, 'Let my people go.' I feel that is what the Supreme Court has said."

Coppage was referring to the ruling last year that segregation in public schools is unconstitutional.

The decision has stirred strong opposition in a number of states. In other states it has met with varying degrees of acceptance, and the over-all effect has been for the Negro to move more rapidly than many thought possible toward an equal footing with whites.

Since the decision was announced, communities in 10 Southern or border states have announced plans to desegregate their schools in some measure by 1956.

The Southern Education Reporting Service, an organization set up by the Ford Foundation to keep the region abreast of such developments, said after a pre-school survey that:

Twelve communities in Texas plan to integrate this fall, including San Antonio, El Paso and San Angelo. Houston, Austin and Dallas are studying the school problem in expectation of action in 1956.

(After this survey was made, a Texas Citizens Council filed suit seeking to shut off state funds to any integrated school. The suit cited state laws requiring separate institutions. Pending a decision in the courts, Comptroller Robert S. Calvert said he probably would go ahead and issue funds to the schools unless directed not to do so.)

A third of Oklahoma's counties plan to integrate this fall. Tulsa, Okla., population 106,000, opened its school July 11 to six Negroes and thus became the first town in the state's history to hold mixed classes in public schools. The school later closed for a period during cotton-picking, as in its custom. Chattanooga became the first city in Tennessee to announce it intended to comply with the high court's order last May which directed school systems to proceed with "deliberate speed" toward integration. In addition, Tennessee's state school board has approved a plan gradually to desegregate the state's six tax-supported colleges, beginning in September.

Assistant Attorney General W. Owen Keller of Kentucky ruled that the state's school segregation law was no longer valid and thus permitted Wayne county to open its schools to six Negro students immediately. Louisville will disclose its plans for desegregation in November. Daviess county said it intended to integrate in 1956. Wake County, N.C., which embraces the state capital at Raleigh, announced that in 1956 pupil assignments would be placed on a basis other than race or color. Though Raleigh itself said it would make no plans until advisory recommendations are made by the state.

In Charlotte, Asheville, Winston-Salem, Burlington and Greensboro study councils have been established to consider the school segregation problem. Similar action has been taken in Bertie county, which is 60 per cent Negro.

The Baltimore school system already is integrated, as is that of Washington, D.C. Three Maryland counties have announced intentions to desegregate in whole or in part by 1956.

Delaware's counties submitted plans for desegregation to the state school board this month.

Four school districts in Arkansas have already integrated or announced plans to do so. Little Rock will inaugurate an integrated system in 1957.

Four counties in West Virginia are opening schools to white and Negro students alike this fall.

While some Southern communities are acting, most are doing nothing or have taken firm stands against integration.

As a result, integration petitions have been filed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in school districts in nine Southern states, including Georgia and Mississippi.

There is extreme opposition to any shift in the pattern of racial separation, backed by state governments, in Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and South Carolina.

Too, there is every indication that Virginia intends to maintain segregation as long as possible even though Norfolk and Williamsburg have said they would make honest efforts to comply with the high court order when permitted to do so by the state.

Many Southerners fear that integration will mean the end of 300 years of white supremacy and that eventually in some rural areas the white man will become the political as well as numerical minority. Negroes outnumber whites in some areas as much as 3 to 1 and occasionally as much as 4 to 1.

These fears have given rise to 13 more or less active organizations in nine states whose principal aim is the "preservation of the Southern way of life."

The most powerful of these groups is the Association of Mississippi Citizens Councils, which now claims 60,000 members. The announced objectives of the councils, which have spread into Arkansas, Alabama and Texas, are to maintain segregation through legal action and exertion of economic pressure on "troublemakers."

Outside of the private organizations, the state machinery in Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana and South Carolina is geared to the continuation of racial separation.

These states all have laws permitting the abolition of public schools and the operation of "private" schools rather than to permit integrated schools.

Georgia has made it a felony for any school official to spend state funds on integrated schools, even if ordered by a federal court to admit Negroes.

The Georgia state board of education adopted resolutions calling for the withdrawal of license from any teacher who teaches integrated classes, supports integration or belongs to the N.A.A.C.P.

These resolutions were rescinded, however, after the state attorney general told the board that state laws "go much further in accomplishing this purpose than any resolution that you now have before you."

In an interview, Georgia Attorney General Eugene Cook was asked if state actions prevented a community from integrating even if it so desired. He said, "Yes."

Cook was then asked, "Has there been any protest from any community that these actions are undue interference in local affairs?"

"No," said Cook, "they could hardly do that with the state contributing 85 per cent of their school funds."

Cook conceded there are some Georgians who believe integration is inevitable but declared "in most counties there will be no effort toward integration in the foreseeable future."

While many other Southerners are standing adamantly against any change in the racial picture, the region contains a considerable number of people who believe the transition is inevitable.

Dr. George Mitchell of Atlanta, executive director of the Southern Regional Council, an inter-racial group devoted to "equal opportunity for all," says the race problem must be met half way.

Mitchell said: "The South is making up its mind, and most of it is making up its mind right. . . . Perhaps the most hopeful sign is the spread of an official form of consultation. Local school boards are setting up citizens committees of white and Negro persons to find the facts and make plans. . . . everywhere that fair play is publicly offered, a surge of wisdom appears."

Highway Department's Exhibit at State Fair in Sedalia Is Replica of Pioneer Ozark Structures

Old Town's covered bridge, with toll-house partly visible at left. Bridge is replica of Noah's Ark Bridge which has spanned Little Platte River near Smithville since 1878. Sign on right of bridge gives load limit (15 cattle or 25 sheep, no elephants), announces $10 fine for crossing at more than four miles an hour, for smoking or for carrying fire unless secured in "lantern or other vessel."

By CHARLES MENEES of the PICTURES Staff

OLD TOWN is an expanding community with a population of zero. Thousands of persons have visited there in the last several days but no real estate has been sold. Explanation for this paradoxical situation is that Old Town is part of an exhibit at the Missouri State Fair at Sedalia. It is one of the principal attractions of "Missouri Gardens," annual display of the Missouri Highway Department.

The building boom began in Old Town in 1949 with a replica of a pioneer Ozark homestead. Since then the rustic "settlement" has acquired a blacksmith shop, barn, corncrib, brook, springhouse, tollgate, covered bridge and, this year, a church. The man responsible for the idea is Floyd Sayers, engineer in the highway department's maintenance bureau at Jefferson City. Sayers' personal reward comes from hearing adults say Old Town brings back memories of their childhood, from school-age children who tell him that the exhibit taught them something about Missouri's past.

Supplying color in Old Town are flowers of various kinds, some of which are identifiable in the photographs shown on this page. Old Town occupies about a half-acre of the highway department's two-and-a-half-acre exhibit in the southwest part of the fairgrounds. Last year nearly 244,000 persons viewed the exhibit, with most strolling through Old Town. After today, closing day of the 1955 fair, Old Town's structures will be boarded up for another year.

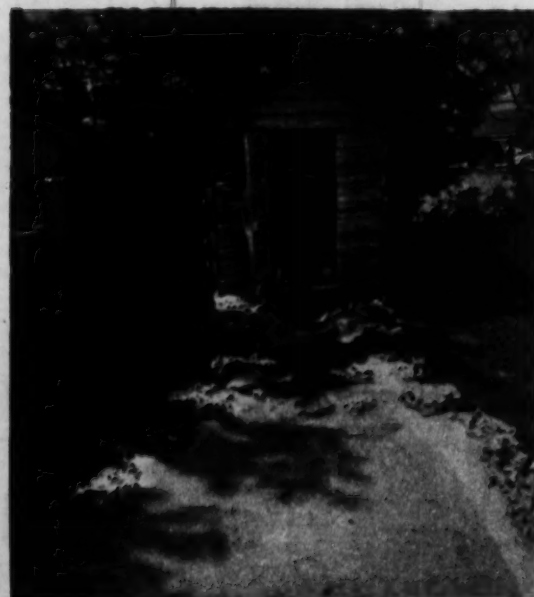

Almost exact copy of St. Paul's Episcopal Church at Ironton, an 1870 structure of architectural appeal to the designer of Old Town. One wall is eliminated so visitors may view interior. Tower is about 35 feet high, sanctuary 25 feet deep. Hymns are played on organ inside sanctuary while exhibit is open. Sign carries the description "Church of your choice in the cedars."

Old Missouri one-room cottage with stone fireplace. A sign refers to it as "Minister's humble home where all are welcome." Structure is 20 feet by 12 feet, plus porch. A live donkey named Katy is kept in nearby shed. "Missouri Gardens" contains a number of varieties of flowers which are unusual or new in the state. These are planted so blooming will be timed with week of the fair.

St. Louis County—the Weakling Giant

THE FIRE PROTECTION PROBLEM

An example of the division in fire protection that exists at many places in St. Louis County is posed by fire trucks from the Ladue and Olivette departments at the Ladue-Olivette line on Dielman road. Ladue is a full-paid department; Olivette is part-paid, part-volunteer. The Ladue department does not go into the adjoining municipality of Olivette, nor is the Olivette department called into Ladue. In the county are 15 fully paid fire departments—13 of them are municipal departments, one (Normandy) is a district department that covers 16 small municipalities, and one department covers the Jefferson Barracks housing area. Eleven of the professional municipal departments in the densely populated east-central county area are co-ordinated on a metropolitan basis, have a central alarm and stand-by system. They have no reciprocal agreements with departments outside their group. Rest of county is protected by 33 part-paid or wholly volunteer fire departments that co-operate with one another but have no central alarm system. A year ago the County Council established a division of fire and accident prevention to promote co-ordination between county departments, study practicability of a county-wide central alarm system but appropriated no funds for it.

THE POLICE PROBLEM

Captain Frank Gentile of the Bellefontaine Neighbors police department has a word with Sergeant Clarence Wolford of the Riverview police department at the dividing line between their jurisdictions on Chambers road. Of the 96 county municipalities, 29 have full-time police protection; 30 have some protection, with men on call; 30 have more formalized protection with part-time policemen; seven have no police at all. Size of the departments ranges from one man up to 40 (University City). The larger departments have their own radio; some of the others use the radio of the new St. Louis County Police Department, which protects the county's unincorporated area, is also supplying service informally to some municipalities that have no police of their own. As yet, none of the municipal departments have been deputized by the county department. Police in adjoining communities usually help each other if needed, but there is no central authority.

By ROBERT E. HANNON of the PICTURES Staff

IN CHANGING from a rural countryside into a metropolitan center in the last 15 years, St. Louis County has become an unco-ordinated giant. It is a whopping community—in area, in population, in resources—but its governmental processes have not kept pace with its amazing growth.

That growth is startlingly evident to anyone with the patience to drive through the maze of cities, towns and villages ringing the city limits of St. Louis. In a 120-square-mile urbanized area—one-fourth of the county's total area—live most of the county's 538,000 residents. Twice what it was in 1940 and still growing, the county population is almost two-thirds that of St. Louis, is greater than that of Kansas City, is even larger than that of the states of Wyoming, Nevada, Delaware or Vermont.

The urban area of the county is incorporated under the jurisdiction of 96 municipalities. These vary in size from 11 to 5875 acres, in population from 57 to 40,000. The bigger ones are to a considerable extent self-sufficient cities, but tiny ones do not have enough revenue to provide essential municipal services. Some have no taxes at all.

Advantage of small municipalities in keeping local government close to their citizens is outweighed by their inability to act together in meeting area-wide problems. Under the impact of the tremendous county growth, the situation has reached a point where they must get together if the county is to survive as a community.

The present County Council system of government, a combination of statutory and municipal functions, cannot supply the need for integrated action. The council districts do not even conform to the county areas of activity, assessed valuation or population. Neither can the County League of Municipalities fill the need. It has no official status; can serve only as a clearing house for information about common problems.

The lack of co-ordination among the municipalities has shown itself in many ways, according to M. Eugene Baughman, director of the St. Louis County Planning Commission. The county has lost federal aid funds for housing, rehabilitation, highways and planning because it has no staff to prepare plans for public improvements. Because its municipalities cannot speak with one voice, the county lost numerous utility rate cases before the state Public Service Commission and has not been able to fight effectively against elimination of mass transportation routes. The county provides no liaison between private development of land and public utility easements, thus permitting waste in land use.

Some progress has been made toward providing the county with better police and fire protection, but there remains much room for improvement. Establishment of the St. Louis County Police Department was a major step forward, but, as the county grand jury reported recently, the lack of co-operation between the new department and law enforcement agencies of various municipalities is a matter of serious concern. Mutual assistance agreements among fire departments of various districts and municipalities help in safeguarding densely populated areas, regardless of political boundaries. But a chink in this fire protection armor is the lack of co-operation between a professional group of departments and an association of volunteer or semi-volunteer departments. And in many unincorporated areas, residences are far from fire apparatus.

In the matter of traffic and related problems, St. Louis County is notably weak. Not in 18 years has the county had a new railroad grade separation—except as part of the state highway system—because it has no agency to design grade separations. It did not participate in preparation of the Elliott expressway plan, in which it has a vital interest. It has no agency to analyze and prevent recurring accidents and fatalities along major streets and at major intersections which may be under jurisdiction of two or more municipalities. There is an appalling lack of continuity of highway routes within the county. Speed limits vary greatly among municipalities.

Solution to the problem of unco-ordination among the municipalities lies in one of two courses: Consolidation or federation. Politicians say the former is too drastic to merit consideration but the latter might find support. One of its chief advocates is Planner Baughman, who has suggested a formation of a metropolitan federation to serve the county as a whole. Under his plan, municipalities would retain their local sovereignty but would be banded together in one governmental unit that would plan and direct county-wide projects and services.

Each individual municipality would continue handling local problems and providing local services—zoning, subdivision control, garbage collection, licensing, taxing, etc. But the federation could provide the place for disposal of the garbage, as distinguished from its collection. It could provide for traffic control at points of multiple jurisdiction, furnish equipment for highway maintenance that small towns cannot afford. It could represent the county at large before state and national agencies in matters like utility rates, mass transportation, public housing, land clearance, airport development and highway construction. In brief, the federation would enable the county to act as an integrated unit.

Baughman suggests that the county might be divided into seven districts. The size and shape of each district would be determined by a balance of population and assessed valuation. Each might include a number of municipalities and a segment of unincorporated area. But a definite plan remains to be worked out.

County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews has announced he will appoint a committee to study the proposal for a metropolitan federation as a prerequisite to future appointment of a board of freeholders to draw up a concrete plan of federation.

Without a Central Co-ordinating Authority, the 96 Municipalities and Unincorporated Area Present a Sprawling Complex Threatening Community Survival

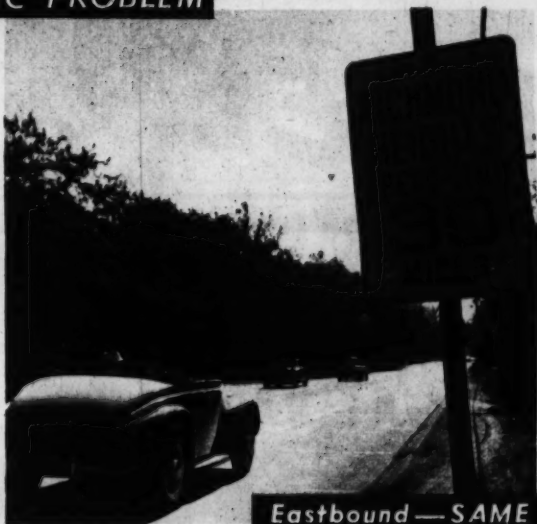

THE TRAFFIC PROBLEM

One-way bridge on Rock Hill road in Ladue is traffic bottleneck for motorists using the thoroughfare as connection between Manchester and Litsinger roads. The bridge fails to discourage motorists who prefer to maneuver their way across the narrow span rather than fight the heavy jams on Brentwood boulevard. Utility poles along this section of Rock Hill road are almost on highway. This road is an example of the county's desperate need for north-south traffic arteries, but putting one highway through a dozen municipalities presents complex problems. Forming frieze around this and the preceding page are name signs of 93 of the county's 96 municipalities. The other three—Bridgeton Terrace, Glen Echo Park and Winchester—have no signs.

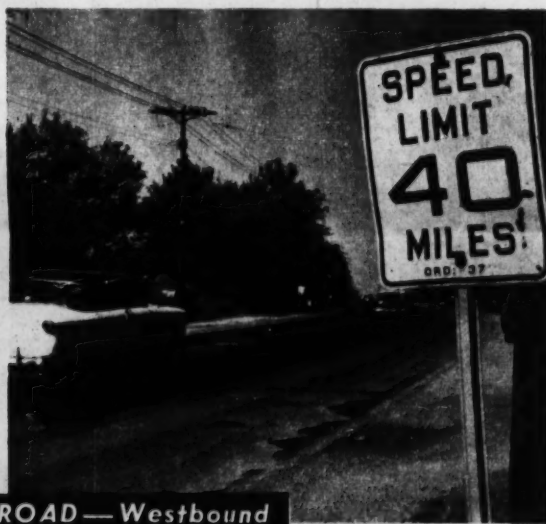

Vehicular traffic on Big Bend boulevard, one of county's main north-south thoroughfares, waits while freight train crawls past grade crossing in Maplewood. The double railroad tracks, main line of the Missouri Pacific to the west, are as busy as the street. This is one of a number of railroad grade crossings in the county that have long needed conversion into grade separations.

Eastbound—SAME ROAD—Westbound

Divided jurisdiction over major thoroughfares aggravates the traffic problem in St. Louis County and contributes to the confusion of motorists. Where the center line of a street or road is the dividing line between two municipalities, there frequently are different speed limits on each half of the same stretch of roadway and sometimes different parking regulations on each side. An example (shown above) is that portion of heavily traveled Clayton road (30-000 cars daily) which separates Richmond Heights and Ladue. On the south or Richmond Heights half of the road there is a 30-mile-an-hour speed limit for eastbound traffic, but on the north or Ladue half the speed limit is 40 for westbound traffic. A road that traverses a half-dozen municipalities may have as many speed limits. Among the county's many municipalities, speed limits vary from 15 to 50 miles an hour; each has own traffic regulations.

REORGANIZATION PROBLEM

Preliminary study by County Planner Baughman of possible metropolitan federation districts shows how county might be divided into seven districts, each containing a number of municipalities which would not lose their sovereignty. Actual boundaries of districts, to be set up on the basis of population and assessed valuation, would be determined by a board of freeholders. Districts 1, 6 and 7 (numbers are arbitrary) embrace largely unincorporated areas. Districts on map have no relation to present County Council districts.

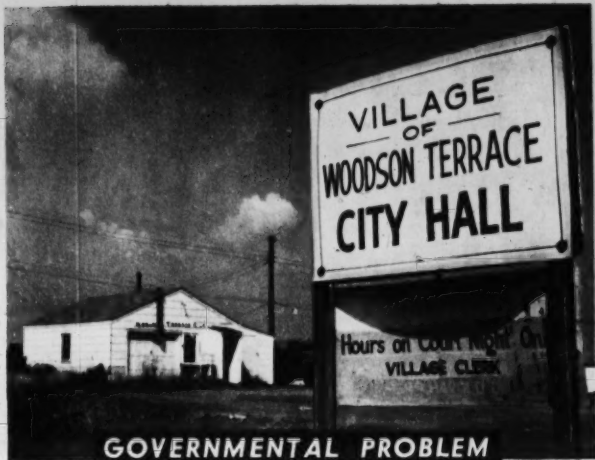

An example of how a road may abruptly change at a political boundary is the Union road-Morganford road thoroughfare at the St. Louis city-county line in the south section of the county. This view is to north, into the City of St. Louis. The road not only changes complexion but also changes names.

being Morganford in the city. Union in the county; the line bisects this photo where curb ends (left center). The City of St. Louis is widening Morganford into a 64-foot roadway with four travel lanes and two parking lanes, but in this unincorporated area of the county it remains a narrow two-lane road.

GOVERNMENTAL PROBLEM

Like some of the county's smaller municipalities, Woodson Terrace has garage-like municipal hall that is closed most of the time. Citizens must await court night to transact business with the village clerk. The county's multiplicity of municipalities is only part of its political crazy quilt. All areas of the county are part of at least six jurisdictions: Federal and state representative, state senatorial, county legislative, magistrate and school districts; some are part of one to four additional jurisdictions—municipal government, fire, sewer or water districts.

THE WEAKLING GIANT

HOUSING PROBLEM

Rundown, weed-grown, rat-infested, Jefferson Barracks is one of 11 substandard housing areas in St. Louis County that occupy a total of 2300 acres. The unpainted, unkempt wooden barracks buildings are fire hazards. Old oil drums used as garbage cans and rubbish containers make ideal breeding places for rats. The substandard areas need rehabilitation to prevent spread of blight.

RIGHT-OF-WAY PROBLEM

Right-of-way of the old Kirkwood streetcar line through Glendale points up county's weakness in fighting abandonment of mass transportation routes and in taking advantage of opportunities to improve public facilities. In this case, county's governmental machinery could not act swiftly enough to condemn the right-of-way for a traffic relief thoroughfare before it reverted to property owners, who promptly fenced it off.

PUBLIC UTILITY PROBLEM

In this unincorporated area in south end of county, power line towers march across countryside mushrooming with new subdivisions. The line was there first. County provides no liaison between private land development and easements for public utilities. Service facilities of public utilities are exempt from county's zoning law. County has no board of public service, as authorized by charter, to deal with utility problems.

Workmen at Araure, Venezuela, push bargeloads of unrefined salt over lake water towards shore. Venezuela has no salt mines. To obtain salt, ocean water is admitted into shallow lakes below sea level. As water evaporates, lakes become supersaturated with salt and the compound settles to bottom and crystallizes. Workers then break up the salt layer—two to three inches thick—with their feet, load the commodity on barges to be carried to shore for drying and refining.

THE RAIN FELL FOR 48 HOURS

And the Flooding Eastern Rivers Jumped Their Banks, Tearing Away Life and Property

HURRICANE DIANE had been nearly counted out by the weathermen. After nipping at the state of Virginia, the season's second great blow had dwindled to little more than a low-pressure area in central Pennsylvania. Maryland was getting a heavy drenching by the rain that always travels with a hurricane. Scattered showers were predicted for the Northeast.

But even with her winds reduced to a comparative whisper, Diane still had left an unadvertised and vicious last kick. Influenced by the counterclockwise motion of the hurricane's outer fringes, masses of warm humid air had swept in from the Atlantic, hovering over the Northeastern states. Diane, on her leisurely path to the sea, shoved long arms into these new masses, pushing the warm air higher. Quick cooling followed and Diane triggered additional rains to reinforce those of the hurricane itself. Results: Deluge, floods, death and unestimable destruction.

For 48 hours the rains came in tons to parts of a six-state area. From Maryland to Maine rivers rose swiftly, hurtled their banks, spread death and desolation along their valleys. Grotesque pathways of boiling, muddied water twisted through the lush Naugatuck River Valley in Connecticut, the resort counties of Sullivan and Ulster in New York, south along the Delaware River into Pennsylvania. Homes, factories and other business establishments were wrecked or floated away. Bridges were down, roads washed out.

The disaster was the worst of its kind ever to hit Connecticut. The 10,000 residents of Putnam in the northern part of the state spent a night of terror as hundreds of barrels of exploding magnesium floated on flood waters through the business district. In the photograph above smoke rises from ruins of Putnam's magnesium plant which stands like an island in raging waters of the merging Quinebaug and French rivers. Approaches for fire-fighting equipment had been washed out. Fire broke out when flood waters hit the plant's boilers.

The worst single tragedy occurred near Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania. There, a creek swept over a summer vacation camp and carried away 40 persons, mostly women and children.

At midweek, the death toll for the six-state area stood at 176, with 71 persons reported still missing. The Red Cross said an incomplete survey showed 34,169 families were routed from their homes, 439 homes destroyed, nearly 14,000 damaged. Whole communities were without safe, drinkable water. Looting was a problem. Thousands were temporarily without employment, many of these facing the probability that their former places of work may never again open. So vast was devastation that only the broadest estimates of dollar damage could be made: These ran into billions.

On Tuesday, President Eisenhower, after flying over parts of the devastated area, promised massive federal aid for rehabilitation in Connecticut and Pennsylvania, the two states hardest hit, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York and New Jersey. The President and leaders of eight government agencies agreed to mobilize government resources to provide a minimum $80,000,000 flood relief program. Meanwhile, national, state and local government officials were beginning to give attention to what measures in weather warnings and flood control need be undertaken to prevent a repetition of such disasters.

READYING A NEW DEPARTMENT STORE

Glimpse of a salesgirl between stacks of boxes containing women's sweaters. Personnel from other Famous-Barr stores acquainted new store's employees with merchandise.

BUSINESS EFFICIENCY calls for keeping track of a lot of things in percentages. They can even be used to measure the state of readiness of a new department store for its opening to the public. Such was the case when Famous-Barr Company was in the stretch for the opening of its Northland branch store.

When the photographs on this page were taken—four days before the opening—the store was about 90 per cent prepared for swinging open its doors. Tons of merchandise were still being dispatched to the store's 150 separate departments. Carpenters were putting finishing touches on showcases. Salespeople were getting familiar with goods, marking it, putting it in the proper places. Mountains of empty cartons were swept out of the aisles every hour. Conferences at various levels were frequent. The employment office was still busy hiring. But orderliness was taking shape more rapidly than it actually seemed.

By the end of the next day, when employees had their preview of the store, it was 95 per cent ready; 24 hours later it was 99 per cent shipshape. That left a day for attending to odds and ends and for the final inspection by company executives.

The Famous-Barr branch store—the company's third built in this area since 1948—is located in Jennings at the intersection of Lucas-Hunt road and West Florissant avenue. The new store has 337,000 square feet of floor space. It is the hub of a shopping center that cost $12,000,000 and will serve the rapidly growing population of north St. Louis County.

OFFSHORE RADAR POST TAKES FORM

 Stands Above Sea 100 Miles From Boston

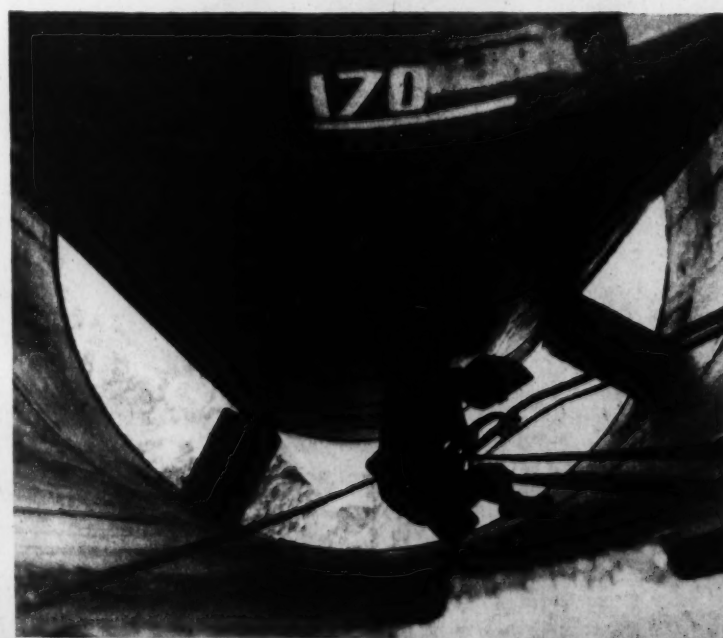

America's first offshore radar warning station, which was towed into place 100 miles off the coast of Massachusetts from Boston Harbor, stands above the sea on stilt-like legs. The "Texas Tower" is on Georges Bank, an offshore shoal. Six of its legs, pushed 10 feet down into the sea bottom, are temporary. The platform has been elevated on them by air jacks to a top deck height of 87 feet above the water. Three permanent legs—one at each corner of the triangular platform—will project nearly 50 feet below the ocean bed. Construction equipment, including long-boom crane, and workmen crowd the deck, which is 200 feet long on each side.

Basket hoisted by crane is used to lift men and materials to work points. Basket has an inflated rubber ring on bottom to keep it afloat if it should fall into water. Some 50 to 75 Air Force and Navy men will staff each of the radar islands in chain that eventually will extend from Newfoundland to Norfolk, Virginia.

International News Photos except as noted

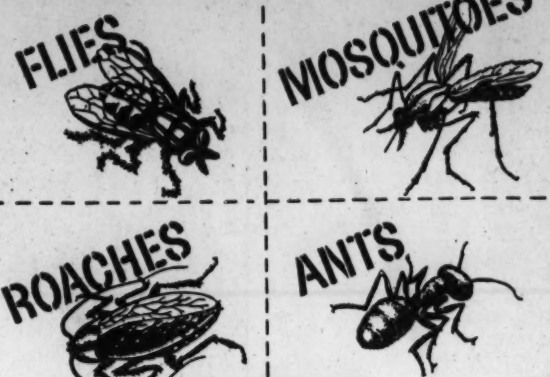

Welder in boatswain's chair works between one of the permanent legs and its circular housing as water laps below. Portion of the leg within splash zone is clad with stainless steel as protection against erosion. When Hurricane Connie recently threatened the installation, 40 workers were removed, but 50 men elected to stay and continue their work. Men aboard island had better weather than mainlanders on the east coast.

FILMS ANALYZE RATTLER'S STAB

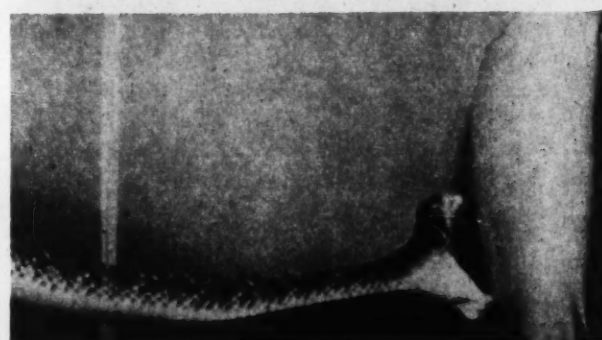

Texas Diamondback Delivers Its Lethal Strike in About One-Quarter Second

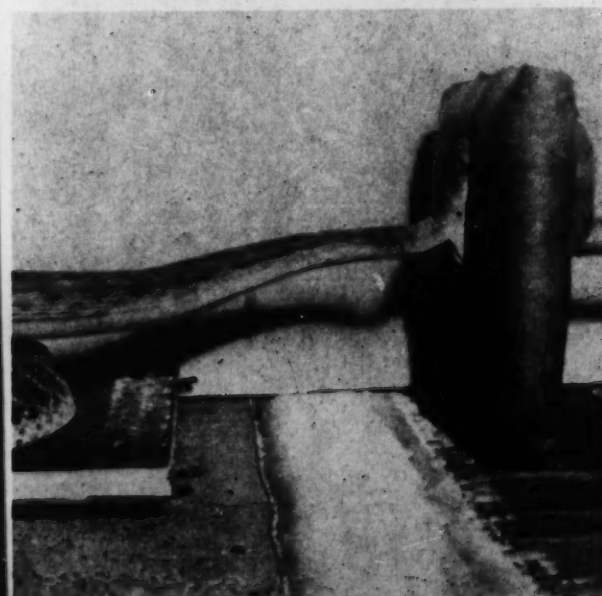

A rattlesnake delivering its lethal strike is a blur of action too fast for the human eye to follow. However, a high-speed movie camera, exposing film at the rate of 2400 frames a second, has analyzed the rattler's strike and timed it. The first of the series, made by Sam Dunton, staff photographer of the New York Zoological Society, shows a Texas diamondback with rattles whirring menacingly, the snake's head raised and facing the objective, the forward coil of its muscular body upreared and cocked.

The snake's head, moving through field of electronic controls, has set off flash bulbs and started the sequence camera. As the strike is about to occur, the rattler's jaws are opened a full 180 degrees, the fangs pointed straight out.

Fangs enter the target, in this case a foam rubber pillow. Photo shows that striking action is actually a stab, not a bite.

Even in high-speed photograph, the rattler's body patterns are blurred as it strikes the pillow with velocity measured at rate of 8.1 feet a second. Tail end of the body remains coiled to provide leverage. Total time of the strike was about one-quarter of a second.

WHAT DO YOU LIKE BEST ABOUT YOUR JOB?

BOB INGHAM, well-known radio and television sportscaster,
KSD and KSD-TV, St. Louis

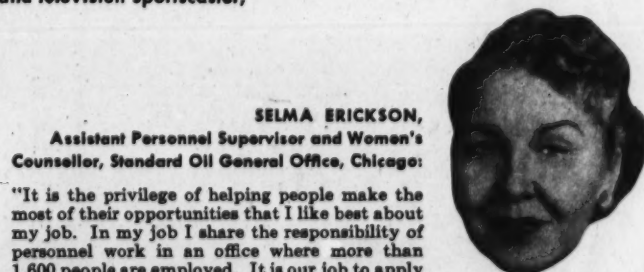

ROBERT P. MATTHAIDES,
Assistant Department Supervisor-General
Accounts, Standard Oil, Omaha, Nebraska:

"It's the 'open door' to advancement that I like best about my job. I started with Standard Oil in 1947, and since then I have moved from a warehouse to the Division office and through four departments, gaining invaluable experience in each job. There have been helpful training courses right along for the next step up. Anyone who applies himself can certainly keep going ahead in a large, well-organized company like this. Yes, it's the 'open door' to progress that I like best."

ELDON L. JOHNSON,
Standard Oil Dealer,
Rochester, Minnesota:

"Ever since I was a kid I wanted to manage my own business, and that's what I do here—lock, stock and barrel. In any kind of service business, you can build a sizable volume if you provide fast, efficient service and quality products. And that's the kind of station mine is. The result is comfort, happiness and security for my family. How can you beat that?"

SELMA ERICKSON,
Assistant Personnel Supervisor and Women's Counselor, Standard Oil General Office, Chicago:

"It is the privilege of helping people make the most of their opportunities that I like best about my job. In my job I share the responsibility of personnel work in an office where more than 1,600 people are employed. It is our job to apply the company's personnel policies in such a way that our people can work happily and effectively to help themselves, each other, and the company. That's why I like best the privilege of helping people make the most of their opportunities."

WILLIAM R. SHIMMIN, Group Leader,
Automotive Research Division,
Standard Oil, Whiting, Indiana:

"Automobiles of the future will require new, higher-octane gasolines and specially-tailored motor oils. While those cars are still on the drafting boards, the fuels and lubricants must be developed in research laboratories so they'll be ready at the same time. At Standard Oil we have a continuing program to develop products for the automobiles the public will be driving in coming years. As part of the Standard Oil team that prepares products for the future, I am among the first to see the engines of tomorrow perform with the fuels and lubricants of tomorrow. It's a wonderful experience."

When a man likes his job he does a good job. The greatest strength of Standard Oil Company is the loyal enthusiasm of its employees and dealers. Their skills and abilities make it possible for us to give good service and bring the finest possible petroleum products to motorists, home owners, farmers and industrial customers throughout the Midwest. The company takes pride in the job they are doing. It gives meaning to our pledge—"You Expect More From Standard—And Get It!"

Tuna Sandwiches Like Birthday Cakes

2. Hard-cooked eggs are cut into the tuna mixture, then lemon juice, mayonnaise and salt and pepper to taste are added.

3. Both dark and white bread are cut into large rounds. A beer goblet makes a good cutter. Rounds are spread with the mixture, using three rounds for each serving.

FOR A BIRTHDAY LUNCHEON where a cake is not desired, Mrs. James Claiborne of Webster Groves makes triple-tiered sandwiches that simulate tiny birthday cakes. They are generously frosted with a well-flavored cream cheese, filled with a moist tuna salad and adorned with the traditional rosebud and candle. Chopped chives are sprinkled on top.

Mrs. Claiborne combines tuna, eggs, celery, parsley, celery seeds, lemon juice, mayonnaise and seasonings to taste. Mixture is then spread thickly between three rounds of bread, with a dark bread for the center slice. The cream cheese is thinned with milk for easy spreading and is seasoned with salt, onion salt, Worcestershire sauce or any desired seasoning. It is spread on sandwiches like cake frosting. The chives add color as well as flavor. The rose is made of cheese tinted with red food coloring. It is placed in center of each sandwich to hold the candle. Large potato chips placed around the sandwiches give a 'fairy flower-like effect. Chicken salad may be used in place of the tuna salad. Sandwiches may be prepared hours in advance and kept refrigerated until time for serving. Potato chips are put on at serving time. Serves six.

INGREDIENTS: For the filling—two six-ounce cans tuna fish, two hard-cooked eggs, two ribs celery, approximately one-half cup mayonnaise, one to two tablespoons lemon juice, one tablespoon chopped parsley, one-half to one teaspoon celery seeds. For the topping—one eight-ounce package Philadelphia cream cheese, milk for thinning, chives, salt, onion salt, Worcestershire sauce and food coloring. One loaf each of white and rye or whole wheat bread.

You can get
5 to 10 more horsepower with new SHELL X-100
Motor Oil Premium

Here are the reasons:

Before an ordinary motor oil can flow freely, it's got to be warmed up. Until it is, your engine will waste from 5 to 10 horsepower just pushing it around. Even on the hottest days your engine starts cold and seldom warms up fully in average driving.

That's why you need new X-100® Motor Oil Premium.

Unlike ordinary motor oil, X-100 Premium flows freely even when your engine is stone cold. It lubricates immediately—without engine drag—gives you 5 to 10 horsepower as a bonus.

And because new X-100 Motor Oil Premium contains an "alkalizer," it stops acid action—the major cause of engine wear.

Next time, have your Shell Dealer drain and refill with new Shell X-100 Motor Oil Premium. It's the finest protection your engine can have.

Old Trouble Spot, New Flare-up

Indians Seeking Return of Portuguese Goa Are Repulsed by Firearms

Shouting Indian demonstrators hold hands high in their cheering, shouting march towards Goa in "passive resistance" campaign to wrest the colony from Portuguese rule. The march was organized by minority parties of India.

SINCE the sixteenth century, Goa, a port and tiny enclave on the southwest coast of India, has been a Portuguese colony. It is ruled along with two smaller coastal territories—Damao and Diu—by a Lisbon-appointed Governor General who is backed by Portuguese soldiers. Since India acquired independence status eight years ago, the country has been trying to oust the Portuguese—by diplomatic means—from all India.

On their Independence day, hundreds of unarmed Indians walked towards Goa as a "peaceful invasion" of protest against foreign rule in India. Armed with machine guns and hand grenades, Portuguese soldiers waited for the demonstrators. As the Indians crossed the border, the soldiers fired a volley into the air. The Indians dropped to the ground, then moved forward. The soldiers fired on the marchers. Thirteen Indians were killed and 31 were wounded. The Goa killings touched off a series of disorders in Indian cities. There were some 100 casualties when Indian police protected the Portuguese consulate in Bombay from an Indian mob. India and Portugal have now broken off diplomatic relations. The Indian campaign against Goa is a phase of the world-wide protest against colonialism, another example of which is shown on Page 16.

Subdued Indian marchers return from the India-Goa border carrying their dead and wounded comrades following border encounter in which they were fired upon by Portuguese troops. International News Photos except as noted

WIFE WITH A CONFLICT

Jose Ferrer and June Allyson in Film Version of "The Shrike"

1. A brilliant and sensitive director of plays, Jim Downs (Jose Ferrer), is thwarted in an attempt at suicide. In the hospital, Jim is visited by his estranged wife, Ann (June Allyson). She hopes to help him recover from his upset emotional state, but Jim tells her she is too late. Once hailed as one of the most gifted men in the theater, Jim has been almost jobless in recent years as result of a succession of failures of his plays. (As a play, "The Shrike" won a Pulitzer prize in 1952.)

2. In the hospital's psychiatric ward with other distraught men, Jim finds his only reason for now wanting to live is Ann's word that a producer has a new play for him to direct. During a psychiatric examination Jim begins to tell a doctor about his nine years of marriage to Ann.

4. Ann loses a child, becomes more possessive. To humor her, Jim reports his every move to Ann, even makes scene changes that she capriciously suggests. As Jim's plays continue to fail, Ann makes a point of clipping the critical reviews, pasting them in an album and showing them to Jim. Gossip columnists speculate on which of the Downs is really doing the directing—Jim or Ann.

3. Ann had a role in Jim's first play, and they were married at the time that his prospects were brightest. His next play had been a flop. Then Ann had persuaded Jim to give her a part for which he knew she was not suited. Four days before opening night, Ann quarreled with the leading lady (Jacqueline de Wit) and walked out on her role, leaving Jim with a last-minute understudy problem.

5. Jim gives a lead part to an unknown actress, Charlotte Moore (Joy Page). She's a hit but the play fails. In love with him, Charlotte tells Jim his mistakes were better than most successful plays. About this time, Ann, after clipping a new batch of bad reviews, suggests that Jim go to work in her father's store. This was his breaking point.

6. Jim's doctor writes in his notes "Wife a shrike," comparing Ann to a long-billed bird that skewers its victims on a thorn before devouring them. He bluntly tells Ann she is a woman who loves her husband yet hates him at the same time. Crushed at this revelation, Ann meets Jim as he is released from the hospital. She gives him the key to their apartment, and reveals she is going away so as not to hurt him anymore. However, with a new confidence, Jim takes her hand and they go home together.

INSURRECTION IN FRENCH AFRICA

Bloody Uprisings in Morocco and Algeria Confront Ruling Country With Critical Problems

TERROR STALKED THROUGH two of France's North African territories—Algeria and Morocco—last week as a result of nationalist uprisings amounting to incipient insurrection. It was further evidence of a world-wide tide against colonialism. Violence began on the second anniversary of the French banishment to Madagascar of the nationalist-minded Moroccan Sultan, Sidi Mohammed ben Youssef. Worst massacre occurred when Smaala tribesmen, 4000 strong, descended on the Moroccan town of Oued Zem, put it under hours of terror, slaughtered 80 Frenchmen. Most of the town's 11,000 Moroccan inhabitants fled in fear of French reprisals. Natives who remained were rounded up. Some of them (photo upper left) walk with hands on heads as helmeted French soldiers guard them. In nearby Casablanca, French security provisions were tightened after initial rioting. Armed Thabors (local police) patrolled streets of the city's Derb Ghalef district (photo upper right). Principal loss of life, however, occurred in Algeria (governed as part of France), where terrorist bands suffered heavily at French hands after launching sudden attacks in the Constantine and Philippeville areas. Following fresh rebel attacks, total death toll for both territories was reported at about 2000, with some 1000 rebels killed, 1500 taken prisoner in Algeria. On Wednesday, France called up 60,000 reservists to bolster its forces in the two strife-torn territories. The French were secretive about their offensive in the Atlas Mountains against the Smaala tribesmen who had perpetrated the Oued Zem massacre. From Paris it was reported the expedition was the largest since the bloody days 30 years ago when Abd el Krim and his Riff warriors were suppressed. Evidence of the spread of feeling against the French was participation in the disturbances by Berber tribesmen, hitherto France's allies against Arab nationalism. The French Government of Premier Edgar Faure, meanwhile, began talks with nationalist leaders in an effort to master the crisis. The French Government has promised home rule for Morocco, but the nationalists had refused to negotiate as long as aged Mohammed ben Moulay Arafa, who the French pushed in to succeed Ben Youssef, is Sultan. The United States has a stake in Moroccan developments because of the presence there of vital American bases, manned by thousands of American soldiers.

Think of a Way

There are stumbling blocks in everybody's life, but this family has learned a secret: You can use them as stepping stones

By MRS. WYMER DRESSLER

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. Years ago my daughter Jane said to me in the solemn way that little girls have: "Mother, some day I'm going to write a book entitled 'Think of a Way.'"

Her words sounded familiar, and suddenly I realized why: "Think of a Way" expressed our family's philosophy of life. For, as I thought of Jane's "title," I recalled the day that Bob, my youngest child, approached me, almost in tears. Owner of his first camera, his pictures were terrible; distressedly, he had come to me for help.

"Now look," I said sternly, "I have a house to run, a family to feed. You have time on your hands and a book of instructions. The rest is up to you — you've got to think of a way to get good pictures."

I had put the responsibility right back in his lap. And he met the challenge. By summer's end he had learned lighting, the proper angles — in short, how to make his camera "talk." Today, at 33, he's a skilled amateur photographer, also has a flourishing law practice in Portland, Ore.

In thinking back on Jane's remark, I remember the time John, my oldest child, built a beautiful boat in our basement and then found it was too big to pass through the basement door. At first he was too stunned to do anything — until I impressed on him our family maxim: Think of a Way. A few mornings later we awoke to find the boat out in the yard with a proud John beside it. He had found that the hull could be easily disassembled, then put together again. To our amazement — for he was scarcely in his teens — John's boat passed its "shakedown" cruise without a leak. John is now 43 and a successful surgeon, practicing in Ida Grove, Ia.

Still reflecting on Jane's "title," I recall how Think of a Way helped me impress her and the boys with the need for economy. Though Bob at the time could scarcely spell words, I gave the three children notebooks and pencils, made them jot down how they spent every penny.

The idea caught on immediately with them; but the most impressed was Jane. She developed excellent judgment in handling money, and even kept books on how she spent her allowance while attending college. After becoming a teacher, singer, actress, writer, she is now hard at work being a Southwesterner with us here.

Our practice of "thinking of a way," I believe, has made us a stronger family team. For instance there was the summer we spent at a lake resort. To get water, we had to walk from our cabin to a pump a good distance away; as a result, we tracked mud all over the floor. Finally we all got together and thought of a way: whenever one of us came up from the lake, he carried a flat rock from the beach and placed it on the path to the pump. Soon we had a mud-free path, and a beach free of rocks.

Our philosophy has long been practiced, unconsciously I suspect, by my husband. A member of a large farm family, he had neither money nor education to get the law job he desired. But he determinedly found a way by joining the Navy, which let him study law by correspondence. After a four-year hitch and six months in a law office, he passed the Nebraska bar exams with the highest marks ever given up to that time. He went on to become president of the Omaha Bar Association and a railroad attorney before his retirement in 1948.

Our philosophy indirectly "made" our marriage. I had known Wymer as a wide-eyed, wistful-looking schoolboy in Nebraska and thought: "There's one fellow I'll never marry." But after I'd seen how he found a way to prepare himself for life, I changed my mind and fell in love with him. We were married on Christmas Day, 1909.

If Jane hadn't made that remark many years ago, I doubt that I would ever have put our family motto into words. Yet it still would have been our guide, for "Think of a Way" helped all of us remove small stumbling blocks when we were younger, and is helping us to surmount bigger ones as we grow older.

THE BIG BLOWUP

Puckishly blowing up balloons at right is America's top slapstick team, Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis. Not long after the picture was taken, the balloons exploded; and not long after that, so did the act. After a spectacular climb from obscurity to TV and movie fame, Martin and Lewis called it quits. They don't put their heads that close together these days. Why? Martin and Lewis tell you in their own words on page 6.

pain

PEMBURY, KENT, ENGLAND

Among the boys who live in this pleasant English village is a lively, sturdy youngster of eight named Richard Russell Mains. Other youngsters might well consider him the luckiest kid alive: he can't feel pain.

Yet the truth is that Richard is the victim of a malady described recently by a leading nerve specialist as "the most baffling case in medical history." There are few such cases on record. The condition is called ganglioneuropathy. Something is wrong with the ganglia (nerve centers) which carry the sensation of pain to the brain. The boy has the use of only three senses, instead of the normal five.

Richard lives in a strange world. He can take knocks, bruises, cuts and burns without flinching; he cannot feel heat, cold or electric shocks. When he is eating, he does not know when the food has reached his mouth except by watching the fork or spoon. He has no sense of taste.

The boy is scarred from head to foot from injuries he has never felt. When he was only nine months old he had to undergo surgery for an eye injury which was self-inflicted. Said his father, Robert R. Mains: "He was laughing, and at the same time poking his eye out." Amazed doctors discovered he needed no anesthetic — the first indication of his disorder. Luckily, the surgeon was able to save the eye.

"When Richard was two," said Mr. Mains, "we found him in the kitchen, kneeling on the open door of the hot electric oven with his hand and knee cooking."

Richard wears special padded clothing to protect him from injury. He does not go to school because the other children, meaning no harm, punch and kick him just to verify that he can feel no pain. He is taught at home by a tutor, who says he's intelligent and good at arithmetic.

Richard's father, who's divorced, gave up his job as an engineer when doctors told him the boy must be watched constantly. Mr. Mains now runs a general store here, and Richard likes to help out with the chores.

Says Mr. Mains: "Every day is Christmas Day for Richard. He has no pain or worries and plenty of toys."

But he realizes life has played a cruel trick on his small son by denying him the gift of pain.

Now: The inside story in their own words . . .

WHY MARTIN AND LEWIS

The partners who rose from obscurity to the top of the heap in show business rear back and

HOLLYWOOD.

IN THE COLORFUL, tumultuous history of slapstick comedy teams, the course of partnership has often run a rocky, tortuous road.

Weber and Fields, Gallagher and Shean, Abbott and Costello, Laurel and Hardy—they all foundered at one time or another on the sharp reefs of money or jealousy. But rarely in the annals of comedy duos has there been anything to compare with the emotional severity of the feud between 38-year-old Dean Martin (Dino Crocetti of Steubenville, Ohio) and 28-year-old Jerry Lewis (Joseph Levitch of Newark, N. J.).

For the past 18 months these two funsters have scarcely talked to each other offstage except in moments of crisis.

And yet during this same period they have made motion pictures together, slaved on TV, performed in a Las Vegas gambling casino and convulsed thousands on a cross-country personal-appearance tour. In all of this, however, there was none of their old-time roistering, their unstinted camaraderie. Instead, an omnipresent air of mutual irritation (undetected by audiences) poisoned their working atmosphere. Each successive appearance fomented in them such mounting bitterness and ulcer-inducing aggravation that several weeks ago the boys called it quits.

Whether their breakup is permanent, no one can determine at this point.

The match that set ablaze the team's onetime Damon and Pythias relationship was small and insignificant: Martin refused last June to appear with his partner at a junket staged at Loch Sheldrake, N.Y., the heart of the Catskill Mountains' "Borscht Circuit." The junket was designed to promote a new Martin and Lewis film, You're Never Too Young.

More than 100 newspapermen had been invited to cover the event. Martin was advertised to appear, but didn't show up. Lewis considered this an inexcusable breach of faith.

On the night of June 10th, when he appeared on the stage of Brown's Hotel, two microphones were set up. Jerry turned to the orchestra leader and muttered sadly: "We won't need but one tonight." Then addressing the audience of reporters, all eager for the breakup announcement, he explained with atypical restraint, "All I can say about Dean and me is . . . no comment."

Back in Hollywood, however, Dean Martin had plenty to say.

"The kid's made me the heavy again," he asserted. "I never promised no one I was goin' to Brown's Hotel or anywhere in the Catskills. When Paramount put the idea to me months ago 'bout promotin' the picture, a big press affair up in the Borscht Circuit where Jerry got his start, I said no.

"Maybe Jer got his start in show business up at Brown's—they tell me he was a bus-boy or somethin'. But not me. I left home when I was 12, knocked around the country dealin' cards, runnin' wheels. I don't come from no Catskills. I told 'em it was a lousy idea. Then the kid come to me one day. 'Dean,' he says, 'you want maybe we should open the picture in Steubenville?' Again I gave them the No sign. But they went ahead anyway.

"They flew in this big group of newspaper guys to Brown's. They advertised us all over the place, and when I didn't show they accused me of breakin' my promise. I've never broken a promise in my life."

Jack Keller, press agent for Martin and Lewis, backs up the crooner.

"Dean told Paramount," Keller claims, "as far back as last January that he wanted no part of the junket to the Catskills. He didn't care if he owned a piece of the picture or not. He was being used, he felt, as the tail to wag the kite. He said he was being dragged in on Jerry's party, that under the circumstances the reporters would have to concentrate on Jerry because Brown's was his home grounds. He said that insofar as he was concerned he wasn't going."

"A few weeks later," Keller continues, "when the boys were playing the Sands in Las Vegas, Jerry called me one afternoon and said, 'Dean's changed his mind. He's agreed to go to Brown's.'"

The immediate cause of the Martin and Lewis break, L'affaire Brown, is of relatively little importance. Both disputants realize that.

What's significant is that their personal and professional relationship could deteriorate to such a point that a trifling dispute on picture promotion tripped them into the abyss of partnership dissolution.

"Sooner or later," Lewis now says, "it was bound to happen. It was inevitable."

Why?

Because Martin and Lewis no longer like each other, no longer see eye to eye on work, money, benefit performances, or family.

MARTIN and his wife Jeanne: Lewis's unending drive to work keeps him from his family, the crooner says.

Says Martin: "I think the kid's bein' silly. We gotta company together, the York Corporation. We got one of the greatest deals of all time. Each of us gets $4,000 a week from TV. Then after five years, or six pictures, Paramount gives us five to six million bucks to split."

"Jer is willin' to throw this out the window because I don't love him. Who says I gotta love him? Business is business. Does Abbott love Costello? Why can't we have a business-like partnership? I'm ready, willin' and able to work with him anytime he says."

Counters Lewis: "Dean was the guy who told the newspapers he was ready to do a single. Don't forget that. I didn't open up my mouth. Now I will, and I want you should know the truth. It's my fault. That's right. This mess is my fault. I made the mistake of worshipping this man. Honest! I thought more of Dean than my own wife, my own family. For years I thought I couldn't get along without him."

"I'm an only child, y' know. Maybe he represented something to me—the father image, the brother image—I don't know, but I accepted everything we did on his terms, his standards, his values. Now I've grown up. I got values of my own."

"A theatre-owner in Detroit, a guy who took care of us in the old days when we were struggling—he calls up. Business is lousy. He's going broke. For old time's sake, won't we play his house? Might make all the difference in the world. I'm ready to fly to Detroit in the morning. But I gotta turn the guy down. Why? Can I tell him my partner wants to play golf. It's the same way with benefits. Hospitals, orphanages, worthwhile charities. They phone, will we give them a few minutes, a few hours? I'm dying to say, 'Yes.' But I can't unless I show up without my partner."

The Public vs. the Home

"In my heart I feel an obligation to the public. Without their okay we're a couple of bums, nothing. You can't say we don't owe the public nothing but a good performance. You've gotta be a mensh (Yiddish for "person"). Me, I gotta guilt complex about not being in the war. I was only 14 when it broke out. Even so I gotta guilt complex. I feel that when Dean and I got a few weeks off we should be entertaining the troops in Korea, or Japan, or Greenland."

"I told Lew Wassermann the other day—he represents us—'Lew,' I said, 'if Dean'll agree to go to Korea with me on a USO tour right now, the act'll stay together.' Know what I got back? A letter, Dean sent out, sent to the studio, places like that."

"I'll read it to you: 'Gentlemen: Notwithstanding any statements or rumors which you may have heard to the contrary, please be advised that I recognize the existence of an employment contract with you dated September 1, 1954, and that I am and will continue to be and hold myself ready, willing and able to render and perform my services pursuant thereto.'"

"In other words Dean's ready to make pictures and work on TV, but go to Korea?—that ain't in the contract. That's not how I feel about things. A guy in show business has obligations. God gave me a little comic ability. Why he picked on me, I don't know. But I must use what he gave me to make people laugh. Not only the fellas who can afford $6.60 for the first row but for the sick and the shut-ins."

"Already I'm preaching. I don't wanna preach. But I can't tell you how deeply I feel these things. I can't go on kidding myself into believing that my work is a cold-blooded proposition, that I gotta make money, keep my mouth shut and let the rest of the world go fly a kite."

"I can't disassociate myself—how do you like that word?—I can't disassociate myself from people. To date I've made lots of money, and I'm a sick guy. Twenty-eight years old and I got ulcers and I spit blood and I can't sleep and I lose weight. Who needs this? I don't care if Patti and me gotta go back to a one-room apartment in Newark. I gotta live with my conscience. I've gotta be a mensh."

"You can't run a partnership, you can't run your life without principles. And if the only principle in this setup is to make money and to hell with everything else, I'm not buyin' it. No, sir. Not buyin' it any more."

On the compound subject of work and benefits, Dean Martin has this to say: "For eight years I been the heavy in this deal. To hear some of the gossip you'd think I was a criminal 'cause I don't wanna work 365 days a year."

"A man makes three movies a year, five television shows, works Las Vegas, goes on a p.a. (personal appearance) tour, makes recordings, does at least a dozen benefits—ain't that enough?"

"I can't help it if I'm not built like the kid. Jer'll work 24 hours a day if you'll let him. If he don't work he goes crazy. He'll put on a benefit for the kid who sells papers on the corner. I admire, respect him for LEWIS, his wife Patti and sons: His recent trip to New York brought a smoldering battle into the open.

it. But Jeez! He's ten years younger'n me. I can't take that routine. End of the day this guy jumpin' up and down my back I'm tired. I'm beat. I like to go home. I gotta wife, six kids. They're entitled to my time, my companionship."

"I didn't get married so that I could spend my life on the stage doin' benefits for the campfire boys. Jer and me, we've stayed up 36 hours on a telethon, raisin' funds for crippled kids, all kinds of charities. We done as many benefits as anyone in the business. There's been no shirkin' on that score."

"Why can't we do three pictures and five TV shows a year? What's wrong with that? What's wrong with goin' home at the end of the day and shuttin' show business outa your life? That's what I try to do. Don't like to carry problems and responsibilities home with me. I gotta have a chance to relax. The kid, he's always in a perpetual state of excitement. Always keyed up. That's not my temperament."

"People say I'm jealous. Hell man, if I was jealous, this act woulda folded years ago. I'm the straight man. I know that, always 've known that. Put me and the kid on a stage and 80 per cent of the people are lookin' at him. That's right. That's how it should be. Write a column about us, an' there's room for one picture. I expect it to be Jerry's."

...THEN THEY THREW AWAY THE SCRIPT

"I don't have a jealous bone in my body. But when they take a three-shot of me and Jer with Janet Leigh in between, and then they crop me out, naturally I feel hurt. Wouldn't be human if I didn't. But as I say, I can't change the way I'm built to suit Jerry."

"They talk about my golf 'n all that. I never missed a show or rehearsal yet. Work is work an' play is play, an' a man's gotta have time for both. A man's gotta have time for his family, his kids. A guy should be allowed to step into a church for a few minutes without playin' a benefit. Ain't no one in the world gonna convince me that particular thinkin' is wrong."

The origin of the Martin and Lewis partnership is clouded in so much publicity claptrap that it is difficult to extricate the truth.

Both men agree, however, that it was Lewis who put the act together in the summer of 1946. At the time, Jerry was playing the 500 Club in Atlantic City, and Martin was unemployed.

The boys never had worked together before, but out of the goodness of his heart Jerry went to the owner of the club, Skinny D'Amato, and talked him into giving Dean a job on the assumption that the latter was both a comedian and a great singer.

D'Amato hired Martin for $300 a week, paid Jerry $250. The first night the pair went on together they were a complete bust. D'Amato stormed, told them they were as good as through.

"The second night," Dean recalls, "we tossed the script away and went on with a who-the-hell-cares-anyway attitude. It worked wonders. We broke up the joint an' everyone howled. It seemed to me that Jer and I were made for each other. We shook hands and agreed to become partners."

'All that Dough'

Within two years Martin and Lewis were earning $15,000 a week on the night-club circuit. Subsequently, they were signed for radio, TV and motion pictures. By 1950 they were a show-business sensation, earning astronomical amounts, but keeping precious little after taxes and paying off a $300,000 contractual obligation.

As a matter of fact, both of them were frequently described as "the best-dressed men in Hollywood—fifty suits pending."

A few years ago they incorporated under the name of York Productions and signed contracts with NBC, Hal Wallis and Paramount Pictures.

Under their contract with Wallis, they are obligated to make four more pictures for him. There is also a clause in the contract forbidding them to work separately for the length of the pact. Their deal with NBC is another "joint" contract requiring that they appear as a team.

Despite these commitments, the partnership seemed doomed. Said Lewis, "It's too late now." But in the words of a spokesman for the Music Corporation of America, the agency that has earned $100,000-plus a year in commissions from the pair, "It's never too late—not with all that dough at stake."

Three weeks ago the boys suddenly agreed to "fulfill all outstanding obligations" for film and television work. The announcement did not mention their personal relations. A spokesman said simply, and significantly: "There will be no comment."

TUCSON, ARIZ.

In the desert 14 miles north of here, any amateur shutterbug can become an accomplished wildlife photographer. The secret is a completely equipped photographic "blind" where all you do is point your camera and press a button. Outside the blind, a man-made water hole and a chunk of frozen horse meat attract the animal subjects; above the blind, flash bulbs are rigged to go off when you press the shutter. The results are such striking candid photos as those on these pages of deer, wild pig, ringtailed cats, skunks, badger, bobcats, foxes and jackrabbits.

Wildlife photography for everyone is the idea of Marvin H. Frost and Lewis W. Walker of the Arizona-Sonora Desert Museum. Originally the blind was built so the museum staff could watch animals without being seen. Then outsiders began asking to use it; finally the museum set up the photographic blind.

Not a few of the shutterbugs get buck fever when they see animals only a few feet away. Once a skunk walked right into the blind — but the cameraman froze. The animals themselves aren't a bit camera-shy; even flash bulbs don't bother them. But when a twig snaps, they bound away in a hurry. ■

Teenage Topics

Liking and being liked by the opposite sex is an enormous problem during the teens. It's important, too, to adults, who easily forget the pain involved in their own first experiences. Here are some recent questions taken from letters sent to me by teenagers:

Q. A friend of mine used to go steady with a boy I have liked for some time. From what I've heard, he still likes her, but she hates him. I would like to find out if he likes me at all. What can I do?

— E.F., Sharon, Pa.

A. All you can do is stand by and be pleasant and friendly until he works out his problem with this girl. If she really does hate him, he will not be able to stand the rejection permanently and will certainly look around for a girl who is more receptive to his attentions. Perhaps it will be you — especially if, without chasing him, you let him know that you do like him.

Q. Recently I went on a week-end trip with a boy to whom I am pinned, and his mother. While we were away I mentioned several times that the trip was very enjoyable, and, upon leaving, thanked his mother for going with us and for being such a gracious chaperone. Is it also necessary to write her a note?

— B.J., Alexandria, Va.

A. Yes, always write a note of thanks for overnight entertainment. If you didn't do so, send his mother a gift, enclosing a card with a few words of appreciation.

Q. I am a serviceman in the U.S. Navy and 24 years old. For the last three months I have been dating a girl of 18, and, although neither one of us can put it into words, I can really say I love her very much and she feels the same towards me. However, this girl's mother has mentioned that she doesn't want her daughter seeing too much of any one fellow. Shouldn't it be up to the girl concerned?

— W.A.C., San Diego, Calif.

A. Until a girl is actually engaged, she should be free to make dates with a variety of men. If she begins going steady too early and then marries early, she may feel that she never had a true choice, that she was too young to realize what she was doing. She may feel, too, that she missed a phase in her life that could have brought carefree times rather than responsibilities. I think that although you believe you love this girl, you are not quite sure, or you would have little trouble putting your feelings into words.

When the time comes for a commitment, you will both know.

In the meantime, try not to be overly possessive and give her the freedom you undoubtedly expect for yourself.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS will be answered in this column as space permits. (Miss Vanderbilt cannot answer letters personally.) Address: Amy Vanderbilt, PARADE, 285 Madison Avenue, New York 17, N.Y.

FOLD-AWAY workbench takes little garage space.

Fold-away workbench

Several trips to the basement for tools and hardware when you're working on an outdoor project can dampen your enthusiasm. Think how convenient it would be to have a workbench and tool panel in your garage.

Since most garages lack the space for a workbench, the fold-away garage bench pictured on this page was specially designed. When open, it is 5 feet in length; closed, it projects only 7 inches from the wall. The unit boasts a tool rack, enclosed by bench top when not in use. Legs are hinged to wall studs so they fold flat against the wall.

All you need to build the unit is a hammer, saw, carpenter's square, brace and bits (or 1/4-inch electric drill), and a screw driver.

CLOSE SHOP by folding legs and locking bench top against tool panel.

BENCH TOP consists of 2 x 8s held together with three 2 x 3 cleats set on its underside. Mark the location of the screw holes.

HINGE the top to 2 x 4 board bolted to 2 x 10. Secure assembly to the garage wall by driving spikes through 2 x 10 into studs.

FOLDING LEGS are made of 2 x 4s overlapped and bolted together in the shape of a "P." Drill holes before putting in bolts.

RIZZUTOS, l. to r., on winter vacation: Penny Ann, 5; Cindy, 8; Patty, 11; his wife Cora; and Phil. They'll have Pop all year 'round.

'I'm going home to my family'

The great Yankee shortstop reflects on a fabulous career and looks ahead to a new life

by PHIL RIZZUTO as told to PAUL GARDNER

One evening recently I came home after a long doubleheader at the Stadium and was met at the door by my oldest daughter, 11-year-old Patty. She looked at her watch, put her hands on her hips and said with mock anger: "Daddy, why don't you get yourself a regular job like other men?"

I'm liable to — and quicker than Patty may suspect. For after 15 years in the major leagues with the New York Yankees, my playing days are running short. At 36, I may be looking forward this October to my ninth and last World Series (provided we win the American League pennant — and I'm pretty sure we will).

What's the next stop for "the Scooter"? Right now, frankly, I don't know. I may be able to get enough mileage out of these old legs of mine to go another season — either as a player or coach. But it's more likely that I'll soon be holding the "regular job" that Patty dreams about. What it will be I don't know yet, but one thing is for sure: my family is now going to see me both winter and summer.

Being away from home a lot is about the only knock I have against baseball. I've had my share of disappointments — and scares — but also more big moments in the past 15 years than I'd ever dreamed possible when I was just a skinny runt shagging flies on the sandlots of Long Island, New York.

I've forgotten most of the scares — except one that will always live with me. When I broke into baseball with a Class D team in Virginia, I came down with a Charley horse, but kept on playing and tore a muscle. Determined not to be benched, I continued playing. The next thing I knew the leg became infected and complications set in.

The doctors were so sure I'd die they called my mother from New York. Then — after an operation that required 38 stitches from my left knee to my thigh — they told me I'd never play ball again. That scared me more than the infection.

But the doctors were wrong. After a stretch with Kansas City, I came up to the Yanks in 1941. And then came the unforgettable years.

The moment that sticks out in my mind came in a game against Cleveland in 1950; it was a vital game in a tight pennant race. It went into extra innings and looked like an all-night affair until our Joe DiMaggio got on base and came around to third with one out.

Up next, I put the squeeze sign on. As the Indians' Bob Lemon got set to pitch, Joe tore lickety-split for the plate. Lemon, who's as smart a pitcher as there is, saw that Di Mag would score if I laid down the bunt. So he fired a pitch that he was sure I couldn't bunt.

It was aimed right at my stomach.

If I jumped away, the catcher would grab the ball and tag Joe out. If I stood there it would plunk me right in the middle and Joe would have to return to third (since the ball would be dead).

I split the difference.

STANKY is safe after kicking

As the pitch zoomed in, I squared away in a bunt position, then jumped backward. The pitch connected solidly with the fat section of the bat (which was placed right across my stomach) and bounced toward first. By the time the first baseman had picked it up, Joe was halfway to the clubhouse and we were on the way to our second of five straight pennants and world championships — an all-time baseball record.

Other times I didn't look so good. There was a big game against the Boston Red Sox in 1949, for example. They had men on first and second, none out, and Dom Di Maggio (Joe's brother) was at bat.

Dom took one pitch, then rapped a solid liner toward left. I went up into the air, felt the ball smack into the webbing of my glove. As I came down I dived for second to double out the runner — who was halfway to third. Then I looked up to see the runner from first barreling into second and I figured this was it —

An unassisted triple play — the ball-player's dream!

The dream was shattered in an instant. Out of the roar of the crowd I heard a teammate holler:

"The ball's on the ground, Phil, behind you!"

It had shot through the webbing of the glove. Not only was there no triple play, but nobody was out and the Red Sox had scored. They won the game too.

Stanky's Boot

That incident left me red-faced, but I've never been so embarrassed in my life as the day when Eddie Stanky made me look like a monkey. It was during the 1951 World Series with the Giants. In the fifth inning of the third game, Eddie drew a walk. With Al Dark up, our catcher Yogi Berra smelled a hit-and-run play and called for a wide pitch to Dark. Yogi was right: Stanky took off for second on the pitch, and Berra's throw to me at second had Eddie beaten by five yards. I awaited Eddie's arrival with nonchalance, a state of mind that's suicidal in baseball.

Stanky hit the dirt a few feet in front of the bag and rammed right into my tag, his feet reared high. One foot hooked into my hand, booting the ball out into center field. Stanky got up and scampered to third, and the Giants roared on to score five runs in the inning and win the game, 6-2. (We won the series, however, 4 games to 2, and I somehow managed to be voted the most valuable player in it.)

The best play I ever made? It's hard to say, but Tommy Henrich — our great right fielder for many years — once told me the greatest play he ever saw was one I pulled on Jimmy Outlaw, a speedy outfielder for the Detroit Tigers.

With one out, Outlaw came to bat with the bases filled. He tapped a high hopper just over the pitcher's head. I charged in, snatched up the ball halfway between the mound and second, turned while still moving away from second and snapped it off-balance to second baseman Joe Gordon. His relay to first nipped the fast-flying Outlaw by an inch, for a double play.

But that's baseball — a game of inches. I tried the same play in the 1953 World Series on a bouncer by Carl Furillo of the Dodgers. This time my hurried throw went to second baseman Billy Martin's right instead of his left, a run scored and I was a bum.

My days of worrying about baseball inches are just about all over, for the Yanks now have a fine array of young infield talent. However, I may be able to lend a hand in the '55 Series against the National League team — and right now that looks like Brooklyn. I've got a hunch I'm a jinx to the Dodgers; I've been on Yankee teams which have licked them in five straight Series — 1941, 1947, 1949, 1952 and 1953. I'm hoping I'll get to try for six this fall.

After October, however, I've got to start thinking about my future outside baseball. True, I may be able to play another year or so, or maybe latch onto a coaching job, but my future probably lies off the diamond. Right now I've got a stake in the American Clothing Shops in Newark, N.J., and I'm a partner with Yogi Berra in a bowling alley. Also, like a lot of ballplayers today, I've been thinking about a career in radio and TV sports broadcasting.

It's tough, though, to have to say goodbye to baseball. Only one thing eases the pain: your family. It's awfully nice to know they're glad to have you back.

'FLIGHT 6' IN A FIX

Gremlin-ridden plane that never leaves the ground is built to give you even better piloting and safer flying

CHICAGO.

In the flight compartment of the big DC-6B, taking off on Flight 6 out of Chicago, the crew of three stared tensely at dials and controls as the whine of the engines, fighting for altitude, ominously changed.

"Number Two is out," said the flight engineer tersely.

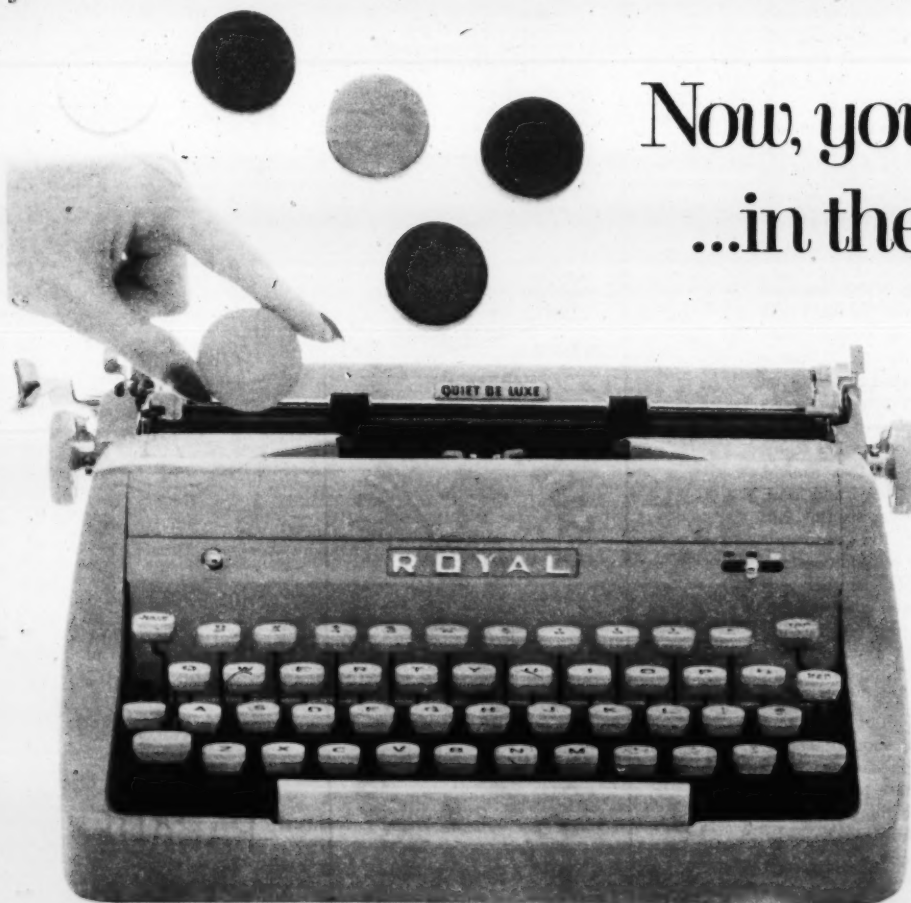

"Take over," the flight captain called out to the first officer, then huddled over the control board with the flight engineer. As the first officer took over the controls, the stricken engine stuttered and gasped, then miraculously "caught on" again.

"What's it like out there?" the flight captain asked the first officer.

"Can't see outside," said the other. "Frost all over the windows."

At that moment there was a shattering backfire. Red lights blinked crazily on the control board and alarm bells clanged. Number Three engine had suddenly caught fire. Instantly the flight engineer pressed the feathering button, stopping the propeller of the burning motor, then jerked the CO-2 handle to flood the engine with fire-quenching carbon dioxide.

"Request permission to return to Outer Marker," the captain ordered the flight engineer. As the latter did so, the airport control tower gave permission to return on ILS (instrument) approach, adding: "It's 400 [feet ceiling] and a mile [visibility] at Chicago."

As the men watched, the altimeter needle crept down ... 4,500 ... 4,000 ...

"We're going into the overcast," muttered the captain. Then, still down ... 3,500.

The plane shuddered. "That's all we need now," the captain growled, "a good strong tail wind." The flight engineer kept staring at the board, moving dials and levers.

On Two Engines

Now — 2,500 feet. The first officer told the tower: "Ready for ILS approach." In the next instant, the flight engineer said: "Number Four is out."

The flight captain snapped: "Prepare everything — leave the landing gear down." The flight engineer punched the feathering button, shut off fuel to the engine. The big Mainliner was now on two engines.

The first officer requested permission for an emergency landing; it was given. Silently the three crewmen watched the altimeter creep downward. After a few agonizing moments came the thud of tires on the runway. The captain drew a deep breath. "Right on the nose," he said.

This harrowing ordeal would be one for the books if it weren't for these facts: "Flight 6" never left the ground; the huge Douglas DC-6B had no engines, and it wasn't even a whole plane. It was only the nose section.

Flight Captain Walt Schroeter, First Officer L. A. Leversen and Flight Engineer Gil Wehrenberg were "flying" one of United Air Lines' fantastic "flight simulators" (see photos). The device was designed by Curtiss-Wright to provide the safest and most comprehensive flight training available today.

Jokingly dubbed "Demon Trainers" or "Dismal Trainers" (after a Curtiss-Wright engineer named Dehmel, who dreamed up this super-gadget), the simulators are used for at least 12 hours of training a year by every one of the line's 1,400 pilots and some 400 flight engineers. United, the only line using the gadget, has four of them. Each one "flies" approximately 1,310,000 miles a year at the line's flight training centers.

The simulator not only duplicates realistically every single detail of a flight but even provides the real-life sounds and sensations. An electronic hookup gives the exact feel of flying as transmitted by the stick, flaps, rudders and so on. A special sound system reproduces airplane noises — engine roar, aerodynamic hiss, slapping of tires on the runway — all perfectly synchronized.

The nose section also is plugged in to massive banks of cabinets containing thousands of controls as well as electronic computers. The latter continuously solve a series of mathematical equations which express the motion and performance of a plane in flight. Actually, then, the simulator is a gigantic mechanical brain which analyzes what happens to this earthbound ship and its crew.

Attached to the flight compartment is the instructor's station, which is usually screened off during training flights. Here the instructor stands before a "Trouble Console" board studded with scores of dials and switches. He manipulates these to set up any emergency or problem that could be encountered in flight. (He's the man, incidentally, who turned loose the gremlins that bedeviled "Flight 6.")

The Clouds that Aren't There

A Flight Simulator Operator in the rear compartment handles all ground control, tower and landing approach operations via radio. At her side is flight recording equipment which traces the course flown. So real is the entire operation that crews often find themselves glancing out of windows at engines, propellers or clouds that aren't there.

Says Capt. J. E. Sandow, chief of simulator training at Chicago: "We're concerned mainly with polishing up crew teamwork. We give the boys problems well beyond limits you could risk in actual flight. Then we see if they can get themselves out of the fix."

To the crews, these "fixes" are real in every respect.

And the amazing simulators have gained fame far and wide. Recently, for example, United got a letter from a young woman in New York. She wanted a job — as stewardess on a simulator.

CONTROL: In special compartment, operator Doris Langher gives radio information to simulator crew. Instructor George Ferguson sets up flight problems on Trouble Console.

Prince Valiant

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR
by Harold R. Foster

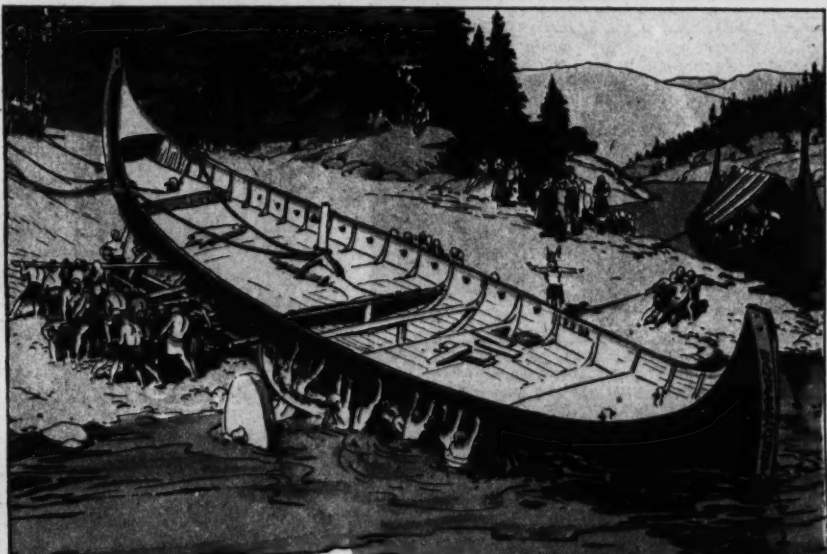

Our Story: FOR A FAIR PRICE THE POLOTJANS AGREED TO HELP PRINCE VALIANT TAKE HIS TWO SHIPS ACROSS THE 'GREAT PORTAGE' BUT THEIR NEW CHIEFTAIN WAS GREEDY, TRIED TO DOUBLE THE FEE AND THREATENED TO LEAVE THE NORTHMEN STRANDED. ALL HE EARNED WAS DISTRUST; HIS TRIBESMEN MUST DO ALL THE WORK ALONE UNDER THE STERN EYES OF THE ARMED VIKINGS.

MEN AND OXEN BREAK DOWN UNDER THE GRINDING TOIL, AT NIGHT TOO WEARY TO ESCAPE THEIR GUARDS. JAN HEDJI SITS APART, AN OBJECT OF CONTEMPT TO HIS TRIBESMEN.

"SIR VALIANT, WE WILL ALL BE DEAD ERE THIS TRAIL ENDS UNLESS YOUR MEN HELP AT THE HAULING ROPES! WE ARE WILLING TO KEEP OUR BARGAIN. IT WAS ONLY THE GREED OF HEDJI THAT EARNED YOUR DISTRUST. AND HE MET WITH AN ACCIDENT IN THE NIGHT AND DIED!"

THE FATAL ACCIDENT OF HEDJI IN THE DARK OF THE NIGHT EASES THE DISTRUST. ONCE MORE POLOTJANS AND VIKINGS WORK SIDE BY SIDE AND BRING THE SECOND SHIP SAFELY OVER THE PORTAGE.

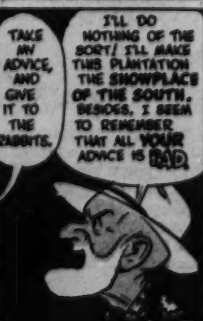

THE WORST OF THE JOURNEY IS OVER. NOW IT IS ALL DOWNSTREAM TO THE OCEAN . . . AND HOME!

NEXT WEEK: Down to the Sea.
